LOCAL NEWS.

Blockade of the D. & R. G.—A dispatch from Denver of yesterday's date states that the snowstorm which has been raging in the mountains the last few days has resulted in another formidable blockade. No trains have crossed Marshall Pass since Sunday morning. The trains which left this city Saturday morning are snow-bound on the west side of the range, with no immediate prospect of release. Both the Gunnison and Eagle River branches are badly blocked, and no effort is being made to move trains on either road.

New Road to Richfield.—Our legislators at their last session appropriated means for the construction of a bridge across the Sevier River, for the purpose of opening up a direct route from the north to Richfield, and places farther south and vice versa. The site selected for the bridge is situated towards the northern part of the town, hence the new route will be in a direct line from Juab to Richfield, passing through Dover, Redmond, etc. This will save many miles of distance and hard travel through Fayette, Gunnison and Sahna. Furthermore a splendid road now being made on the east side of the river at very little cost.

The construction of the bridge was entrusted to Ole Nielson, of Ephraim, who is making for himself a name as a boss bridge builder. It will be open for traffic in about a week.

The road to the new bridge coming from the north leaves the old road about three miles north of Warm Creek, running directly south. We understand that it is the intention of C. M. Clarke & Sons (upon whose land the bridge is built) at an early date to erect a hotel and store alongside the bridge for the convenience of travelers. This hostelry will make a twenty-five mile stage to and from Juab, without any intervening twelvings or waterings place.

Two Salt Lake Artists.—In a recent number of the American Art Journal we find the following flattering criticism of the performances of two artists who have become the pursuit of their profession in this city:

"We had the pleasure of hearing Mr. and Mrs. Bicknell Young one evening last week, as they passed through New York, en route from London to Salt Lake City. The two artists were in capital spirits, and artistic form, notwithstanding the ocean voyage had ended but a day previously. Mr. Young sang several songs, which were clear and powerful, and of every emotion of the human soul. He sang with a voice of such a beautiful and resonant, while at the same time he possesses such passion and enthusiasm that his songs thrill the listener with their fire and intensity. He closed with Gounod's song to Tennyson's celebrated poem, 'The Old Man and the Sea,' which he called a duet for voice and piano, so magnificently did the composer depict the character of the piece in the accompaniment. Mrs. Young accompanied her husband, and she accompanied him, and the whole was so perfectly blended that one could hardly believe that the two were not one and the same. We have never heard such perfect accompaniments, following and participating in every emotion of the singer. It was an artistic revelation, and one we shall never forget to admire most, the magnificent voice and artistic singing of Mr. Young or the poetry of music as expressed by his wife."

THE ALTA CATASTROPHE.

ARRIVAL OF THE BODIES.—CORONER'S INQUEST—VIEWING THE REMAINS.

Upon the arrival of the special train at Wasatch yesterday afternoon, each member of the rescuing party took a sack of provisions and all started in double file to meet the procession from Alta. A number of the leaders carried shovels to dig out the drifts. When about half-way between Wasatch and Alta the party were met by Joe Smith, who had come ahead of the Alta party to get relief, as they were worn out, and some were lying down and resting in the snow. He led the relief party back to where he had left his own resting. When they came in sight of the fagged-out Alta men, they were hailed with a shout of joy. All put their hands to the sides, and arrived at Wasatch at 6.15 p.m.

The procession was formed with the bearers of the body of Mattie Higley first, then that of Tim Madden, Jerry Bowen, David L. Evans, James Watson, Barney Gibson, Mrs. Ford and baby. The next sled contained the four children of Ed. Ballou, and the next Mr. Ford, badly wounded. Then Fred Cullinan, who is unable to walk on account of bruises about the spine. The bodies were sewed up in blankets and one lashed to each sled. Undertaker Taylor met the procession at Wasatch and placed the bodies in coffins and put them aboard the train, which started at once for this city, arriving at 9 o'clock p.m. They were taken to Sexton Taylor's office. Mr. Stevens and thirty-five men accompanied the remains to this city.

Fred Cullinan who was in the show he holds tells the following story: "I was at Thomas' when the avalanche struck the house, and was carried a short distance. I was caught in a sitting posture, with my right hand pressed by a log, my left caught fast in the snow, at right angles with my shoulder, my feet up, a log resting on the back of my neck, pressing my head forward, and one on my breast. I fell asleep several times and awoke and was under the impression I had been buried under the snow several days, but I never despaired for I felt sure I should be rescued alive. My father and two other men had dug a hole down in the snow while I was asleep for I heard them and realized their presence suddenly and heard some one say, 'Is that you, Fred?' and I answered with a shout of joy. I was pulled out and my eyes felt once more upon this beautiful world."

