He told the hearers that they represented 7,000,000 workingmen, who expected legislation from them which would help place the workingman where he belonged-in the van of civilization. President Jackson accepted the welcome and expressed his agreeable surprise at finding so attractive a city after traveling through the deserts. He expected a pleasant visit in addition to making the occasion profitable from a business stand-

HEARTY RESPONSE.

Delegate J. L. Cook of San Francisco said the delegates had been welcomed to one of the most attractive cities in the world a gerden that the gods might envy. He felt proud to extend in behalf of the coast electrical works also a beauty welcome. The also a hearty welcome. The time was coming he hoped when the north pole with the Amerithe can flag on it will mark the northern boundary of the United States. The speaker referred to the develop-ment of the arid west into the higher forms of eivilization, and thought the unmarried contingent of the conven-tion would meet their Waterloo and Would take at least one wife from Utah. (Laughter.) Mr. Cook said he had met his matrimonial fate in Calihad met his matrimonial fait in Cal-fornia and is now the proud father of twins. No danger of race suicide in Utah. "In a few years," he said, "we shall ask you to come further west to California which can sustain in peace and plenty 30,000,000 of people. We be-lieve our craft has a grand future be-fore it."

IMPORTANT CONVENTION.

Grand Secy. H. W. Sherman of Washington, D. C., was next introduc-ed. He said this would prove to be the most important convention ever held by the workers, as it meant a grand advance of the craft, and the constitution to be formed would mark a grant stending stone forward "This a great stepping stone forward. "This organization is too great now," he said, "for any one man or set of men to carry in their hand, and it rests for you to be frame a constitution that no local can obey any but the mandates of this convention. The labor movement to day is a sacred thing The law The laws to be enacted mean the betterment of the craft. 'Our organization today numbers close onto 50,000 men, a phe-nomenal growth; and it remains for us to enact such legislation that we will be recognized as foremost in the walks of labor. But remember to keep your eye on that piece of pipe known as the conduit! as the gas fitter is after it to take it away from those to whom it properly belongs,

CANADA AND ONE FLAG.

CANADA AND ONE FLAG.
H. J. Hurd, vice president from Can-ade, was proud to see in the room the flag of each nation represented by dele-gates present, and believed that in time but one flag eventually would repre-sent the Anglo-Saxon race. (Ap-plause.) Mr. Hurd told several funny stories illustrating the lack of sense ex-hibited by some men in opposing every, thing suggestive of trades unionism, and looked for the time when all elec-trical workers would be united all over the world. the world.

LOCAL WORKERS GLAD.

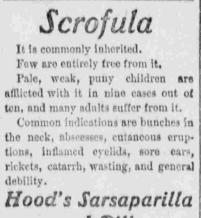

B. T. Elton of the Utah Federation of Labor said the federation was here to stay, and he held that the Sait Lake electrical workers were glad to belong to the federation. "There are," he said, to the federation. "There are," he said, "certain influences in this state which make trades unionism difficult. But we will either hold our own or go down with colors flying." Mr. Elton said he was told in the last Legislature that "We don't propose to have trades unions in this state because wherever they exist there is trouble." However, the speaker detailed how the federa-tion secured the enactment of the council, and called attention to the two trades union members of the Legislature, who refused to vote for A. W. McCune for the United States senate because of his opposition to organized labor." (Prolonged applause.) This ended the speaking. The pre-sentation of credentials was now called for and the chair then thenked Messew

AFTER A GAS STOVE.

Dr. Condon Comes Down from Ogden to Buy One and Then Takes Water.

Dr. A. S. Condon, the Republican war horse of Ogden, whose genial visage has not been seen much of in Sait Lake since the adjournment of the Legislature, was met at the Cullen this morn-ing. He said he had come down to buy I gas stove in order that he might survive the present cold spell. He ad-mitted that there was plenty of gas in Ogden, but that much of it was not of a character that could be utilized or heating purposes.

The doctor is enthusiastic over the approaching Irelation congress and boldly made the assertion that there would be more convertises garacted in Ogden this week than had ever been seen together at any point west of the Missouri river, San Francisco not exepted
