

SALT LAKERS IN GOTHAM.

Five Utah Girls Acting in New York—Visit to a Mission in the Slums—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

Special Correspondence.

New York, Jan. 13, 1902.—There are at present five of our Utah girls making good records for themselves in the New York theaters: Maude Adams, Viola Pratt Gillette, Lisle Leigh, Ada Dwyer and Jennie Hawley. Miss Adams has just closed a phenomenal engagement at the Knickerbocker, much to the regret and surprise of the public. Such business as she has been doing caused people to think her manager, Mr. Friedman, would keep her here indefinitely, but she has left us, and Broadway will see her no more this season it is feared. Viola Gillette it still winning laurels as Prince Charming. Ada Dwyer, Lisle Leigh and Jennie Hawley are more recent additions to New York than the two former. Miss Leigh in the part created by Ada Dwyer in "Up York State," is doing the loud rough western girl to such perfection, that a friend remarked to the writer's hearing, "it was difficult to imagine her in any other line of business." But, having seen the lady play the lead in several society dramas, roles so directly opposite to Lila Williams, we feel we must take off our hats to such an actor as she, and say, Miss Leigh, you are certainly making great strides in your chosen profession, and we are proud of you. One characteristic she possesses in a marked degree—she is convincing, and that is the great thing to say of any actor. The New York press has been very generous to her, in this small, but important character. Jennie Hawley, as the revengeful Spanish girl, or heavy villainess at the musical play, "The Toreador," was a big surprise to her many friends here. She plays opposite to Francis Wilson, and has one of the most important parts in that tawdry skit. It can be said truthfully, she is the only singer in the company, and when one takes into account her good looks, set off by the most picturesque and artistic costumes which she wears with the grace and abandon of a "Carmen," (I mean Calve's "Carmen") it is easily understood she is a feature of the play.

Mrs. Richard W. Young, who has been in Washington for some time, returned to New York for a few days, just long enough to shake his many friends by the hand, say a little business, then off again to the capital, where his presence is more needed in perfecting his affairs. He spoke at the cottage meeting of the Latter-day Saints last Tuesday evening, as did also Elder Hyrum S. Woolley.

Bishop Edwin T. Woolley, of Ogden, is here for a short time, helping his brother, Hyrum Woolley, in their joint enterprise; he favored the people here with a fine discourse at the chapel services Sunday.

Guy Eldredge has returned, after spending the holidays at home; he is at present living with John W. Young and family, and has taken up his studies at the Wood school with greater zeal than ever.

We wonder if you heard the rumble and roar of the great tunnel disaster New York experienced this week. Surely some sound of it must have penetrated through the "Rockies." It shook Manhattan from New Rochelle to the Battery and has left a pall over this city that will be felt in many homes for years to come. Public sentiment is placing the blame where it should be, upon the rich men of this city, who control the road, and not upon a wretched engineer who, no matter how many death traps are lying in wait for him.

A big delegation of our young people went to Prospect Park, Brooklyn, last week to test the strength and quality of the ice on the lake; needless to say the utmost fun was crowded into the few hours spent together teaching and experimenting with new beginners, watching professionals taking good naturedly all the ups and downs that befell amateur skaters. That same evening, headed by S. I. Clawson, the party of young people, being reinforced by a number of the older members of the conference, decided to visit the Florence Crittenden Mission, on East Bleeker street. The "Florence Crittenden" is about a mile from another mission of the same character, situated on Deyers street, just off Mott street, the Chinese headquarters. A former, and a Brother Schatchy over the latter. If one can overcome his prejudice for rank odors, and give his mind and thought to his one object for a few hours, think only of the good these men and their co-workers are doing in these loathsome districts, and attend one of these meetings. If he, or she, is a thinker, and has the love of universal brotherhood at heart, here is a field for thought and action, that will tax the brain and pocket book to the utmost. It would be impossible to witness one of these gatherings unless he imagined that when three women stepped out of that big assembly and had the courage to come forward and ask to be prayed for. These three women—distinct types, widely differing from each other—the first a woman of about forty years, a hard, selfish, dispirited face; the second, a young girl with every evidence of refinement and good breeding in her movements; and the third, a typical "Nancy Sykes," knelt together and wept as only a repentant soul can weep, and prayed, and gave their promises to reform from that hour. You may not believe it, but I do came to the platform and confessed their evil doings, begging forgiveness and asking to be numbered among the workers in that locality. The sincerity of these people can not be doubted, and as for the men and women who are giving their lives to such work as this, all honor to them! Language is inadequate to express the admiration and respect one must feel for such usefulness and devotion.

