THE RAT THAT RENOUNCED THE WORLD.

The rat
In a legend of old,
How a certain rat, grown tired of strife,
And the cares that beset his ratship's life,
Wishing to meditate at his ease,
Took up his abode in a Holland cheese.

He found
This great round
Gave solitude, shelter, and plenty to eat,
And by diligent use of his hands and feet
He soon had a hermitage quite to his mind,
Its walls and its floors with good victuals lined.

This rat
Soon grew fat,
And he said to himself, "God blesses his own!
My body would only be skin and bone
If I hadn't turned hermit: I really must say
Renouncing the world's the better way."

To his cheese
On their knees,
Came some representatives from the rats
Saying: "Ratopolis is besieged by the cats;
We are going for aid to a foreign land;
Old neighbor, do lend us a helping hand.

"We set out
Without
A dollar to pay the needful expense.
Do give us a shilling, or at least a few cents;
We'll be very grateful, we'll surely repay
If we live to return on the next New Year's day."

The rat
Said that
He no longer had interest in worldly affairs;
But for the sake of old friendship his two longest prayers
Were at their disposal. What could hermit do more?
He gave them his blessing, and—closed the door.

"Oh the rarity
Of charity"
Among the rat family. If men live at ease
And the world is to them a great Holland cheese—
And their friends are distressed and in sorry plight,
Do they only give blessing, then close the door tight?

Our Civilization.

Down low, at the root of this flower of civilization, lies the wireworm of crime. After we have necessitated the criminal class, we punish it for being. We know why it is as clearly as we know why fever breaks out by uncleansed drains and round the borders of marsh lands, but we do nothing to hinder or to mend. We send the thief to prison, surely enough; but we do not care to offer him the chance of honesty; holding punishment godlike, but prevention impolitic. Of late, a certain fear of this seething mass of crime, boiling and bubbling in the depths, has set our legislators to work, and we have begun to appoint boards and build schools, like men in a fright, and hurried. But at the present moment things are standing still, that a free fight may go on over dogma. The patient is in extremis, but the doctors are quarrelling over the pattern of the cup in which the elixir of life is to be administered. This is one outcome of our civilization, and we are proud of. We hold it to be far more vital to the good of humanity that roughs and gutter-children should have correct ideas about baptismal regeneration and the doctrine of election than be taught honesty, sobriety, and decency of living. To our minds true religion consists of formulas, not in state of life and morals; and we would rather our thieves and murderers continued and multiplied than see them abolished at the expense of corrupt doctrinal mysteries. Our civilization may have done much; but one thing it has not done—it has not destroyed cruelty. We are cruel to each other, cruel to animals, and cruel to all the weak. Strength claims its victims by its own righteousness, and our civilization is built up on sacrifice. No one can see a child beaten for a fault it does not know to be a fault, hear a servant rated for an oversight, see a horse between the shafts, or a dog broken in, without a burning at his heart and a passionate desire for the reality of the state in which we say we live. If we cannot alter the law of nature in its incessant destruction, its death that there may be life, at least we need not inflict pain out of season. There is no absolute necessity for the costermonger to work a raw on his donkey, for a coachman to lash his team till every nerve quivers with pain and terror, for a hound to be whipped out of all courage and consciousness that a horde of men in pink may hunt a miserable little hare to death, for horses to be spurred and swished and may be break their backs or their hearts, in what men call a steeple-chase, and the gods a selfish cruelty. Children can be taught wisdom and goodness otherwise than by the cane; and if we really respected ourselves, we should respect our so-called social inferiors. Were we civilized, the sights and sounds which meet us twenty times an hour in the streets would be impossible. It is all savagery, from first to last; and the brute assertion of strength is not civilization. Pass on to war, which is the culmination of this cruelty; pass on to the prayers for victory put up by nations irrespective of the justice of the cause—to the thanksgiving offered after they have seized their enemy's lands, burned towns and villages, destroyed harvests and machinery, massacred women and children, peasants and peaceable craftsmen, and slain in fairer fight whole armies of brave and beautiful men. Then the victors march back to their jubilant homes, carrying their bloody flags into the cathedrals, where they shout out anthems of praise to the God of Love and the great Father of us all, for His grace in giving them strength to kill, ravage and destroy their brothers and His sons. This is civilization; and a victorious army would be scandalized in its deepest feelings if a public thanksgiving was not offered to God for what is perhaps the gain of a bad cause, and the triumph of tyranny and injustice.

There can be no true civilization while strife and selfishness continue. Yet what is it with us? We grudge all men's success and fear it, because we want to secure our own only. We prefer competition to co-operation, save as an act of defense against a stronger enemy outside. But the co-operation which means mutual support and mutual self-sacrifice—the co-operation which is Christianity put into action—that we despise as a dream, and the preachers thereof as mischievous agitators. For we like high-sounding words; they are comforting to the mouth, and they obscure the sense. "To do justice, and to love mercy." We have scarcely mastered that lesson yet! But until we have we know nothing of true civilization. We are only lackered, not welded; hunchbacks beneath our coronation robes; barbarians posed for sages; pithecoids under the guise of men; and the devil's journeymen, calling God their master.—Ex.
