—It costs us more to be miserable than would make us perfectly happy. How cheap and easy is the service of virtue, and how dear do we pay for our vices!

—A person asked Mr. Patrick Maguire if he knew Mr. Tim Duffy. "Know him," said Pat, "why he's a very near relation of mine. He once proposed to marry my sister!"

—"You're a wit and a scholar," said Tom to Dick. "I can't say the same thing," said Dick, "about you." "You might," said Tom, "were you as reckless as I am, and as careless of saying the thing that is true."

—"The little darling! he didn't strike Mrs. Smith's boy a purpose, did he? It was a mere accident, wasn't it, dear?" "Yes, ma, to be sure it was; and if he don't behave himself, I'll crack him again."

—After hypocrites, the greatest dupes the devil has are those who exhaust an anxious existence in the disappointments and vexations of business, and live miserably and meanly, only to die magnificently and rich.

—"How heavily you walk!" exclaimed a watchful spouse on hearing her husband tumble up stairs late at night. "Well, my dear," was the gruff response, "if you can get a barrel of whisky up stairs with any less noise, I should like to see you do it."

—A writer says that "fathers, remembering their own boyhood, should make some little allowance for their children." But the trouble is that many of our children, after spending their "allowance," go in debt for double the amount.

—"John, I saw your cousin Isaac a few weeks ago, and he had just received a fall, which cut a most horrible gash in his arm." "Ah, poor fellow, what did he fall on?" "Well, really, I forget now; but it rather strikes me he fell on Tuesday morning."

—"What sort of a sermon do you like?" said Dr. Rush to Robert Morris, one day. "I like, sir," replied Mr. Morris, "that kind of preaching which drives a man into the corner of his pew and makes him think the devil is after him."

—"Time isn't money!" exclaimed an irate idler, "and it's all humbug to say it is!" "Well," said the landlord of the house in which the declaration was made, "I don't pretend to know the philosophy of such things, but I do know that you spend a deal more time than money here!"

—A young lady reprimanded her shoemaker for not following her directions respecting a pair of shoes she had ordered, and, among others, insisted that they were not fellows. Crispin replied that he purposely made them so, in order to oblige her, well knowing the modesty of her disposition, and that she was not fond of fellows.

—An artist taking the portrait of a lady, perceived that when he was working at her mouth she was trying to render it smaller by contracting her lips. "Do not trouble yourself so much, madam," exclaimed the painter. "If you please, I will draw your face without any mouth at all."

—A man advertised lately to forward, on receipt of postage stamps, "sound practical advice, that would be applicable at any time and to all persons and conditions of life." On receipt of the stamps, he sent his victim the following:—"Never give a boy a penny to watch your shadow while you climb a tree to look into the middle of next week."

—In the examination of an Irish case for assault and battery, counsel, on cross-examining the witness, asked him what they had had at the first place they stopped at? He answered, "Four glasses of ale." "What next?" "Two glasses of wine." "What next?" "One glass of brandy." "What next?" "A fight, of course."

—A swell clerk from London was spending an evening in a country inn, full of company, and feeling secure in the possession of most money, made the following offer:—"I will drop money into a hat with any man in the room. The man who holds out the longest to have the whole, and treat the company." "I'll do it," said a farmer. The swell dropped in half a sovereign. The countryman followed with a sixpence. "Go on," said the swell. "I won't," said the farmer; "take the whole and treat the company."
