

TO TRY OIL ON SECOND STREET.

Council Committee Decides to Give it a Fair Test Before Macadamizing.

ALMOST AS GOOD AS ASPHALT

Oil Treatment Costs but $1.70 Per Front Foot, While Macadam
Costs $2.50.

It is very probable that the oil treatment plan will be given a test on Second street. At the meeting of the city council committee on streets last night a petition was presented which bore the signatures of S. B. Milner, J. E. Frick, G. R. Bothwell and Henry Phillips by its agents, and which asked that no further steps be taken towards macadamizing Second street, as proposed in a former petition, until the oil plan is investigated. Some samples of oil roads were shown by George H. Nichols, who explained the method used in California. It was suggested that a base of four inches of macadam be laid on Second street and then cover that with a layer of oil, sprinkled with sand enough to absorb the oil, and put on another layer of oil and sand. It is claimed that such a plan would give a surface almost as good as asphalt paving. The cost of the oil plan will be $1.70 per front foot while the cost of the regulation macadam would be $2.50 per front foot. It will be seen that the oil system is far cheaper and further than that it will require no sprinkling, as the oil absorbs the dust as fast as it falls. The only repairing necessary would be to replace the layers of oil and sand. It is very likely that the committee will give the oil plan a fair test by oil paving an experiment and if it proves successful it will be adopted for the remainder of the street.

MRS. ROSELLE KNOTT NEARLY DROWNED.

Miss Roselle Knott, the "Ideal Mary Tudor," as Charles Major, the author of "When Knighthood was in Flower," calls her, narrowly escaped drowning this summer on Lake Ontario, Canada, where Miss Knott has her summer home. The facts of the case are as follows: Mr. Shipman, Miss Knott's manager, had just returned from abroad where he had gone to attain expert knowledge for setting furniture and bric-a-brac, to be used this season in Miss Knott's massive production of "When Knighthood was in Flower" (which appears Nov. 27 and 28) and had gone up to Canada to make the final arrangements with Miss Knott and was stopping at the Grand Hotel across the lake. Miss Knott, who is the owner of one of the finest yachts on the lake, suggested that Mr. Shipman allow her brother yacht, Mr. Shipman consented. When about 300 yards out one of the sails became fast and before it could be loosened the boat upset and left the three in the water. Miss Knott, who is an excellent swimmer, became exhausted and went down for the second time, when Mr. Shipman managed to get hold of her and succeeded in keeping her afloat until she was rescued by a passing boat. The stage came to a halt, and the public one of its greatest actresses, Miss Knott, the youngest star who ever attempted the role of "Mary Tudor" and in the three seasons she has played the part has secured more laudatory comments than any other actress.

SCHOOL TEACHER'S DEMISE.

Mrs. Francella J. Ames of the Wasatch Dies at the Hospital.

After an illness of less than a week, Mrs. Francella J. Ames, a teacher in the Wasatch school, died suddenly at the Holy Cross hospital yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Ames was taken ill in her school room Friday last and had to be removed to the hospital, where she developed an acute attack of kidney trouble, from which death resulted. Mrs. Ames has taught in the Salt Lake schools since 1882. She lived with her two children, both of whom were grown, at 112 East South Temple street. She came to Utah early in life with her husband, Chauncey Ames, who was employed as a draughtsman in the city engineer's office prior to his death in 1901. The funeral will be held from the Presbyterian church tomorrow, Friday, at 10 a. m. Friends are invited. Interment in Mt. Olivet cemetery.

ning ranch, but the following narrative from the Wyoming Tribune of Cheyenne, tells in considerable interesting light on the subject. The account says:

"Lord Charles Kennedy, the Scottish nobleman who has been engaged in the ranch business at Iron Mountain, near the divide of the Teton range, has been reported to be near Bloemfontein with a large army and much alarm was felt lest that city should be recaptured by the Boers."

"The trouble at Iron Mountain, which has existed for the past two or three years, is not believed to be due to a fight over the range or between cattle and sheep interests, but a neighborhood quarrel which existed before Kennedy located there. He bought his ranch from parties involved in the trouble and obtained with them the ill-will of his neighbors. During the past few months several incendiary fires have occurred at his ranches, involving considerable loss and as a result of these cowardly methods Kennedy preferred to sell out and leave rather than remain and suffer from the secret attacks of his enemies. "Kennedy invested $30,000 in his Iron Mountain property and was fairly successful in his operations. This, however, was not the case with his other ranches as he is very wealthy and engaged in the livestock business at Iron Mountain for the novelty of the thing."

