

CALIFORNIA ITEMS.

A riot is reported to have been commenced, but was "nipped in the bud," in San Francisco, on the 29th of October, growing out of some misunderstanding between the "Unfermented Bread Company" and a contractor for the delivery of bread of their make in the city. The peace-breakers were soon taken into custody, numbering some eight or ten persons, and the ferment, produced by the unfermented bread manufacturers and vendors, was thereby, for the time being, allayed.

A company of hunters recently returned to Sacramento from a hunt of some three months duration in the Coast range. They reported having killed, while out, one hundred and fifty-three deer, five grizzlies and vast numbers of smaller animals. They also discovered many quartz leads of gold and silver from which they expect to realize immense fortunes.

The Union announces that a Chinaman has recently made application for the benefits of the insolvent institution of that State to be extended to him. It is said to be the first instance of the kind on record, and that although the Chinese are an imitative and progressive people, it has taken them ten or twelve years, even in the fast State of California, to learn the art and mystery of going through insolvency. The suit was brought by an attorney named Goods, who is supposed to be the applicant's preceptor in teaching him how to pay his debts in way and manner provided for insolvent Christians. It is feared that other Celestials will, on being instructed in the law, follow the applicant's example.

The prizes awarded by the State Agricultural Society, at the late Fair at Sacramento, were attached before they were paid to the successful exhibitors, at the suit of an individual to whom the Society was indebted, but was subsequently released on bond being given for the security of the debt. After which, nothing could be ascertained by those interested as to the whereabouts of the money and other articles to which they were severally entitled. On being requested to enlighten the public in relation to the matter, the Union stated that as to the precise locality of the prizes, they were like the army correspondents in the east "not at liberty to state," but they were authorized to say that "the prizes were safe," and that the secrecy necessary to be maintained would soon be removed and the prizes distributed among those to whom they were awarded.

A little difficulty, which it was believed could not be settled without the institution of a Court Martial, is reported to have occurred during a target excursion of the First Battalion State Militia, under command of Lieut.-Col. McKenzie, of San Francisco, on the 27th ult. The circumstances, as reported, were as follows: "When on the steamer, Col. McKenzie ordered the militia troops to 'trail arms' from 'order arms.' Captain Gorham, never having seen such a way of doing things in the book of tactics, at once ordered the Union Guard to 'shoulder arms.' Colonel McKenzie, seeing the men come to a 'shoulder,' reiterated the order 'order arms,' and then 'trail arms;' and Captain Gorham again ordered them to 'shoulder arms.' The Colonel bit his lip, declared that he would be obeyed, and ordered Captain Gorham under arrest. Afterwards he requested him to resume command of his company, which Captain Gorham declined to do." The occurrence is reported to have been the only thing that transpired during the excursion of an unpleasant nature, and although but a small matter involving the right to be obeyed, whether right or wrong according to the "book of tactics," it might prevent the unyielding Captain from becoming renowned in the annals of war.

Active measures are being taken to enrol and organize the Militia to prevent, if possible, an uprising of the secession element in the State.

The raising of funds for the benefit of the sick and wounded soldiers in the east continues to receive great attention on the Pacific coast, and every town and mining camp in California contributes, more or less, to the Fund, the aggregate of which amounts to thousands of dollars weekly. The manufacture of lint, for future wounds, is also carried on by the Female Lint Societies with much success and large quantities are being produced, boxed up and transmitted to the Sanitary Commission for use when required, but the probabilities are that they will not much be needed till next spring.

The Oregon mill at Eureka, Humboldt county, which originally cost one hundred and twenty thousand dollars, and which has produced large quantities of lumber, annually, since its erection in 1852, was recently burned. The property had been in litigation some five years, and had of late been decided to belong to a man named Duff, who is of the opinion that the burning was not the result of accident.

The Pacific Mail Steamship Company chartered the steamer "Active" for the purpose of attempting the recovery of the treasure lost by the burning of the Golden Gate. The effort proved unsuccessful and the enterprize was abandoned after a thorough search was made for the "dust," without discovering the place of deposit.

Company E. Second Cavalry Cal. Volunteers is reported en route from Tehama via Benicia for Fort Churchill. The company is said to be nominally under arrest for an alleged refusal to obey the orders of the Captain, but the Red Bluff Independent speaks of the uniform sobriety and civility of the rank and file during the two months the company was stationed there.

The books for subscription to the stock of the Central Pacific Railroad Company were opened in Sacramento on the 22d ult., and during the day three thousand, six hundred and forty two shares, as reported, were taken.

The religious papers of San Francisco suggest that the fourth Sunday evening of every month be observed as a season of prayer for the salvation of the country.