Andrew White, who was in the snow twelve hours said: "I was sitting in the house, next door to Mrs. Ford's when the slide came. The top of my building was carried away and the balance crushed down on me, pinning me where I sat. A small timber lodged across my head and another across the back of my neck, pressing my head forward. My watch was wound to run till 6 a.m. and at 8 a.m. I was taken out, so I had a good idea of how long I was under the snow, for I could hear my watch tick. I felt asleep several times during the night and had a difficulty in breathing. I heard the rescuers at work when they were ten feet from me."

There are several people still left in the snow-buried city. They are Mrs. Ballou, Mrs. Keist, Mrs. Hemet, Mrs. Johnson and four children; also Mr. Hans Olsen and one child, all of whom are very anxious to come down, but who could not come yesterday, for the lack of aid to get them and their children out of the place. At the time of the accident Mrs. Keist was sitting on one side of the stove in Mr. Ford's house, Mrs. Ford on the other and Mr. Ford in front with the child in his arms. The child was found within a few feet of where Mrs. Ford's body was discovered, the appearances indicating that she had reached for the child at the fatal moment, but Mr. Ford only remembers that it was snatched from his arms.

Another slide occurred on Saturday in Superior Gulch, which the Alta people are satisfied resulted in the death of John White, Sam Trencott and R. Agnew, who had a contract and were at work on the Superior Tunnel. The slide was seen by a man named Murphy, who was on his way to the gulch to see if the men were safe. When within about a quarter of a mile of the gulch, within sight of the tunnel, he saw a cloud of dust started and all was lost to view. The concussion of the slide was so great that Murphy was knocked down and considered it useless to proceed farther.

Mr. Daniels, who lived at the old Whippy house, on the south side of Alta, is supposed to be buried in the snow, as he has not been seen or heard of since the slide. As soon as possible search will be made for him.

A large crowd surrounded Sexton Taylor's office this morning, anxious to view the remains of the deceased. A horrible sight met the eye of our reporter as he passed through the room where was stretched the scarred remains of Mrs. J. Ford and child, Maggie Higley, Joe Toole, and Ballou's four children. In the shed lay the scratched and bruised remains of Jas. Watson, a Scotchman, aged 42 years, and one of the most prominent men of Alta. He has a brother in New York City. Barney Gibson, of Irish parentage, aged 50 years; Jeremiah Reazan, aged 27 years; born in South Wales, but of Irish descent. He has a mother near Baltimore, Maryland, and a nephew in St. Joseph's School in this city. David P. Evans, aged 47 years, a Welshman. Has a brother in Patagonia and a mother in Wales. Timothy Madden, about 40 years of age, an American of Irish descent. He leaves a wife in Park City.

Henry Clay Wallace, in his testimony, stated that it had been snowing several days before the slide. He was in the Bay City tunnel which opens just above the town. The first intimation was a rumbling noise, which he heard immediately afterwards he heard a tremendous noise. The slide was three-quarters of a mile long and a mile wide, extending from Grizzly Flat to the Flagstaff mine. (A slide came over part of the same ground the night of March 7, 1884, killing twelve persons.) There are twelve houses still standing in Alta, and twenty-seven were swept away. Morgan Richards, Mrs. Keist, Joseph Baker and Andrew A. White received slight injuries.

Mr. Thomas said he heard the crash in the upper end of the town, and called to others "a slide is coming." He ran 30 feet, when he was caught by broken timbers, snow, etc., but dug himself out.

The following is the substance of the verdict: The deceased died in Alta City, Salt Lake County, at about 8.15 p.m., Friday, Feb. 13, 1885, from the effects of a snow slide which swept away nearly the entire town. Jeter Clinton, Henry Reiser and W. J. Hooper acted as jurors. We understand efforts will be made to get the balance of the people down from Alta at once.

Mapleson's Opera Prices.—The following scale has been adopted for the Mapleson engagement: Reserved Seats, Parquette - $3.00 First Circle - $2.00 GENERAL ADMISSION. Parquette - $1.50 First Circle - $1.00 Second Circle - $1.00 Third Circle - $1.00

The Murphy Murder Case.—The proceedings before Judge Zane in the case of Michael Murphy, charged with the murder of Patrick Egan last summer, continues to excite the attention of large crowds in the courtroom. The testimony being introduced by the prosecution tends to show up the affair in rather a different light than it appeared when the particulars of the killing were first published. The first witness sworn this morning was Mr. Furg. Ferguson, who was a deputy marshal at the time of the first trial of Murphy. He testified that as soon as he was sworn all the witnesses wanted in the case at that time, including Thos. Dwyer and Terry Brogan, who at the present time can not be found. Mr. Cohn, formerly Justice of the Peace at Park City, testified that the case of the shooting of Egan was heard before him last June. He recognized the written testimony of Thos. Dwyer, which was shown him by Mr. Dickson. Said it was given by Dwyer under oath. He did not know where Dwyer is now, but understood that he was in Tintic last October or November.

