Death Claims Well Known Pioneer Woman-Funeral Tomorrow.

Mrs. Harriet A. Hardy, widow of t he late Bishop Leonard W. Hardy, died yesterday at her home, 330 north Third West street, this city, of pneumonia, in her seventy-seventh year. "Aunt Hattle," as she was familiarly called, was born in Lunenburg, Mass., March 9, 1828, and joined the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints when a young girl, emigrating to Utah in 1850 with her parents. They crossed the plains in the company presided over by the late President Wilford Woodruff, enduring with heroic fortitude all the hardships incident to such a journey. She was a faithful Latter-day Saint and passed away in the full hope of a glorious resurrection. Two sisters and one brother survive her.

The members present also took an important step towards aiding their alma mater and bringing their organization into closer connection with the school.

The guests were received in President Paul's office, the hallway and the adjoining rooms, going into the banquet room at 9 o'clock. The president of the association-John H. Evansof the association—John H. Evans—made a brief explanation of the condition of the association, referring to its history during the past few years; and also introduced the toastmaster, Prof. B. The toasts wer partly humorous, partly serious, but all couched in choice and simple language. Elizabeth Cannon, (normal '04) toasted the graduating class. She referred very feelingly to the classes in theology which the graduates had taken during their four years in the school. Prof. John M. Mills responded to the toast, "The Old Guards," in a humorous vein, in which he ransacked history for the purpose of getting information about "old guards," Lutie Grant Cannon spoke to "Meat and Drink." This was in a serious mood, and compared the spiritual light which comes to men to food which sustains the body. Kate Thomas told the alumni what would do "If she were a ma." toast fairly sparkled with wit and humor, and was an exceedingly

under color of "Our Alma

the alumni with the institution, and indicated the lines of influence that may be exerted over the policy and may be exerted over the policy and course of the school by its graduates. The toastmaster was in his happiest mood and kept things lively during the whole evening by his sallies of wit and The event of the evening, however,
