Freeman Bassett's Act of Friendship Comes Somewhat Expensive in Long Run.

JUDGE BOWMAN'S MATINEE.

Couple of Spectacular Drunks Come To Grief-Man Who Beat Motherin-Law Stays in Jail.

Freeman Bassett's act of friendship shown toward Dave Krout, proved to be expensive to him, when he was compelled to pay $25 for what he thought was a friendly turn. It happened that Krout was caught July 9 fishing without a license. Next day he produced a license dated in June, and issued by Bassett, who is a clerk in the Western Arms & Sporting Co. The plan of the friendly act went awry, however, when it was overlooked that the game warden would know that the book from which the license had been issued had not been delivered to the sporting goods company until July 10, so that the license could not have been issued before then. Bassett readily pleaded guilty to the charge of preparing false evidence this morning, and was sentenced to pay a fine of $25 by Judge Bowman.

BEAT HIS MOTHER-IN-LAW.

Alex. Whitehead, who, it is alleged, expressed his feelings towards his mother-in-law and wife by first knock-ing them down and then tramping over them until they were badly bruised, pleaded not gullty to the charge of as-sault and battery this morning. Un-able to produce $300 bonds, he will remain in the custody of the sheriff un-til Aug. 19, when he will have his preliminary hearing.

WOODS' CASE CONTINUED.

The hearing of Anthony Woods, ac-cused of a statutory crime committed upon 11-year-old Eveline Bardon, was begun before Judge Bowman this morning. After the introduction of the testimony of the little girl, and her 13-year-old brother. Elmer Bardon, the case was continued until Thursday.

UNINVITED GUEST.

Although of husky stature Jacob Jacobson is obsessed of an aggravated attack of "lired feeling." It broke out in a virulent form last night when he insisted upon using the home of R. L. Penn, 625 south Ninth East street, as a resting place, despite the objec-tions of Mr. Penn, and this morning in court he was still so tired that in the few minutes of time his case took up he had to sit down frequently. Jacobfew minutes of time his case took up he had to sit down frequently. Jacob-son entered the home of Mr. Penn last night and caimly announcing that he was fired and wanted to rest, began re-moving his shoes and clothing. The only energy shown by Jacobson was when he defied Mr. Penn to remove him from the room he had chosen as his own, and the police were called. Today Jacobson was charged with drunkenness, and although he thought "it's a pretty bad charge because I haven't had a drink in 20 years." he pleaded guilty. Circumstances in his case made a prompt discharge desirable and he was released. and he was released.

SEQUEL TO JOY RIDE OF YOUNG SOCIETY GIRL

Identity of Female Chauffeur Which Ran Into Eayrs' Buggy is Established.

Miss Lillian Lane, the 18-year-old daughter of H. Vance Lane, president and general manager of the Rocky Mountain Bell Telephone company, was driving the automobile which ran into the buggy of Mr. G. F. Eayrs and his wife Saturday night at Fourteenth South and Main streets throwing them south and Main streets throwing them out and seriously injuring them. Mr. Lane came to the office of Sheriff Joseph C. Sharp at 11:30 o'clock this, morning after he had been informed that unless the details of the accident were given out to him that a warrant would be issued for the arrest of the occupants of the automobile. With Mr. Lane were Robert Sloan, Attorney Bagley of the claims department of the Oregon Short Line railroad company. Jagley of the claims department of the Oregon Short Line railroad company, and L. E. Abbott, his assistant. For half an hour they held a conference with Sheriff Sharp. Mr. Lane promised to pay the doctor bills and the ex-penses. On this promise County Attor-ney Job. P. Lyon said that he would not prosecute them.

Miss Lane, accompanied by two roung men and another young woman about her own age, were in the auto-mobile. It is a new machine just pur-chased and they went out for a "joy ride" which resulted in the accident. According to the story told by Mr. Lane this morning, his daughter was driving the machine. They were traveling at a moderate rate of speed south on Main street. When Miss Lane attempted to turn out of the road to pass the buggy, she told her father, that Eavrs turned the same way when she sounded the horn. Before she could swerve the machine clear of the buggy, the fender caught the hind wheel of the

The young folks stopped the car as soon as possible and placed the injured couple in the tonneau of the car. They were taken to their home in Sandy, and a physician was called to attend them. Eayrs believed Saturday night that the automobile that struck him went on and that he and his wife were picked up by another automobile and taken home.

According to a report from the home of the injured couple, a physician and an attorney came to their place on Monday and said that they had been sent there from the sheriff's office to see them. It is stated that the attor-

FACED MANY HARDSHIPS. "We have had a pile of hardships to face, but we of Oklahoma have been used to that and we don't mind it much. The wife and boy had the mountain fever, but the old . soldier stuck it out all the way through with nothing important the matter with him." And he smiled as he saild it, and then the memory of the old days must have returned, for he began tell-ing of his service with the colors. "I was in Co. E of the 149th Penn-sylvania, serving in the First and the Fifth corps. I was mustered out July 7, 1865. I was a corporal, but not until they made me take it. I didn't want any office, but the rebels gave it to us so heavy that when there were so few of us left somebody had to be corporals and I was one of them. Our Pennsyl-vania infantry regiment was in the hits ranks mighty thin. There are few of us left and I haven't seen any of my comrades at any of the encampments in late years. I hope I will see some of the boys this time, though. WOUNDED IN ACTION. WOUNDED IN ACTION.

FACED MANY HARDSHIPS.

"We fought our first fight at Gettysburg under Gen. Reynolds, who was killed in the action. I served under Gen. Doubleday until the same fall, killed in the action. I served under Gen. Doubleday until the same fall, when Gon. Warren took command of the corps. I fought through all the Bat-tysburg campaign, through all the Bat-ties of the Wilderness and through the slege of Petersburg until February of '65, when I was shot in the left arm and put out of action until the war was over." And the old veteran of so many engagements showed an ugly furrow in his left arm, beginning at the wrist and continuing its crooked course well up to the elbow. It was an ugly wound, he said, and caused him much suffering; not all of it because of the paih of the wound itself, but, too, the thought of being disabled and out of the action in which his comrades of so many hardships were participating. They have raised a family of 11 children, who are living, and one son fell into a mine in California and was killed in the accident. When the party of three started out from Okla-homa a new wagon, harness and fresh horses were purchased with which to make the trip. Only one breakdown occurred to delay them, and that was a split in the doubletree, which the veteran repaired and after a short stop the party moved on. After its trip of 3,000 miles the wagon looks not a bit like a new one, but it still will stand considerable service. As the corporal says, the horses look a "bit peaked," but with a good rest they look as if they will be able to make the rest cf
