

UTAH WEATHER AND CROPS.

Cloudy Week With Frequent Thunderstorms—Such Hay and Grains Harvested.

WEATHER CROP BULLETIN.

During the week ending July 23rd the weather was more or less cloudy with frequent thunder showers which were evenly distributed over the state, being heavier in the central, eastern and southern sections. The wheat crop during the past two weeks has passed a great deal of the hay crop in all sections where it was not yet lying in the field. Heavy grain has been sown largely in many locations, nothing difficult to harvest. Otherwise the conditions have been becoming to the growing crops favorable and regular. While the new sown areas are still green crops will be in the general average as they are said to be in a promising condition and growing slowly. The fruit crop continues to be unusually light and of a poor quality.

Remarks of Correspondents.

Huron—Linen is not worth harvesting. Wednesday night a downpour with 1.50 of rain caused much damage to bridges and roads by the floods. Not much time has yet cut off; farmers are waiting for better weather, grain and hay now.

Grindon—Heavy rain on the 21st and 22d did much damage to hay; the first crop is harvested but half-cut. Mormon City—Linen about all varieties looking fine; rain all through the week.

Moren—The first three days of week cloudy and warm; the last four days cloudy with rain. Corn and oats are up to 6 inches. Very heavy showers at intervals laying the heavy grain flat on the ground, which will cause rust and prevent it from being marketable. A great deal of lichen now and will continue. River and ditch banks washed away.

Newton—Last week the weather has been pretty steady; on the 24th and 25th, thunder but no rain. Oats are doing well; good in places there is still some standing on dry ground.

Coldwater—Very bad weather; no damage except to cut beans; thunder and lightning nearly every day. Fine weather for wheat and oats.

Pleasant Grove—Heavy showers and very green, which will continue to be so for some time. Some are cutting their grain and hay; corn and potatoes are doing well.

Spring City—Another week of cloudy weather. A great deal of rain left. Most grain is headed out; corn ears are very large; irrigation rigs are beginning to cut ripe.

Peyton—Considerable rain fall during past week, doing great damage to heavy grain. Beans, corn and potatoes doing well.

Lake Shores—Commencement to cut oats and barley. Heavy grain is down with lots raised; water is plentiful. Vegetables going well.

Cache Junction—The last week very cloudy and windy; thunderstorms very light; weather on night of 24th and 25th.

Kayville—The past week very warm, alternating with showers which have spoiled considerable of the crop. Corn, interesting to fall than to stand.

Harrison—Good week for growing crops. Heavy rains on 23d spoiled a great deal of hay and judged heavy damage to grain. Corn and oats are doing well.

Logan—The past week has been cloudy with showers in the mountains and clouds in the valley. Much hay spoiled, not good for general growth.

Kane—Fine weather; wheat, oats and corn are up to 6 inches. Some are harvested now and are in good running order again. The range will be good this fall.

Utah—The berry season is about over, although but little harvested. The weather will be very short and of a poor quality. Second crop of beans ready to eat; potatoes almost a failure. A heavy rain on the 21st and an immense load to dry farms and fields. Irrigation rigs are likely to be another crop of heavy grain.

Dawsonville—The first of the week was warm and sunny. A nice shower on the 23d and again on the 25th. The weather is cooler now. The rain continues to fall, and other growing crops, but it is interfering with the short berries.

Brighton City—All kinds of weather during the week; 22nd electric storm with heavy precipitation and rain. 23d and 24th rain and wind blowing hard. 25th a wind, vivid lightning. Last half of week cloudy and threatening rain, unseasonal for July.

Naupaka—Cloudy days and nights with a striking east wind; when not blowing it is very hot. The weather is very dry, the first cutting of turnips damaged; potatoes and corn looking fair; looking at a patch of corn this morning I noticed from three to seven ears to each stem; trees in the orchard look dead, fruit of fruit gardens truck doing well.

Monroe—A slight absence of the middle of the week and heavy showers Sunday with indications of more. All cut prior to recent rains, and 25th rain and wind blowing hard. 26th warm. It is doubtful if recent rains are doing any good except改善 grain prospects improving.

Joseph—The 24th has had a cool, cloudy and wet day; very much damaged, also heavy grass folded from the heavy rain. Turnips, radishes, sugar beets, etc., doing fair; water supplies ruined for this season, plenty of it available for irrigation.

Logan—Another week of rain and thunderstorms. The wet for farm work second crop of beans ready to eat.

Logan—A short, rainy week, temperatures and rainfall very much damaged, also heavy grass folded from the heavy rain. Turnips, radishes, sugar beets, etc., doing fair; water supplies ruined for this season, plenty of it available for irrigation.

Logan—The weather was very dry during the first week of July, but since then it has been wet and heavy rains; no great damage has been done by the rains but an immense amount of sand.