On invitation of Miss Lisle Leigh, and her aunt, Miss Sara Alexander, one of the elegantest afternoons was passed with the well known writer "Ella Wheeler Wilcox," at her home in the elegant "Swannanoa" apartment building. Mrs. Wilcox and Miss Alexander are old and very dear friends of many years standing. When a note arrived early one morning asking if we would like to meet this famous lady author, no time was lost in the acceptance of so rare an opportunity. Every Sunday during the month of January from 3 o'clock until 5 o'clock in the evening, Mrs. Wilcox receives her friends, and they are legion in the artistically furnished room where she lives and works during her residence in the city, her country home in Connecticut retains her most of the year, and one can forgive the choice, judging from a large picture which adorns the wall of the drawing room, the country "Hungalow" only appears comfortable and perfect rest, such as a busy woman like Mrs. Wilcox stands most in need of. But these Sunday afternoons are delights, not to be missed by anyone fortunate enough to obtain an invitation. There

AIR SHIPS AT WORLD'S FAIR.

A Prize of $200,000 to be Offered for the Most Successful Flying Machine—Famous Inventors Invited to Participate in the Tournament—An Aerostatic Congress a Part of the Plan—Airship Must Develop Speed And Respond to Steering Apparatus.

Special Correspondence.

St. Louis, Jan. 11.—An exhibition of airships in operation has been determined upon as one of the great novelties for the Louisiana Purchase Exposition of 1904. Messrs. Charles W. Knapp and Nathan Frank, members of the executive committee of the World's Fair, were recently appointed as a sub-committee to consider the question of an aerial tournament to be a feature of the fair. These gentlemen have called into consultation Prof. S. P. Langley, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution at Washington, D. C., and Octave Chanute, of the Western Society of Engineers of Chicago, two distinguished aeronauts, who have given special attention to aerostatics. It is proposed to offer prizes of not less than $200,000. The matters to be determined by the sub-committee and those who have been called upon to confer with the aeronauts, are: the rules governing the tournament and the conditions under which the prizes will be awarded. A cablegram from London says that Sir Hiram Maxim, the American inventor, proposes to interest in the proposed contest, and is willing to spend $100,000 as a participant in the effort to win the prize. President David R. Francis of the Exposition company says that Mr. Maxim will be invited to participate as soon as the committee of aerial experts has crystallized the plan for the contest. In connection with the tournament there will also be held an aerostatic congress in which the subject will be exhaustively discussed by those who have undertaken practical experiments in aerial navigation.

The director of exhibits, Mr. Frederick J. V. Skiff, in making up his classification for the exhibit department of the world's fair, some time ago, included in the department of transportation in group No. 77, provisions for aerial navigation. The group is arranged in four classes. Class 481 relates to balloons, construction, fabrics, varnishes, cars, valves, netting, cordage, appliances for stopping balloons, such as anchors and grapnels; the generation of hydrogen and other light gases; captive balloons. Class 482 relates to aerial voyages; the use of balloons for the study of the atmosphere, air currents, clouds, temperature at great heights, optical phenomena, etc.; drawings, maps of journeys, diagrams, photographs. Class 483 relates to military ballooning; military captive balloons and their accessories; winding drums, transport wagons, apparatus for inflation. Class 484 relates to aerial navigation; dirigible balloons and guiding apparatus; flying machines, screw propellers; aeroplanes and parachutes. The fourth class mentioned is the one having a particular public interest at the present time.

It was early recognized by officers of the exposition that the navigation of the air is one of the great problems of scientific solution, and that this exposition would not fulfill its duty to the world unless it lent its encouragement and furnished an opportunity for those who are skilled in this difficult science to demonstrate the results of their endeavors.