The written testimony of Dwyer given at the examination before the Justice of the Peace was admitted as evidence, and according to the account it contained, it seems that Egan was in Woodside Canyon, going on foot to his boarding house, when he met Dwyer on horseback. Thinking to play a joke on the latter, Egan pretended to be an officer and seized the other's horse by the bit, at the same time telling him that he was arrested. Dwyer, however, recognized Egan's voice, and a hearty laugh ensued. The two then made it up to play the same joke on Murphy who would be along shortly. They did so, and the joke took better with Murphy than it had done with Dwyer, for he started to follow them to town. They did not go, however, and the joke was soon and the party had another laugh and a drink. Dwyer then rode on a short distance ahead leaving the other two together behind. Presently he heard a shot, and Egan called to him, saying he had come back as he was shot. Dwyer thought he was fooling and did not heed the call until Murphy rode past him in a hurry and the cry was repeated several times. He then went back and found Egan was really wounded. He lent him his horse, which Egan mounted and hurriedly rode to town. Dwyer followed on foot, and subsequently visited Egan at the boarding house where he died.

It seemed that on one occasion Egan admitted that it was his own fault that he got shot.

One or two other witnesses were examined before the Court adjourned at noon.

In the afternoon Michael Murphy gave his own version of the killing of Egan, which was substantially as follows:

He said Thos. Dwyer was on horseback, when Egan suddenly appeared and first seized the bit of Dwyer's horse, and then he rode under the horse's neck and seized his animal's bridle, at the same time saying, "I want you; you must go with me." It was dark, and he did not recognize Egan, and said he could not go, as he had to work at the pumps in the morning. He then broke loose and rode forward some distance leaving the other two men behind; then, thinking that the man who had stopped him and Dwyer might be highwaymen, he followed them. He did not, however, draw his revolver at that time. He found Egan still holding the bits of Dwyer's horse, and as he approached Egan sprang forward to seize his horse's bridle. At the same instant a shot was fired, and, thinking other highwaymen were in the brush, he drew his self-cocking pistol and fired two shots in rapid succession at Egan, who was only four or five feet distant. He did not hear the wounded man make any exclamation, but hastily rode into town and told the boys at the boarding house what had happened, and that Dwyer ought to be rescued from the robbers, and that I would go with them. A number left for the scene but he did not go.

The examination was in progress as we went to press. During the recital of the above, the witness was subjected to several questions, and at times seemed almost completely entangled in his own assertions.

CITY COUNCIL.

The City Council met last evening pursuant to adjournment, Mayor Sharp presiding.

A petition signed by Harrison Sperry and eighty-eight others requesting that First West street, between Fifth and Eighth South, be gravelled, was referred to the committee on streets and alleys.

Elias Morris and nineteen others petitioned that a certain avenue on Third West, between First and Second South streets, be named "Morris Avenue," as it has no name at present, and the residences upon it were not numbered. Referred to the committee on streets and alleys.

Martha Edwards asked that she be allowed to conduct a small mercantile business free of license, at her residence in Ninth ward. Granted.

Liquor licenses were granted to Don C. Tutts and B. Y. Martin. E. Rogers petitioned for remittance of his license as job wagoner, on the grounds of old age and poverty. Granted.

F. S. Richards, city attorney, filed a clear and comprehensive report of the condition of the city $109.10 in his hands for the quarter ending December 31st, 1884. The report gives the number of suits dismissed and cases pending, which the city has been victorious.

The latter included such cases as gambling and unlawful liquor selling recently decided, the fines in which, the city is reported to have eight suits pending, the principal ones being that against G. J. Hollister, now before the Supreme Court of the United States, and that of Sam Levy vs. the City for $500 damages. Received and filed.

The committee on police reported that they found the police court statement for the month of December correct; also that they had approved the marshal's accounts for January, and recommended that $100.00 be appropriated to meet the deficiency. Adopted.

The miners who are thrown out of work by the avalanche at Alta will probably flock to the White Canon district.

THE D. & R. G. folks expect to get their passenger trains over Marshall Pass to-day and bring all delayed passengers through to-morrow.