AMUSEMENTS.

It was hardly to be expected that "The Marriage of Kitty" would draw a heavy audience as soon after its first production, and especially in view of the fact that Max Firmman was liberally billed as a special feature of the original. Last night's audience, therefore, was only fairly good, but there was no discounting its enthusiasm. The humorous simplicity of the comedy were followed with an upsurge of laughter from beginning to end, even though they were not new to many in the audience. The company is a capable one, although it must be admitted that the loss of Mr. Firmman is somewhat felt. Miss Alice Johnson in the title role was bright and charming throughout, and none of the opportunities of the role were missed. Mr. Wolf in the part of Sir Reginald, lent good support, though there was an occasional tendency to overdo the role. Mr. Hale, and Miss Belden, and Mr. Baird. RELATES HIS EXPERIENCES.

Tells the Deseret News What He Saw
In the Ice-Bound Precincts of The Far North.

Prof. C. B. Newton, the noted humorist who lectured yesterday at the L. D. S. University, has a wealth of interesting stories gathered in his travels since his last visit to Salt Lake.

During the past summer Mr. Newton made a pleasure trip to Alaska. This month he has appeared at a number of towns in Nevada including Reno, Carson City, Tonopah and Goldfield. A reporter of the "News" called on Prof. Newton to whom he talked entertainingly. Among other things the genial professor said:

"A summer outing in Alaska cannot be surpassed if the individual is a lover of nature; whether he be fond of traveling on magnificent waterways, viewing rugged mountain scenery, astonishing glacial formations, beautiful verdure, decked islands or perchance touched by awe-inspiring solitude or chilled with the fascinations. The main element of the sportsman's quest, it is all there. Alaska is truly a wonderland and I can only hope to give you a few snapshots of the gate or entrance thereto."

HIS TRIP TO ALASKA.

"It was on Aug. 13 that I started from Vancouver on the City of Seattle, bound for Skagway. For four days our steamer plowed through Lynn canal, the most remarkable waterway in the world. For 1,200 miles northward we were almost continually landlocked and at only two or three entrances did old ocean heave its head, and at those few points she attended strictly to business and so did we. The second day we were into a dense fog. Our steamer whistled almost continually and in response was reverberated the most pronounced echo, being repeated five times with startling exactness. The main land was to our right; Vancouver Island only a few miles wide, but hundreds of miles in length, was to our left. Occasionally when the channel was several miles wide, densely clad islands dotted the waterway. Then again the channel became so narrow that a person could have thrown a rock onto the land from either the right or left side of the steamer. This was especially the case in the narrows. The further north we went the smaller were the tides, and more precipitous the mountains rising from the sea into the clouds of feet, and covered with snow and ice, while live glaciers many miles in circumference were gradually moving toward the sea. Immense icebergs were breaking from the glaciers, producing quite a menace to navigation. The flat fished islets are supposed to lay gone down with all on board after striking an immense iceberg. While we were in Alaska the steamer Humbird struck an iceberg near Douglas Island resulting in a tremendous panic on board."

G. Kraft, a tourist from Florence, Italy, is in the city, and says that one must visit Salt Lake in order to appreciate its attractions.

Robert D. Grant has gone into business in Los Angeles, and is president of the American Mines and Exploration company of that city.

W. R. Beebe of Caldwell, Ida., is at the Wilson, and states that two companies have started to build electric roads between Boise and Caldwell.

Mrs. G. Fred Culmer has recovered sufficiently from her operation at Holy Cross hospital to be removed to the home of friends at 622 East Second South street.

Ed Kimball, the pianist, has taken a sabbatical position with the Clayton Music company. Mr. Kimball is a Bachelor of Music graduate, and assistant organist at the Tabernacle.

P. H. Lannan returned yesterday afternoon from his extended trip through western Europe and the British Isles. Postmaster Thomas, who accompanied him, will return later in the week from the east.