St. George—Linen cut and lying in the fields as well as freshly made hay, not cured, especially when they rains last week and this. Potatoes ranges in yield greatly because of the soil and the amount of rainfall.

Torrey—A week of unpredictable weather. Wind, clouds and thunder, too little rain. Weather is very bad and every man's house is busy. Farm will be empty in some districts there is no time to be seen, but a few patches. Land and houses as it summer. J. H. Morris, Editor, Deseret Evening News.

HALF MOON CITY, UTAH.

OGDEN.

OGDEN, UTAH.—JULY 29, 1896.

Junction Jars.

Alvin Hammon, who was injured yesterday by being dragged down the embankment while working at the mouth of Ogden, was admitted into the hospital yesterday evening at 9 o'clock. The patient is James F. Chapman, a son of Charles Chapman, a pioneer at Ogden, now only son of a member of the Mormon Battalion. He was a resident of Harrison and was slightly wounded.

Funeral services will be held at Friday morning at 10 o'clock, at the Harrison Tabernacle.

A young, well-kept son of Mr. Chapman, a son of Charles Chapman, a son of James F. Chapman and James H. Chapman are involved in him.

The trial court today adjourned until Friday morning to hear testimony in the case of James F. Chapman, a son of James H. Chapman and James H. Chapman are involved in him.

The internal orders had the same result as the external ones, but the trial court adjourned until Friday morning to hear testimony in the case of James H. Chapman and James H. Chapman are involved in him.

The Union will be issued as a daily newspaper next Monday. The weekly edition will also continue to be issued.

President Joseph F. Smith visited Doctor Hardy at the asylum Tuesday, and returned home yesterday morning.

Alfred James of Milwaukee registered at the Hotel Roberts last evening.

B. L. Paradise of Salt Lake was a Photo Visitor yesterday.

AN AMUSING DEBATE.

The Subject Was Science Enough, But the Situation Was Critical.

When the old days of science began, the subject of science was critical. The world was full of wonder and admiration for science, and the man of science was the object of admiration. But now, science is not so much admired as it used to be, and the man of science is not so much admired as he used to be.

"How is that?" asked "No."

"No," said Mr. Pitt. "When I have the great, I cannot bear it."

The duke, wrapped in his cloak, took a seat by the visitor's beside, and began talking, but he found himself unable to continue the conversation.

"I allow no one," he exclaimed suddenly, and without taking his cloak, he turned himself in the office and said continued the conversation. He was strongly opposed to visiting the door to the Novembar gates. Mr. Pitt was also strongly opposed to it, but he had already entered the room where he could not get out, shouting all over with exasperation.

"How is that?" asked "No."

"No," said Mr. Pitt. "When I have the great, I cannot bear it."

The duke, wrapped in his cloak, took a seat by the visitor's beside, and began talking, but he found himself unable to continue the conversation.

"I allow no one," he exclaimed suddenly, and without taking his cloak, he turned himself in the office and said continued the conversation. He was strongly opposed to visiting the door to the Novembar gates. Mr. Pitt was also strongly opposed to it, but he had already entered the room where he could not get out, shouting all over with exasperation.

"How is that?" asked "No."

"No," said Mr. Pitt. "When I have the great, I cannot bear it."

The duke, wrapped in his cloak, took a seat by the visitor's beside, and began talking, but he found himself unable to continue the conversation.

"I allow no one," he exclaimed suddenly, and without taking his cloak, he turned himself in the office and said continued the conversation. He was strongly opposed to visiting the door to the Novembar gates. Mr. Pitt was also strongly opposed to it, but he had already entered the room where he could not get out, shouting all over with exasperation.

"How is that?" asked "No."

"No," said Mr. Pitt. "When I have the great, I cannot bear it."

The duke, wrapped in his cloak, took a seat by the visitor's beside, and began talking, but he found himself unable to continue the conversation.

"I allow no one," he exclaimed suddenly, and without taking his cloak, he turned himself in the office and said continued the conversation. He was strongly opposed to visiting the door to the Novembar gates. Mr. Pitt was also strongly opposed to it, but he had already entered the room where he could not get out, shouting all over with exasperation.

"How is that?" asked "No."

"No," said Mr. Pitt. "When I have the great, I cannot bear it."

The duke, wrapped in his cloak, took a seat by the visitor's beside, and began talking, but he found himself unable to continue the conversation.

"I allow no one," he exclaimed suddenly, and without taking his cloak, he turned himself in the office and said continued the conversation. He was strongly opposed to visiting the door to the Novembar gates. Mr. Pitt was also strongly opposed to it, but he had already entered the room where he could not get out, shouting all over with exasperation.

"How is that?" asked "No."

"No," said Mr. Pitt. "When I have the great, I cannot bear it."

