In Japan a girl at the age of nine wears her hair tied up in a red scarf around the back of her head; the forehead is left bare with the exception of a couple of locks on each side. When she is of marriageable age she combs her hair forward and makes it into the shape of a fan or butterfly, and at the same time decorates it with silver cord and balls of various colors. This means everything, and is fully understood by the young men in Japan. A widow who wishes for a second husband puts a tortoiseshell pin horizontally at the back of her head and twists her hair around it, while an inconsolable widow curls her hair short, and goes in for no adornment of any sort. Twenty-four years ago, says John J. When this sand was well worked in, the whole became an excellent sandy loam, just the soil for agreeable working. The labor of drawing on the sand was considerable; but it was done in winter, when there was little else for the man and team to do, and the fine condition of the soil remains as good as at first, and probably will for a century to come, as the sand does not evaporate, wash away, or become consumed in the growth of plants, as with manure.