The experiment of M. Santos-Dumont at Paris last year, when he accomplished the feat of sailing in an air ship around the Eiffel tower and back to the place of beginning, a trip of thirty minutes duration, all but solved the problem of aerial navigation. The magnificent prize which the Louisiana Purchase Exposition proposes to offer makes the matter one of sensational interest, and the tournament will be one of the most novel in history. Secretary Walter B. Stevens of the World's Fair reports that there is now a prospect of at least 100 entries representing not less than ten countries.

An Attack of Pneumonia Warded Off.

"Some time ago my daughter caught a severe cold. She complained of pains in her chest and had a bad cough. I gave Chamberlain's Cough Remedy according to directions and in two days she was well and able to go to school. I have used this remedy in my family for the past seven years and have never known it to fail," says James Prosser, merchant, Annapolis, Bay, Jamaica, West India Islands. The pains in the chest indicated an approaching attack of pneumonia, which in this instance was undoubtedly warded off by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It counteracts any tendency of a cold toward pneumonia. For sale by all druggists.

Doctors

Consult your doctor. If he says, "Take Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for your cough," then do as he says. If he tells you not to take it, then don't take it. He knows. Leave it with him. We are willing. Physicians have been our friends for 60 years.

"For five years I suffered with bronchitis. A few weeks ago I began to take Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and only two bottles entirely cured me." Daniel B. Lipps, Alta, W. Va.

you will meet celebrities at every turn, both in a musical and literary way. On this particular day was to be seen Mr. Will M. Clemens, who has just issued "Rodney Blake" under a non-de plume, Albert Pulitzer, nephew of Joseph Pulitzer, who has recently brought out a poem by Mrs. Wilcox, set to his music, Edward Elmer, the playwright, Mrs. Griffin, the well known London club woman, Mrs. Mattox, and many many more crowd this popular little "Salon" to add their mite and pay their respects to this most charming of women. Mrs. Wilcox says they have sold the last six months, 22,153 of her books, that means something in these days of over-crowded literary matter. It would take too long to say all that could be written about this wonderful woman, and if space would permit we would like to describe her adoption into the Sioux nation, that tribe of Indians being very partial to the lady, and they now consider her one of them; they gave her the name of "White Wings" and a very appropriate one it is, as white is her color, and she wears it always. Her gown of white silk, lace and embroidered panicles was very effective and gave just the finishing touch to this perfectly appointed room, where she received, and said her words of welcome to the crowds of friends and admirers who are always to be found where the name of "Ella Wheeler Wilcox" adorns the door plate.

JANET.

THESE PORTRAITS APPROVED BY THE PRESIDENT.

Mrs. THEODORE ROOSEVELT

The above photographs of Mrs. Roosevelt show the mistress of the White House exactly as she appears to day. All other half-tones being published are made from portraits set for when the first lady of the land was mistress of the executive mansion at Albany, New York. These negatives have only just been made. Proofs have been submitted to the President and his wife and declared by them to be the most faithful likeness possible.

New Light on the Duke of Wellington.

Mrs. Charles Bagot, who publishes through E. Arnold a handsome volume entitled "Links with the Past," is the daughter of the late Admiral Percy, a gallant British officer, who saw a good deal of active service and met with many exciting adventures in many parts of the globe.

The main interest of her book, however, lies in some new light she casts upon the character of the Duke of Wellington. The anecdotes in evidence she gathered from her husband's grandmother, Lady Mornington, who was the Iron Duke's favorite sister-in-law.

As an instance of the confidence which Wellington's mere presence inspired among English people of all classes, Lady Mornington told Mrs. Bagot that when firing was heard at Brussels at the commencement of the battle of Waterloo, she went to wake her maid, a woman called Finlay. The woman merely sat up in bed and said: "Is the duke between us and the French army, my lady?" "Yes, Finlay." "Oh, then, my lady, I shall lie down and go to sleep again."

Some remarks made by the duke at Paris in July, 1815, concerning the great battle, are full of interest. Said he: "I have taken a good deal of pains with many of my battles, but I never took the pains I did at Waterloo. By God! there never was in the annals of the world such a battle! One hundred and fifty thousand men hors de combat! Blucher lost thirty thousand. I can account for twenty thousand. The French may fairly be reckoned at one hundred thousand."

