STEREOTYPE SERVICE. Charcterized by Yankee Breeziness,

Good Singing, Fervent Prayers And Pointed Addresses.

Amidst all the absurd reports pub-lished in England regarding the Mor-mon people, it is refreshing to encounmon people, it is refreshing to encoun-ter something inspired by a spirit of fairness, as shown in the following write-up of a visit made to the Latter-day Saints' inceting by a reporter of the Batley News (England): "In the lodge-room of the Temper-eres hall. Batley, there assemble, such

"In the longer com of the Temper-nee hall, Batley, there assemble each funday a body of worshippers little known to the general public of Batley. They are of the denomination known as the Latter-day Saints, or are better as the Latter-day Saints, or are better recognized as the Mormons, a creed that is growing powerful in the United States and Canada, and also in Europe, where some two thousand missionaries are in the field. Sunday was marked as a district meeting, and this took place in the Batley Town hall, where two sessions were held, and those were attended by members of the Church, and a considerable number of friends from all over the Heavy Woollen dis-trict.

trict. 'One hears occasionally about these folk being 'peculiar people,' so I took the opportunity of the meetings to as-certain for myself what were their tecertain for myself what were their te-nets, and was surprised to find that they are as devout Christians as any I have found in my journeyings around the local churches. In fact, the ser-vices were as simple and as full of re-ligion and religious thought as one could find anywhere, and instead of finding the Latter-day Saints 'peculiar people' I discovered that they were at-rentive and devout synchippers.

tentivo and devout worshippers. "The services were different from the siereotype order one finds in all desupersory of the second ers, and pointed addresses, in which the principles and tenets of that Church were explicitly explained. The Church possesses no paid ministers, and, like the Society of Friends, between whose style of service and that of the Latter-der Sanita there is a close resemblance. day Saints, there is a close resemblance they depend upon their own members as preachers.

"The services on Sunday were conducted by four Elders-Messrs. Rock-wood (the president of the Leeds conwood (the president of the Leeds con-ference), Young, Clark, and Hinckley, the latter two of whom are located in the Batley district. Elder Clark pre-sided, and in the afternoon Elder Young, who is a great-grandson of Brigham Young, of Salt Lake, gave an interesting address on the history of the Church. The theme of polygamy was touched upon, and it was denied with all the earnestness the mission-ary could command that such was now with all the earnestness the mission-ary could command that such was now practised. The history of the Book of Mormon, which was translated from the golden tablets, seen by about twelve eye-witnesses, by Joseph Smith, the Latter-day Saints' prophet, was fully explained. They claimed to be Chris-tians in the fullest sense of the term. Elder Hinckley also spoke, and em-phasized the truths to which the Church adheres. PRESERVING FENCE lovernment Bulletin Tells How Sof

Woods May be Made Endurable By Simple Process.

Every farmer is familiar with the rotting of his fence posts at the surface of the ground. The labor of reface of the ground. The labor of re-placing them and how to secure new and durable posts are sources of con-stant annoyance and expense. Even the more durable woods, such as chestnut, white oak and cedar, decay in a few years. It is true that there are a few kinds of wood in the United States, such as locust and osage-orange, which give much longer sevice. But their supply, never very large, is rapid-ly exhausted, and the farmer must now look to some other source for his posts. Perhaps directly on his farm there may be a patch of woods which includes such trees as black oak, beech, maple or pine, and cotton-woods and willows may grow along the banks of his streams. These are trees which heretofore have been thought of little or no use for posts, be-cause of the rapidity with which they are attacked by decay. In their na-toral condition, they will rot in two or three years—too soon to pay for the labor of setting them. The forest service in its study of prolonging the life of fence posts has-found a cheap and simple method of meserving them in a sound condition for an in-definite time, even though they are the poorest and naturally least dur-able woods. Decay is not a simple process like the crumbling of stone or the ruisting placing them and how to secure new the poorest and naturally least dur-able woods. Decay is not a simple process like the crumbling of stone or the rusting of iron. It is caused by low forms of plant life which thoroughly premeate the wood, discolor it and cause it to become disconnected and "rotten." To preserve the timber in a thoroughly sound condition, it is only necessary to render the wood unfit for the growth of these organisms. This is done by injecting into it substances poisonous to plant life. One of the most widely used preser-vatives is creosote, one of the by-pro-poisonous to plant life. One of the most widely used preser-vatives is creosole, one of the by-pro-ducts of coal tar. When it is injected into the wood, decay will be retarded indefinitely and an old-field pine or a cottonwood fence post when properly treated will easily give a life of 20 years or longer. Such preservative treatment costs about 10 cents per post. The creosole can be applied by painting, the wood with a brush or dipping it into the liquid, but much better results will be obtained if it is actually injected into the wood instead of merely coating the outside. If the "brush" method, or painting, is used the creosole should be applied at a temperature of about 180 degrees F. Two coats should be given at least 24 hours apart. If the posts are dipped directly into the preservative, the creosole should be heated to about the same temperature. The best re-suits of all can be obtained by first heating the posts in a bath of hot creosole and then either transferring them quickly to a bath of creosole at a lower temperature, or else shutting off the heat and allowing the posts to remain in the oil as it cools. By such a method the sapwood will become thoroughly permeated with the creo-sole. Full details and specific directions ote

