Los Angeles is credited by the press with being the only city in the United States where the summer gets along without a single shower.

White Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Prudhoe, living in Ridge's motor, eight miles up Durango Creek, were during the past week engaged in removing two wagons which were completely submerged by flood, involving a loss of $5,000, with $1,000 insurance.

A Chinaman who is working on the South Clear Creek placer, east Black Hawk, Colorado, is said to have a solid weight weighing 100 pounds which he refuses to divulge his price. It was probably taken from a silver-miner's wagon.

James M. Tink has sold to Harry Foss the Alaska, North Star, No. Five Ute and Kentucky mining claims in the Tarnayell mining district, China, for a consideration of $20,000. The claim is all that will go down grave a hundred, says the Denver News.

A Photo engine known as "Black Diamond" has been sold to a Verdi, Nevada, by buying wild horses. Misfortune followed the Black Diamond, for whom she had deserted her own buck, was the cause. The team committed suicide on the fourth July because of the desecration.

None of the cities in the state of Wyoming are now making annual assessments of the state schools, according to the Larimer Democrat. Another effort is being made to have the coöperative character of commerce held in the movement, but it is questionable that the people do not want to contribute to the expense of the experiment. It was reported that Wyoming wanted it, but it is now learned that this is not correct.

Charles Gorman, a colored boy, aged about ten years, of Los Angeles, Cal., met with a terrible accident at the end of the cable road on Tuesday. With some others he was coming down the cable when he ran into the return track, when he seized his leg, and was dragged along the wheels. His right leg was fractured at the upper part of the thigh, and his left leg was broken below the knee, so far as the records show. It is hardly possible that he will live.

The Denver (Colo.) Daily Lode reports that Hazelwood Lyons was killed on the 14th while sawing logs. The boy started and one of the logs rolled upon him, crushing his breast. He was found near the road, dead, with the log still across his chest. His age and sex are favorably known in that section. He was a nephew of Charles Lyons, of Eagle Valley, and leaves a father, who resides in Sheep Creek, Utah; one brother in Arizona and another in Eagle Valley.

A few days ago, while playing on the beach at the mouth of the Colorado River, about four miles from Moab, Utah, with nine children, this four-year-old daughter of Mr. Weier fell into a deep pool and sank to the bottom. The mother heard the outcry, and running to the stream, plucked the child from the water. After several unsuccessful attempts she succeeded in grasping the girl and bringing her to the surface. The child was finally resuscitated, though having been in the water nearly five minutes.

Professor Matthews, the Buck Rogers (Wyo.) Miner, brought to this office on Tuesday morning, a large paper containing two or three feet in length, which he had torn from a tree growing in front of the old stone house, which was planted in April. It is quite a curiosity in this and goes more especially as it was grown on what was formerly a sand bank. The paper is well preserved, and places it in the estimate of the writer as a specimen of what can be accomplished in tree growing even on a sand mound with care and attention.

Yesterday morning says the Cheyenne Daily, United States Marshal Austin and Deputy Mail returned from the west, and in their叙述 they had the Indians wanted for murder in the United States captured. They are John King and W. J. Prudhoe, of Rock Springs, and J. C. Morris of Rawlins. King is charged with killing the man who put the nail on the engine at Rock Springs, and Prudhoe performed a workman with a bow bullet, and the other man was not stated. They are now in the county jail, and will probably remain there until their trial on Monday before Judge Blane.

Great excitement has been caused at Rico, Colo., by the attempted murder of Henry Kringenauer. A man named Murphy met Kringenauer in Rico's saloon, and demanded that Kringenauer pay him the $100 he had loaned the company operating his smelter before it passed into the hands of the present owner. Kringenauer said he would not do it, as he was in no more responsibility than the other members of the company. As the man was about to strike Kringenauer on the head, but fortunately the nail only grazed the side of his face, the powder burning his mustache and hair. The man then ran out of the saloon, and the other man ran home to an adjacent cabin, and is now in the custody of the sheriff.

The last home of the Landers (Wyo.) cattle range, on the Colorado River, has given way and down the river near the Beets Hill are the owners of several herd of buffalo. They have one bull, two, one half-bone, and one three-quarter bone, and two half-bone males, and one half-bone female. They are all fine animals, especially the full blood, and are attracting considerable attention from our people. They are now on their way to Jackson's Lake, where they will take food and provision to raise a herd of cattle. They are the last of the bunching of the cattle, and we have never seen any of them should not allow them to have the country without seeing them. There is still one more bunch, probably a half dozen, still remaining on the Red Desert, north of Laramie, and those people are going to endeavor to capture a few head, starting to get their herd.
