"I may have rheumatism,"replied the old man, "but I haven't got dyspepsia. I don't growl and snap at everybody. You have been growing worse for the last ten years. If you didn't have me to pick at, I believe you'd die."

"I won't walk with a man that acts like a rhinoceros." "How does the rhinoceros act?" asked the old man, thinking that he would catch her on natural history. "Acts like a fool, that's how he acts," and Mrs. Wickle walked rapidly away, leaving the old man several paces behind. He finally caught up, just as a young man came walking along.
