greater defeats cannot prevent Russia from dragging on the struggle. Another winter campaign can still be fought in a climate more rigorous than experienced during the last campaign. Japan must recognize now that she has reached her zenith and that it is more necessary for her than for us to end the struggle. It is possible that she will offer comparatively moderate terms, bearing in mind that Russia's interests cannot be completely sacrificed. An indemnity is out of the question."

The Sviet, which is as intransigant as ever declares there is little hope that the Japanese terms will be acceptable. The paper adds:

"Europe and America seek to humiliate Russia, but Russia will bear the disgrace with a light heart."

AMUSEMENTS.

The Salt Palace theater is to be opened again next Monday night and is today in the hands of cleaners and decorators who will give it a thorough overhauling this week.

The attraction which opens the house is the Williams Juvenile Opera company of Chicago, 32 strong, made up entirely of children ranging from four to twelve years of age. They open in a lively musical show, entitled "The Rajah of Pazala." The company comes highly recommended, is carefully chaperoned and will no doubt make a charming summer show for children as well as grown people. On race nights the curtain will not rise until the last event is over.

VISITORS WERE GREATLY PLEASED

Concert at the Tabernacle Last Night Filled Them With Delight and Wonderment.

SPLENDID MUSICAL PROGRAM.

Speech of Welcome Delivered by Hon. John Henry Smith—Building Beautifully Decorated.

To what beautiful and patriotic effects a great building of the world will lend itself when draped with the colors of a great nation, was demonstrated at the Tabernacle concert to the Los Angeles visitors last night.

It is doubtful if any members of the audience had seen before so inspiring an ensemble of colors in an interior, and in combination with the songs and music of great artists, the effect was unforgettable. When at the end of the program the immense audience arose en masse to sing "The Star Spangled Banner" there was a feeling of enthusiasm let loose on the air by the peoples of two newly wedded cities, such as Salt Lake has not heretofore known. The moment was one in which the spirit of friendship between the two cities was welded for the length of memories, and to the people of Salt Lake it was a revelation of the great building's possibilities. Today visitors and hosts alike discussed the event of last night as a signal one in their experience, and on every hand it was pronounced the most effective musical affair they had ever attended.

The concert began at 8:30 o'clock after the building had been packed with visitors and Salt Lakers, the center of the house being given over to the Angelinos. The decorations struck every one as unique and surprising. On the organ were grouped a number of flags, while the entire stand and organ loft were buried in bunting. Around the long sweep of the gallery a wide band of the blended national colors was stretched, while smaller flags surmounted this at the top of each pedestal. As a center to the decorative scheme electric lights high between the organ towers blazed the words "Welcome" and "Utah."

SPEECH OF WELCOME.

The only speech of the evening was delivered by Hon. John Henry Smith, who welcomed the visitors on behalf of the settlers of Utah and their descendants. He said:

"My friends, both from the Golden state and of this state which is so dear to the people of the intermountain region, we welcome you here within this structure which was dedicated to religion and liberty. We welcome you here where have gathered in times gone by people of all religions and all creeds, and all denominations to listen to similar words of welcome. And it is with music in our hearts that we bid you enter herein. For the people of this state and the people of California are one. In the days when the cry of gold came to us from over the hills we sent our sons and daughters to help build up your state upon the Pacific. And so we welcome you here tonight as brothers and sisters. May peace and success be always with you. Not as any particular class or creed are we here, but of all classes and all creeds. The feeling of love and liberty is in our hearts, and may they both increase and spread in the interest of all our Father's children. This mighty concourse gathered here tonight welcomes you by its presence. It welcomes you in the gladness of its heart. The sons and daughters of our soil who dwell beneath the shelter of the Wasatch hills reach out their hands to greet you. We welcome you for those who laid the foundations of this commonwealth; for the Catholics and the Mormons and every other creed alike. We welcome you for that honored man who has united Los Angeles and Salt Lake. I pay honor to Senator Clark.

"The inhabitants of Utah respect all people who honor liberty. That is one of the reasons why they honor the man who laid the foundations of this state, that is one of the reasons why beneath this roof tonight, the Mormon people welcome you and say 'All Hail to California, All Hail to peopl of the western states united to us by bands of steel, All Hail to all brother Americans wherever they be found. Peace be to you, peace abound in your midst.'

"We seek the well being of all our brothers. This building and the founders of this building and the men who labor beneath this building never have taught and never will teach treachery or trickery towards the rest of mankind. The ladies you see here are the best and purest in the world. They are ready and willing to do their work wherever it may be found. They will greet you here with songs of gladness and of joy. You will remember them in the days which are yet to come. You will remember them and say of Utah, that her sons and daughters loved and honored their brothers and sisters."

SPLENDID MUSICAL PROGRAM.

The musical program followed this brief speech of welcome, the opening number being "Hosannah," by the full choir, rendered in an inspiring manner. The climax of the program, perhaps, was the "Inflammatis," rendered by Mrs. Lizzie Thomas Edward and the choir, which preceded the final number. A number which brought an atmosphere of sighs over the audience, noticeable even above the applause was "Home, Sweet Home," rendered by Mr. McClellan on the organ. The player throughout won the hearts of his hearers, selecting numbers well calculated to bring out the greatest possibilities of the organ, and most tellingly affect the audience.