FROM OREGON.

The Legislature of Oregon, at its late session, which terminated on the 17th of October, made provision for submitting again to the people of the State the question of a permanent location of the capital. A vote is to be taken in June, 1864, and then the two places receiving the highest number of votes are to be balloted for in 1866, when the decision of the sovereign people on the matter, which has been and yet is one of much interest, shall be final.

During the session a law was enacted requiring all Negroes, Chinamen and Kanakas to pay five dollars per annum for the privilege of residing in the State.

A bill was passed fixing the legal rate of interest in that State at ten per cent, with the right to charge twelve by special contract.

An act was passed to prevent property from being sold under execution for less than two-thirds of its appraised value, and executions cannot be issued oftener than once in six months unless at the expense of the plaintiff.

A correspondent of the Bulletin makes some very facetious allusions to members of the Legislature, and the generals appointed under a new militia law which was passed. The "big head" and "incapacity" seem to be, as elsewhere, no bar to election or appointment to office in that State.

Another correspondent, in referring to the immigration into Oregon this year, does not speak of the accession thus made to the population in very flattering terms. He says:

"The flood of this year's immigration across the plains has come over and through the Cascade Mountains, and is now spreading along the byways and highways of the valleys of Western Oregon. Of course a family that has just crossed the plains is not to be absolutely judged by appearances, but enough is already manifest to tell us that many of them have never been injured by cultivation. A few uncomely squads that I have seen remind me forcibly of the North Carolina emigrant to Ohio and Indiana of 50 years ago. In advance, a father—tall, wiry and bony, clad in torn linen and low quartered shoes, without stockings; behind him—a carryall drawn by a "dea-bitten grey," slimly geared with a rope bridle and a grape-vine harness; in the carryall were the household goods—a rock, a reel and a spinning wheel, scantily covered with a copperas colored counterpane. Behind the carryall hung the family wash-pot, and straight after it mopingly-paced two long-eared hounds, who had licked that pot a thousand times; and a little further back came the patient mother with sixteen small children and two at the breast, eagerly intent, upon a quarter section of the "promised land" beyond the far-famed Ohio, with plenty of sweet roasting ears and crisp persimmons."

The writer was, of course, a cultivated and highly intellectual Hoosier, capable, in his own estimation, of judging by the "sight of the eye." He had a very favorable opinion of the intellectual powers of the members of the Legislature, of which he was evidently one, and of its doings, in addition to those above-mentioned, he says they elected a United States Senator in less than a week, without money, whisky or tumult; enacted a code of civil procedure; a general corporation law; a system for the letting of the public roads; a limited partnership law; made an apportionment of Representatives and Senators, and passed a Revenue law.

Just before the adjournment of the Assembly, there was a meeting of the members and political notables at Salem, who resolved to continue the organization of the Union party "for two or three years longer at least." A resolution is also reported to have been introduced indorsing all of President Lincoln's acts, without reserve. Some say it was passed, and others that it was not in that form.

THE ELECTIONS.—The Empire State, at the election on the 4th, went strongly Democratic, and that party elected their State ticket and a majority of members of Congress and of the State Legislature. In New Jersey, the election resulted overwhelmingly in favor of the Democrats, and also in Illinois. Massachusetts went largely for the Republicans, and Michigan somewhat so. Little Delaware was about equally divided, the preponderancy being on the Democratic side.

GONE FOR THE MINES.—Mr. Mendenhall started northward one day last week, with six wagons loaded with merchandise for the new diggings at Grasshopper Creek or Beaver Head. Mr. E. C. Stickney, the manager of the telegraph office here, left on Saturday to overtake the train, representing, we believe, the interest of Mr. Howard Livingston in that concern. Mr. Stickney has been much respected during his residence in the city, and though we have no great faith in speculation of any kind, we cannot but wish him prosperity. If his health is improved by the trip, he will gain, he says, his highest desideratum.

RETURNED FROM THE MINES.—Mr. J. Woodmanson and Bro. arrived from the Northern Mines on Friday evening last, and their train came in on Saturday. It is understood that they have, by their adventure, made a snug little fortune, and have brought back a large number of mules and wagons, and not a little of the "dust," but so far as known it has not as yet materially affected the money market.

TELEGRAPHIC FEAT.—On Thursday afternoon, the Continental Telegraph had its first instantaneous communication between San Francisco and New York—over 4,000 miles! This is the longest direct telegraph communication yet known.

A LITTLE WINTRY.—The weather has been quite pleasant during the past week in this valley, but somewhat cold, and occasionally, when the wind has blown from the north or north-west, it has strongly reminded those who came in contact with it that winter was not far off.
