

DEBATE IS WON BY UTAH'S TEAM

Forensic Discussion of Commission Form of City Government Sustains Present System.

ARGUMENTS WELL PRESENTED

Oregon Sends Splendid Men to Represent Its University, Though Local Students Are Given Decision.

The University of Utah debating team last evening won the forensic contest in that they were pitted against the crack debaters of the Oregon university, in a spirited debate in the Salt Lake theater. A large and enthusiastic audience was present, and frequent periods of applause interrupted the good points made by either side.

The question, of which the Utah men held the negative, was: "Resolved, that municipal government by commission is preferable to the prevailing forms of city government." Utah was represented by Richard W. Young, Jr., and R. H. Burgess, while Oregon's champions were Thomas Townsend and Earl Kilpatrick. The subject was well handled throughout, and the points made by both sides were plainly and distinctly brought before the minds of the judges and the audience. State Senator W. N. Williams acted as moderator, and the judges were ex-Gov. Charles J. Wells, George P. Holman and Capt. R. H. Christensen. The judges sat in different parts of the house and did not consult before submitting their decisions, consequently the discussion was decided purely upon merit and the vote for Oregon was not a compromise one.

Mr. Townsend for the affirmative led off with the statement, which he proved by facts and figures, to back that the commission form of government, which he likened unto a corporation, had the advantage over the prevailing form of mayor and council government, in that it was less cumbersome, more efficient, and enabled responsibility to be fixed within definite bounds, while the old plan, dividing as it does, the work and responsibility between the mayor and councilmen, responsibility cannot be definitely fixed, and the speaker consequently suffered. The speaker referred to a number of cities which had adopted the commission form, especially dwelling upon Galveston, Texas, and Des Moines. The experience of these cities showed that greater efficiency and a thousandfold greater economy followed the establishment of the commission form of city government.

DEPENDS PRESENT SYSTEM.

Mr. E. H. Burgess was the first speaker for the negative. He made the point that the prevailing form of city government had been successfully practiced for more than 20 years, a system which was honest and capable men could be had under that system as under the new, which was yet an experiment, and that largely, in the few cases where it had been tried, the result of enthusiastic supporters for improved city government. The speaker maintained that the commission plan presented such unlimited opportunities for the centralization of power, that the introduction of it to establish an enormous political machine which would become so firmly entrenched in its power that it would be disastrous for the cities adopting the plan.

Earl Kilpatrick for the affirmative, in a finished debate, and in his arguments brought forth many convincing statements of how the commission plan might be and is enforced in the cities adopting the plan. He said the commission form operated with equal efficiency as a legislative and as an administrative body, the commission as a whole forming the legislative part of the government, while the commission members individually attending to the administrative portion. He said the final power in the hands of the people and should a commission ever prove recreant to his trust, there is the remedy of the initiative and referendum and recall to take from him his

JOSEF LHEVINNE SCORES A TRIUMPH

Young Russian Pianist Delights Audience at the First Methodist Church With His Playing.

The equal of Rubinstein, the equal of the great Liszt—at his age, appeared before a Salt Lake audience last evening, in the First Methodist church, in the person of Josef Lhevinne, the Russian pianist. It was a surprised audience that the expression he put on every strain, on to every note of that long program, refusing to leave their seats at the close until the artist had responded, resumed his seat at the big concert grand and played the Rubinstein Staccato Etude as it was never played before in Salt Lake City. Salt Lake has listened to famous pianists before. As such succeeding artist appeared, it has seemed as though each one could not possibly attain to loftier eminence in this phase of the art divine. Yet, here comes a young Russian (he is but 23), who has sat on the piano stool since the tender age of 5, practically unknown in western America, and sweeps his audience off their feet, forgetful of all else but the phenomenal performance of the young man.

Such exquisite tone, such beautiful rhythm, such expression, descriptive of all the forms, phases, fringes and fantasies of the dramatic, lyric, romantic school, and an appreciation that classifies the artist with the more noted painters in portraying the charms, the forces, the grandeur in nature, places him in the firmament of his profession. Every effort made to him easily, with a most avoidable fact, the quality by the way that marks Paderewski's playing; noted also in Harold Bauer, Jonas, and other noted artists who have reached the zenith of piano performance.

Owing to some oversight, the programs were not in hand until the end of the first part of the program, and the absence of others created some confusion in finding their seats. The lady two handsomely dressed ladies persistently plodded from row to row until they located their seats, and invited the occupants who had no business there to sit elsewhere. The charge was speedily effected. Horace Ensign kindly read the first four numbers on the program to the audience, in the absence of programs.

CHILL NIGHT AIR IS PIERCED BY BULLETS

Enraged Husband Chases and Shoots At Parley Jensen and Two "Ladies."

"You blankety blank blank (****) chase up the street with my wife will you?" The unrelenting atmosphere was then pierced by a shriek, and then more piercing, when three revolver shots were fired.

There was a scream and a rush of feet, followed by the clang of the bell.

on the patrol wagon as a load of officers dashed madly down Main street. All this happened about 8 o'clock last night on Main street in front of the office of the Salt Lake Route. An alleged husband uttered the angry exclamations and fired the shots. The object of his wrath was Parley Jensen who was walking along the street with "Miss" Williams. "Miss" Williams uttered the shrieks. Jensen disappeared during the excitement. The man who fired the shots was Carl Williams, and that he was angry there could be no doubt, he said so himself.

When the patrol wagon came from all directions. Men, women and children gazed upon what they thought a brutal murder.

When the patrol wagon reached the scene "Miss" Williams lost to time in getting aboard. "She" was smoking a cigarette and did not care.

MINER KILLED AT SCHOFIELD

Schofield, Utah, March 29.—William Moxon was killed today in the Winter Quarters mine while driving an electric motor. While coming out of the mine with a number of loaded cars, the motor struck the end of a track, carrying along the timber. Moxon was buried beneath tons of coal that caved in, and it required a large force of men to dig him out, which was done in two hours. The miner's neck was broken, and he was otherwise crushed. Moxon leaves a wife and an infant six months old. The funeral will take place Thursday.