It was not a written sermon, buf a thrilling extempore narrative that was listened, to with interest, although it lasted eighty minutes. President Rockwood dealt with the work of the missionaries chiefly. A strong point was that they labored for love and not for gain, There were no paid officers in the Church, and most of the missionaries were men and most of the missionaries were men and women who, when called upon to go out into the mission field surrendered in many cases good business to do so They kept themselves whilst in the mis-sion field, personally bore the cost of the halls wherein they worshipped, and and for all the literature they distrib-uted. Theirs was a mission of love, and he had known many who at the end of their missionary work had to recommence life at the foot of the ladder, as they had sacrificed all in or-der to obey the Church's call. "In an interesting way he touched upon the stories that had been circulated by the enemies of the Church about Salt Lake City. These people seemtd to have forgotten that Salt Lake City was a most cosmopolitan town, in which most denominations to be found in the United States had their churches and representatives. The Mormons on-ly formed a percentage of the popula-tion, and if it were true they led the life their enemies said they did, the oth-er churches would be ready to expose it. They had never done so. amongst the visitors was the fact that although the missionaries had to pay for the cost of the hall and literature, no collections were taken, and from in-quiries I gathered this was their usual custom. The upkeep of the Church is met by the levying of a voluntary tithe, each member contributing the Bibliéal one-tenth of his or her income. This is not only sufficient to maintain the tem-ple and other Church buildings in Salt Lake and other towns in America and elsewhere, but also to support any of their members who may have fallen

Theater-There was a surprisingly good turnout at the Theater last evening, in view of the weather conditions, though the greater part of the attendance was in the popular priced regions. The attraction was the widely advertised comedy "Polly of the Cir-cus," and it was given the same hearty reception here that it has been accord-ed for two years past in New York and other eastern citles. It is a light, clean and entertaining little play, orig-inal in theme and treatment and full of a movial and wholesdme atmosphere most refreshing to the appetite of the average jaded theater goer. The principal part is played by Miss Ida St. Leon, a clever little girl hardly more than a child, who not only acted in most sympathetic style, but who showed her circus antecedents by her ability to walk the tight rope and mount a steed in an actual arena. The cast throughout was capable and in some cases excellent, the Mandy of Kate Jepson, the Miss Forkins of May McKay, and the Deacon Strong of Mr. Young, being specially good. Mr. Rider, the pastor, showed him-self a good reader, but with too much tions, though the greater part of the

The temperature of the house was kept at a very comfortable degree by Manager Pypers' system of electric fans, and no doubt the remaining night's performances, and tomorrow's matinee, will be well attended.

A woman who has used Postum since it came upon the market knows from experience the wisdom of using Pos-tum in place of coffee if one values health and a clear brain. She says: "At the time Postum was first put on the market I was suffering from nervous dyspepsia, and my physician had repeatedly told me not to use tea or coffee. Finally I decided to take his advice and try Postum. I got a package and had it carefully prepared finding it delicious to the taste. So I continued its use and very soon its beneficial effects convinced me of its value, for I got well of my nervous-