FLAG DAY LITERATURE.

Following is a portion of the patriotic literature sent out by the national association, with regard to Flag day:

"On the 14th day of June, 1777, Congress enacted: 'That the flag of the 13 United States be 13 stripes, alternate red and white; that the Union be 13 stars, white in a blue field, representing a new constellation.' The number of stripes having been increased by the admission of new states, our sire to be expanded future dawned upon our fathers, and the 13 original stripes were unchangeably restored by act of Congress on April 4, 1818, when it was enacted: 'That from and after the 4th day of July next, the flag of the United States be 13 horizontal stripes, alternate red and white, that the Union be 20 stars, white in a blue field, and that on the admission of a new state into the Union, one star be added to the Union of the flag; and such addition shall take effect on the 4th day of July next succeeding such admission.' Since 1818 25 stars or sovereign states have been added to the Union, making 45 in all.

"Since the struggle of 1860-5, the flag has become the symbol of a mighty nation. It has been carried to the utmost parts of the earth, carrying liberty wherever it has been thrown to the breeze. Americans cannot fail of a feeling of pride and satisfaction, nor refrain the swelling of patriotism in the breast, when we contrast the meaning, in far distant lands, of ours and other flags displayed together.

The Stars and Stripes within the recent past has come to possess new beauty for friendly eyes, and new terrors for the foes of liberty."

THE UNSEEN HOSTS.

(Lovingly Dedicated to the Unknown and Unmarked Graves of the Soldier Dead)

The bugle sounded the alarm of war,
And aroused a man from his sleep;
"Dear wife, there's danger a-far,"
And he arose with a bound and a leap.

In haste he gathered the accoutrements all,
With never a thought for a moment of fear,
His country called, he answered the call—
To his country his wife and children dear.

He offered his love, his heart, his life,
He looked to his God for light,
Could he offer more than banes and wife,
All, all for his country's right.

Bravely he marched to the bloody strife,
Fighting for Home and the land he loved,
Liberty, Freedom, the Stars and Stripes,
Lo! the angels looked down from above.

They saw where he fell, pierced to the heart,
As he gazed at the starry sky;
"I have given my all, good-bye, we part
Dear ones, I am ready to die."

He lay near a stream, in the forest shade,
With the hurrying feet of tramp and dread,
None ever knew where his grave was made,
Yet the angels knew he was dead.

His country provided no funeral pall,
He was only "a private" in rank,
But no braver heart went out to the call,
Though his title was simply Frank.

The years roll on he is well-nigh forgot,
By all save his wife and babes,
His country, his comrades, with never a thought
Of the lonely grave in the glades.

But, in city's din, mid drum and fife,
With costly pomp, to a regal bier,
With elegy's loud proclaim a life
That is held by many, as brave and dear.

Not so for the private, who fought and fell
By the stream in the winding glade,
No monument is raised to even tell,
No sign by hand is made.

But ever anon when the spring time comes,
That grave appears fresh and green,
The bird's sweet carrol is heard at morn,
And no music more sweet I ween.

Was ever sent forth by fife or drum,
No elegies fraught with truer praise
Than o'er the tomb where the angels come,
And nature's voices in requiem raise

The grandest anthem e'er sung by choir,
To the mighty nations of all the earth,
The tender pathos, sweet, low, then higher,
Till it reaches the mansion, and lowliest hearth.

And the silent dead, there sweetly rests,
A life so given, can ne'er be lost,
The soul in peace on Jesus breast,
Heeds not the tramp of the unseen hosts.

—LOUISE COULSON.

Note—The ninth verse refers to Grant's funeral.—Author.

HOLMES GALLERY OPENS TOMORROW

Remarkable Collection of Beautiful Paintings Free to The Public.

CONTAINS SOME RARE PICTURES

Recent Additions Will Make it Interesting to Those Already Familiar With It.

Tomorrow and Friday the art gallery of Col. E. F. Holmes will be open to visitors from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m., and between these hours all who care to visit the gallery and view the remarkable collection of paintings, will be made welcome. The gallery is located, as is generally understood, in an annex to the Holmes residence on East South Temple street, and is becoming a center for the gathering of pictures that will add greatly to the art treasures of the west.

In recent months much has ben added to the collection, and the result is that the present exhibition is unlike any previous display, and will prove novel even to those most familiar with the gallery.

Of the new additions perhaps the most pleasing is a collection of four heads by Carl Bienner, styled "Poetry," "The Debutante," "Irene" and "Diana." A painting that is at once striking and effective is "After the Storm" by Malchin. Its features are a strong combination of warm colors, and a richness of atmosphere. "Courtship" by Meisel is a notable effort into which a great deal of detail has ben successfully worked.

In addition to the new paintings, the gallery has been improved by the rearrangement of the lighting facilities, and rehanging of paintings in a few cases.