The duke, wrapped in his cloak, took a seat by the visitor's beside, and began talking, but he found himself unable to continue the conversation.

"I allow no one," he exclaimed suddenly, and without taking his cloak, he turned himself in the office and said continued the conversation. He was strongly opposed to visiting the door to the Novembar gates. Mr. Pitt was also strongly opposed to it, but he had already entered the room where he could not get out, shouting all over with exasperation.

"How is that?" asked "No."

"No," said Mr. Pitt. "When I have the great, I cannot bear it."

The duke, wrapped in his cloak, took a seat by the visitor's beside, and began talking, but he found himself unable to continue the conversation.

"I allow no one," he exclaimed suddenly, and without taking his cloak, he turned himself in the office and said continued the conversation. He was strongly opposed to visiting the door to the Novembar gates. Mr. Pitt was also strongly opposed to it, but he had already entered the room where he could not get out, shouting all over with exasperation.

"How is that?" asked "No."

"No," said Mr. Pitt. "When I have the great, I cannot bear it."

The duke, wrapped in his cloak, took a seat by the visitor's beside, and began talking, but he found himself unable to continue the conversation.

"I allow no one," he exclaimed suddenly, and without taking his cloak, he turned himself in the office and said continued the conversation. He was strongly opposed to visiting the door to the Novembar gates. Mr. Pitt was also strongly opposed to it, but he had already entered the room where he could not get out, shouting all over with exasperation.

"How is that?" asked "No."

"No," said Mr. Pitt. "When I have the great, I cannot bear it."

The duke, wrapped in his cloak, took a seat by the visitor's beside, and began talking, but he found himself unable to continue the conversation.

"I allow no one," he exclaimed suddenly, and without taking his cloak, he turned himself in the office and said continued the conversation. He was strongly opposed to visiting the door to the Novembar gates. Mr. Pitt was also strongly opposed to it, but he had already entered the room where he could not get out, shouting all over with exasperation.

"How is that?" asked "No."

"No," said Mr. Pitt. "When I have the great, I cannot bear it."

The duke, wrapped in his cloak, took a seat by the visitor's beside, and began talking, but he found himself unable to continue the conversation.

"I allow no one," he exclaimed suddenly, and without taking his cloak, he turned himself in the office and said continued the conversation. He was strongly opposed to visiting the door to the Novembar gates. Mr. Pitt was also strongly opposed to it, but he had already entered the room where he could not get out, shouting all over with exasperation.

"How is that?" asked "No."

"No," said Mr. Pitt. "When I have the great, I cannot bear it."

The duke, wrapped in his cloak, took a seat by the visitor's beside, and began talking, but he found himself unable to continue the conversation.

"I allow no one," he exclaimed suddenly, and without taking his cloak, he turned himself in the office and said continued the conversation. He was strongly opposed to visiting the door to the Novembar gates. Mr. Pitt was also strongly opposed to it, but he had already entered the room where he could not get out, shouting all over with exasperation.

"How is that?" asked "No."

"No," said Mr. Pitt. "When I have the great, I cannot bear it."

The duke, wrapped in his cloak, took a seat by the visitor's beside, and began talking, but he found himself unable to continue the conversation.

"I allow no one," he exclaimed suddenly, and without taking his cloak, he turned himself in the office and said continued the conversation. He was strongly opposed to visiting the door to the Novembar gates. Mr. Pitt was also strongly opposed to it, but he had already entered the room where he could not get out, shouting all over with exasperation.

"How is that?" asked "No."

"No," said Mr. Pitt. "When I have the great, I cannot bear it."

The duke, wrapped in his cloak, took a seat by the visitor's beside, and began talking, but he found himself unable to continue the conversation.

"I allow no one," he exclaimed suddenly, and without taking his cloak, he turned himself in the office and said continued the conversation. He was strongly opposed to visiting the door to the Novembar gates. Mr. Pitt was also strongly opposed to it, but he had already entered the room where he could not get out, shouting all over with exasperation.

"How is that?" asked "No."

"No," said Mr. Pitt. "When I have the great, I cannot bear it."

The duke, wrapped in his cloak, took a seat by the visitor's beside, and began talking, but he found himself unable to continue the conversation.

"I allow no one," he exclaimed suddenly, and without taking his cloak, he turned himself in the office and said continued the conversation. He was strongly opposed to visiting the door to the Novembar gates. Mr. Pitt was also strongly opposed to it, but he had already entered the room where he could not get out, shouting all over with exasperation.

"How is that?" asked "No."

"No," said Mr. Pitt. "When I have the great, I cannot bear it."

The duke, wrapped in his cloak, took a seat by the visitor's beside, and began talking, but he found himself unable to continue the conversation.

