DROWNED IN JORDAN RIVER.

John Bell of the Third Ward finds a Valley grave. His body recovered.

Shortly before the sun went down yesterday night John Bell, a young man who lived with his widowed mother on South State street, in the Third Ward of this city, was drowned in the Jordan river near Cannon's farm while swimming with a number of young companions. He sank suddenly and swiftly. Every effort was made to recover his body but night had set in and he could not be found until a late hour and recovered again today and quickly and carefully carried out until between 11 and 1 o'clock, when the body was drawn up the surface and deposited in the hands of Andrew Smith, Jr.

The deceased was in his nineteenth year and one of the most exemplary young men in the city. His body was held in the highest esteem.

His sorrowing mother, brother and sisters have the sympathy of many friends. Funeral services will take place Saturday morning at 10 o'clock a.m. in the Third Ward meeting house on Sunday, at 10 o'clock a.m.

The Persian Flu.

In Persia the first time a man is caught in the act of stealing no punishment is exacted on the spot but the thief is declared that that will be his offense. If he forgets this and steals again he is liable to the same punishment of his right hand. If he is still avaricious, the third and fourth hand is decapitated.
