Judge Hiles heard the case, but retired

Judge Hiles heard the case, but retired from the bench before rendering a de-cree. On Sept. 25, 1903, it came up be-fore Judge Hall and a decree was ren-dered in favor of plaintiff. The findings and decree were naver presented to him for his signature and he went out of office without signing them. The result is that no decree has ever been filed and before one can be it will be necessary to again try the case before one of the judges of the district court.

The matter was brought to light when County Clerk Eldredge a few days ago received a request from Mrs. M. B. Mitchell of Seattle for a certi-hed copy of the decree in the case. The letter was addressed to County Recorder Perkins under the be-lief that the decree would be recorded in his office. The woman enclosed $5 to pay for the copy. Mr. Perkins turned the matter over to the county clerk who wrote Mrs. Mitchell of the condition of the case. He addressed the letter as directed to "306 Collins Block, Seattle, Wash.," but it was re-turned to him marked "No such ad-