M. D. Walls, secretary of the Consolidated Wagon & Machine company, leaves later in the week for Chicago and the east to make purchase contracts for the season of 1906. He will be away a month or over.

Miss Mabel Sellers, who has for several years been bookkeeper and stenographer with the People's Forwarding company of this city, leaves Friday for Hamilton county, California, where she has accepted a valued business position.

Major Silva, one of the youngest artillery officers in the civil war, and formerly a well known resident of this city, is now a resident of Seattle where he is doing the whole of his immediate charge of Jeff Davis in Fort Monroe at the close of the war.

Dr. S. E. Newton, a very old resident of this city, visited the Provo state asylum a few days ago, and was shown through the whole establishment by Dr. Calder, the chief physician. He expressed the opinion that no more perfect institution exists in any state of the Union.

E. A. Burrell, local manager at Montpelier for the Consolidated Wagon & Machine company of this city, and G. Wright local manager at Idaho Falls, have been in this city for the last two days, conferring with General Manager G. T. Odell and Chairman George Romney of the executive board.

Banker Thomas Reed of Dagupan, P. I., is at the Knutsford, en route to Atlanta, Ga., and says that there is a season of commercial prosperity there. He also states that the visit of the congressional committee to the islands will be productive of good, and that a few railroad projects are on foot in the islands.

A. E. Bunker and William Dampier of St. Paul, Minn., are in the city, visiting with the family of R. W. Firmman, en route to Los Angeles. Mr. Bunker was formerly secretary of the Western Newspaper Union and established in 1897, the Salt Lake branch. He has not been here since, and expresses himself as much surprised at the growth and development of the city and its surroundings.

MINER TAKES A HAND.

"I related a remarkable story about the famous New Zealand fish pylonus jack and many of my hearers were skeptical, declaring it a fish story. An old gray haired miner said: 'Mr. Newton, we have no remarkably individual fish in these waters, but we have them here in great quantities. I have actually crossed the river, dry shot, on the backs of salmon during spawning season. We also have' added the old miner, 'extremely cold weather in the interior of Alaska during the winter. I remember quite distinctly being seated in my log cabin during a blizzard. I had a blazing fire of pine logs in the place, the thermometer kept dropping down and down until the mercury was scarcely perceptible. Finally the cold became so intense that the pitch in those pine logs was frozen and it put out the fire.'"

It is absorbingly interesting to listen to the individual experience of the gold seekers of "ninety-eight" the most exciting year in the history of Alaska. One gentleman told me that formerly he was a banker, but unfortunate investments beguiled him. He took a chance to recuperate his fortune during the early mining excitement in Alaska. "I arrived in Skagway," said he, " penniless, save my camp outfit, consisting of beans, bacon, flour, potatoes and the necessary seasoning properties. I had in addition to this a stove and a couple of flat irons. Those flat irons suggested the laundry business; but I had no money to buy soap and other necessary requisites. Realizing, however, that there was no competition in this business I called on one of the principal hotel proprietors and solicited his laundry. He said I could have it, but he was compelled to have it returned by 7 p. m. It was then 4 p. m. I told him that was impossible; so he made final the demand by requiring me to return the sheets and pillow slips by that time. I accepted his proposition, took the laundry to my cabin, hung the sheets and pillow slips on the brush for ventilation purposes while gold miners were being heated. Then I sprinkled and ironed them and carefully folding them returned to the hotel with the goods promptly at 7 p. m. The proprietor was so impressed with my skill and promptness that he gave me a perpetual lease on his laundry, at the same time paying me for my work on the sheets and pillow slips. Thus originated Skagway's present first class laundry. Necessity is indeed the mother of invention.

SNOW-CAPPED SENTINELS.

"While at Skagway I climbed to the summit of one of the highest peaks and could count a thousand snow capped sentinels extending apparently to the limit of the horizon. It was then all this was that wonderful Aurora Borealis. A beautiful bow of white light spanned the heavens from horizon to horizon, extending from west to east, to the north at the verge of the horizon beautifully colored lights of astonishing variety flashed half way to the apex of the bow; finally it became one grand panorama of continuously beautiful varied lights flashing from the horizon at the extreme north and striking directly above one's head quickly blending their colors and that superb rain bow, disappearing and reappearing with lightning like rapidity. It was truthfully a marvelous display."