Arthur Upson once asked him, "What would you have done, sir, if the Prussians had not come up?" The duke replied: "The Prussians were of the greatest use in the pursuit, but if they had not come up what should we have done? Why, we should have done as we did. Our army was drawn up into a great many squares; many of these were diminished to a quarter, and the cavalry was riding among them. I saw it was necessary to present a length of front to the enemy. I made them fall into line, four deep, and we completely drove them back. That manoeuvre won the battle; it was never tried before."

Lady Mornington told Mrs. Bagot that when she first saw the duke at Brussels after the battle, and congratulated him, he put his face between his hands to hide his tears, and said: "Oh! do not congratulate me; I have lost all my dearest friends."

Mrs. Bagot pertinently comments that Sir Herbert Maxwell's inference, in his "Life of Wellington," that the duke had no feelings does not seem to be borne out by the experience of those who know best. —New York Herald.

SURPRISING RESULTS.

A Simple Internal Remedy Makes Remarkable Cures of Catarrh.

People who have used sprays, inhalants, salves and washes for catarrh and have found how useless and unimportant they are, will be agreeably surprised at results following the use of a pleasant, internal remedy in tablet form; druggists everywhere admit that Stuart's Catarrh Tablets, which they sell at 50 cents for full sized treatment is the safest and most effective and regular of all catarrh remedies.

Nearly all cheap cough mixtures and throat lozenges contain opiates; these cheap medicines give a temporary relief, especially with little children, by destroying nerve sensation; the irritation in throat, which causes coughing is temporarily removed, not by removing the cause but by deadening the nerves of feeling; the irritation is not felt although it is still there and will promptly return.

Stuart's Catarrh Tablets is the best remedy to remove catarrhal secretion, whether in the nose, throat or stomach because they are composed of wholesome antiseptics like Iodine, Blood Root, etc.; when you use these tablets you know what you are putting into your system and not taking chances with cocaine, opiates or similar poisons found in so many catarrh cures and cough remedies.

Dr. Ramsdell in commenting on catarrh cures says: "I can heartily recommend Stuart's Catarrh Tablets, because they contain no cocaine nor other dangerous drug found in so many advertised catarrh cures. I have known of many cases of long standing catarrh of the head and throat completely cured by the daily use of these tablets for several weeks. One case in particular, which I could not reach with an inhalant or spray and where the catarrh caused daily headaches and a noticeable loss of hearing was entirely cured by this harmless but effective remedy."

Dr. Walnwright says: "I never hesitate to prescribe Stuart's Catarrh Tablets for catarrhal headaches and catarrhal deafness because I know them to be perfectly safe for child or adult and have seen many remarkable cures resulting from their regular daily use; because they are advertised and sold in drug stores is no reason why any good physician should not use them because we should seize upon the means of cure wherever found."

Stuart's Catarrh Tablets are especially valuable for catarrh of the cold in children because they are pleasant to the taste and may be used freely to break up severe colds and croup at the very beginning.

All druggists sell the remedy at fifty cents for a full sized package.

IN PLACE OF LAPDOGS.

London.—The Princess of Wales has made habits fashionable in England. Children are supplanting lap dogs and silken coated cats as drawing room pets. How long the babies will rule no one can tell, but at present they are wearing the crown of popularity. There are three bright children in the palace of the Princess of Wales, two boys and a flaxen, curly haired little girl. These tots were left behind when the prince and princess went on the great colonial tour from which they but recently returned. And when they came home the glad welcome the royal mother received from her three children was so touching that the whole nation was put into a sympathetic mood. Now the princess is rarely seen without having one or more of her babies with her.

Naturally, when the future queen does a thing, that sets the fashion which all other titled ladies follow. That is the reason why fewer dogs and more children are seen in the fashionable drawing rooms today.

One thing the princess absolutely forbids and it is for any member of her suite or one of her servants to kiss a dog or a cat. She does this for sanitary reasons, having been informed by her physician that such animals frequently communicate eczema to human beings.—Philadelphia North American.
