THE DRY CANON WATER AGAIN.

ACTUAL EXPERIENCE BEARS OUT THE SCIENTIFIC TEST.

SALT LAKE CITY, October 13, 1884.

Editor Deseret News:

Referring to the analysis made by Professor Kingsbury of the Dry Cañon water, I thought it might be worth mentioning that since last fall, and for a period of six or seven months, two men who were working with me on a mining prospect in that cañon, drank the water very freely every day. They were located on the left fork, and used that water exclusively without experiencing any detrimental results, or even so much as supposing that the water was in any degree unhealthful. It was this fact and the general talk about the water which led the Professor and myself to secure the samples of water for the analysis.

Personally I have drunk the water scores of times, and until the evidences of unwholesomeness are more apparent, I see no reason for rejecting it.

The men to whom I refer scoff at the idea of there being any prominent peculiarities in the effects of the water, and they certainly gave it a thorough and entirely unprejudiced test.

Respectfully,
GEORGE A. MEEARS.
