ABOUT SAVING. THERE is an old proverb that "a penny saved is a penny gained." The spirit of this proverb applies hereabout, but the latter does not, because people are to well off in these regions that they take no ac-count of penniss. Nevertheless in saving small sums, instead of spending them on something of avoing them on something or other that can be done without, is the sume road to a confortable complete the some road to a confortable complete the something of the something the tangent to the the something of the something the the complete the something of the something the the complete the something of the something the something the tangent to the tangent to the complete the complete the something of the something th other that can be done without, is fer to a practice which is, prevalent to make the voyage at all hazar The Tobacco Leaf enys, "Penn-sylvania, next to Connecticut, is now raising the most superior to-bacco for smoking purposes, pro-faced on the continent." lay by until the purpose is effected. It is much easier done, too, than many people imagine. Most people, when they take five or ten dollars practice is to hirr, either p or by agents, s certain num children from the Italian ad a dollar here and a dol- antry, and carry them to a and seventy-five cents in a third and, and there, providing with a small organ and m place, and seventy-five cents in a fourth place, and so on, some of these sums at least for things which they could manage tolerably well without, are struck with the ra-pidity with which the five or ten dollars disappears. Now if these people will take the trouble to save a dollar here and 's dollar there, fifty cents here and seventy - five cents there, and is seventy is of the worst kind. They must produce the amount required by the padrone, honestly or other-wise, it matters not to him, and they soon become acquainted with erime and life in its worst phases, and in time become itrutalized and irreclaimable vagabonds. Such a system is monstrous, and that it is tolerated in countries have numerous societies for the protecamputations proved useless.