STORIES OF TOURISTS.

"Alaskans delight in telling some quaint stories about tourists. A number of old men direct from London landed at Askeroot, Canada, on the Canadian Pacific Railway, 1,700 miles from Dawson. They threw their hats in the air, one exclaiming, 'Thank God the worst is over. Late in the day I dream what it means to "mush" it over that trackless waste. They were about 50 miles from Askeroot, when one of their horses balked. The guide suggested to start a fire under the horse in order to make him move. He moved about six feet and barked again with the sled over the fire and sled and provisions caught fire and were consumed.'"

"One of the tourists landed at Juneau last summer and while walking up the street saw a large Totem pole in front of a curio store. He asked the owner of the store to let him see the pole. The owner pointed to a bucket of water at the foot of the pole. She innocently inquired how long it took that water to reach the top. "Small money is scarce among Alaskans. Two New England old maids saw a group of Alaskan Indian children on the streets of Ketchikan. They were anxious to secure a snap shot. One of them said they will pay you if you allow us to take your pictures. The children acquiesced. After securing their picture they presented each of the old women with a penny. The children were amazed, not knowing its value, never having seen a penny. A large hearted miner stepped up to the children and handed each a half a dollar, exclaiming, 'give me those pennies. I want them as souvenirs.'"

"Alaska is a land of inexhaustible resources, which have scarcely been touched. In time Alaska will surprise the world in its tremendous possibilities."

Climatic Cures.

The influence of climatic conditions in the cure of consumption is very much overdrawn. The poor patient and the rich patient, too, can do much better at home by proper attention to food digestion, and a regular use of German Syrup. Free exportation in the morning is made certain by German Syrup, so is a good night's rest and the absence of that weakening cough and debilitating night sweats. Restless nights and the exhaustion due to coughing, the greatest danger and dread of the consumptive, can be prevented or stopped by taking German Syrup liberally and regularly. Should you be able to go to a warmer climate, you will find that of the thousands of consumptives there, the few who are benefited and regain strength are those who use German Syrup. Trial bottles, 25c; regular size, 75c. At all druggists.

Withdrawal of Trade Discounts by "The Trust Responsible."

Local shoe dealers report a steady rising market, especially since the United States Leather company (the trust) has cut off the usual trade discounts, which makes an advance of five cents a pair in the wholesale price. Shoes that formerly retailed at $3.50 now sell for $4, and dealers can not make as much at the latter figure now.

INTERESTING FISH STORY.

"When we speak of Alaska, people usually think of a mining section and few realize that the fishing interests are even greater than mining. Annually $5,000,000 worth of fish are shipped from those waters. At Ketchikan we stroked up Trout creek, a small, fresh water stream, which flows into the sea at that point. We had often heard marvelous stories of the number of salmon in the small fresh water streams during spawning season, and at Kitchikan we saw the story more than verified. About a mile from town there is a pool in this stream possibly 30 yards in length and 20 feet in width, literally jammed with salmon from the surface to the bottom. They were so numerous it was impossible to fish for trout owing to the fact that your hook was continually snarling the salmon. It is safe to say there were 10,000 in this particular pool. This same condition we were informed, existed throughout the length of this as well as other streams during spawning season. It was a painful sight to see fish work their way through a few inches of water, scoured and bruised until life was almost extinct in their effort to fulfill nature's law to spawn in fresh water. It is claimed that few salmon that spawn in fresh water ever return to the sea alive."

as they were able to when the former figure obtained. The prices in rubber goods are also advancing steadily, on account of the ever extending demand for rubber for a multitude of objects, as in bicycle and automobile and carriage tires, surgical goods, clothing, boots and shoes, etc. Dealers say it is impossible to buy absolutely pure gum shoes now, as was possible years ago, and the trade has been demoralized by consumers insisting on cheap goods, as for instance, "rubbers" that sell at 25 cents. Such goods wear out quickly, when the payment of $1 for a pair of rubbers would secure an article likely to last an entire winter. In view of the loading up of the market on cheap stock that does not last long, the custom of waterproofing shoes is being more and more observed. This makes the shoe impervious to moisture, and answers all the purposes of a rubber.

Dealers are making the sale of the various preparations for waterproofing quite a feature of the winter trade.