"I allow no one," he exclaimed suddenly, and without taking his cloak, he turned himself in the office and said continued the conversation. He was strongly opposed to visiting the door to the Novembar gates. Mr. Pitt was also strongly opposed to it, but he had already entered the room where he could not get out, shouting all over with exasperation.

"How is that?" asked "No."

"No," said Mr. Pitt. "When I have the great, I cannot bear it."

The duke, wrapped in his cloak, took a seat by the visitor's beside, and began talking, but he found himself unable to continue the conversation.

"I allow no one," he exclaimed suddenly, and without taking his cloak, he turned himself in the office and said continued the conversation. He was strongly opposed to visiting the door to the Novembar gates. Mr. Pitt was also strongly opposed to it, but he had already entered the room where he could not get out, shouting all over with exasperation.

"How is that?" asked "No."

"No," said Mr. Pitt. "When I have the great, I cannot bear it."

The duke, wrapped in his cloak, took a seat by the visitor's beside, and began talking, but he found himself unable to continue the conversation.

"I allow no one," he exclaimed suddenly, and without taking his cloak, he turned himself in the office and said continued the conversation. He was strongly opposed to visiting the door to the Novembar gates. Mr. Pitt was also strongly opposed to it, but he had already entered the room where he could not get out, shouting all over with exasperation.

"How is that?" asked "No."

"No," said Mr. Pitt. "When I have the great, I cannot bear it."

The duke, wrapped in his cloak, took a seat by the visitor's beside, and began talking, but he found himself unable to continue the conversation.

"I allow no one," he exclaimed suddenly, and without taking his cloak, he turned himself in the office and said continued the conversation. He was strongly opposed to visiting the door to the Novembar gates. Mr. Pitt was also strongly opposed to it, but he had already entered the room where he could not get out, shouting all over with exasperation.

"How is that?" asked "No."

"No," said Mr. Pitt. "When I have the great, I cannot bear it."

The duke, wrapped in his cloak, took a seat by the visitor's beside, and began talking, but he found himself unable to continue the conversation.

"I allow no one," he exclaimed suddenly, and without taking his cloak, he turned himself in the office and said continued the conversation. He was strongly opposed to visiting the door to the Novembar gates. Mr. Pitt was also strongly opposed to it, but he had already entered the room where he could not get out, shouting all over with exasperation.

"How is that?" asked "No."

"No," said Mr. Pitt. "When I have the great, I cannot bear it."

The duke, wrapped in his cloak, took a seat by the visitor's beside, and began talking, but he found himself unable to continue the conversation.

"I allow no one," he exclaimed suddenly, and without taking his cloak, he turned himself in the office and said continued the conversation. He was strongly opposed to visiting the door to the Novembar gates. Mr. Pitt was also strongly opposed to it, but he had already entered the room where he could not get out, shouting all over with exasperation.

"How is that?" asked "No."

"No," said Mr. Pitt. "When I have the great, I cannot bear it."

The duke, wrapped in his cloak, took a seat by the visitor's beside, and began talking, but he found himself unable to continue the conversation.

"I allow no one," he exclaimed suddenly, and without taking his cloak, he turned himself in the office and said continued the conversation. He was strongly opposed to visiting the door to the Novembar gates. Mr. Pitt was also strongly opposed to it, but he had already entered the room where he could not get out, shouting all over with exasperation.

"How is that?" asked "No."

"No," said Mr. Pitt. "When I have the great, I cannot bear it."

The duke, wrapped in his cloak, took a seat by the visitor's beside, and began talking, but he found himself unable to continue the conversation.

"I allow no one," he exclaimed suddenly, and without taking his cloak, he turned himself in the office and said continued the conversation. He was strongly opposed to visiting the door to the Novembar gates. Mr. Pitt was also strongly opposed to it, but he had already entered the room where he could not get out, shouting all over with exasperation.

"How is that?" asked "No."

"No," said Mr. Pitt. "When I have the great, I cannot bear it."

The duke, wrapped in his cloak, took a seat by the visitor's beside, and began talking, but he found himself unable to continue the conversation.

"I allow no one," he exclaimed suddenly, and without taking his cloak, he turned himself in the office and said continued the conversation. He was strongly opposed to visiting the door to the Novembar gates. Mr. Pitt was also strongly opposed to it, but he had already entered the room where he could not get out, shouting all over with exasperation.

"How is that?" asked "No."

"No," said Mr. Pitt. "When I have the great, I cannot bear it."

The duke, wrapped in his cloak, took a seat by the visitor's beside, and began talking, but he found himself unable to continue the conversation.

"I allow no one," he exclaimed suddenly, and without taking his cloak, he turned himself in the office and said continued the conversation. He was strongly opposed to visiting the door to the Novembar gates. Mr. Pitt was also strongly opposed to it, but he had already entered the room where he could not get out, shouting all over with exasperation.

"How is that?" asked "No."