The reason why Peruna has become a standard catarrh remedy the world discovers his mistake. Not only is his There is no other possible explanation of it. It is simply idle talk for any one to pretend that advertising can create a popularity for a medicine equal to that find them out very quickly.

Death Claims Mrs. Lucy B. Young In Her Seventy-Fifth Year,

Still another of the first residents of ; her recovery have been steadily grow-Utah went to her rest last night when ing less. Lucy B. Young died at her home, 709 north First West street, of old age. Mrs. Young had been failing in health for some time and the end was not unexp ted by her immediate family, most om were at her bedside during the Best hours of her life. Mrs. Young Fin the seventy-fifth year of her age, and had lived in Utah for 58 years, surviving her husband, President Brigham Young, 27 years.

Her greatest work in life has been connected with the temples of her chosen people. She was present at the dedlcation of every temple which has been built under the auspices of the Church, and assisted likewise in the first ordinances of each of them. Refinement of character and the social graces were strong traits for which she was noted and loved among her wide acquaintenceship with women both of Utah and the east. In the affairs of the National Council of Women she was an active participant, and attended two of their sessions at Washington, D. C.

Six years ago she also attended the convention of the International Council of Women, and after its adjournment epent a year in Germany traveling with her gifted and talented granddaughter, Emma Lucy Gates, who was then acquiring her musical education. Her health was always excellent until the early part of last winter, when an attack of rheumatism caused her to take a trip to southern California. Since returning from her visit a few weeks ago turning from her visit a few weeks ago she has not left her bed, and hopes for the Eighteenth ward chapel.

Mrs. Lucy Bigelow Young's whole life has been one of devotion to the Church, whose standard she adopted as a child when to acknowledge its name meant to be driven and exiled from home and city after city in the states leading westward to the great trail to Utah.

She was of New England stock, her father, Nahum Bigelow, coming west to Illinois during the first decade of the nineteenth century, accompanied by his wife, Mary Gibbs, also of New Enghis wife, Mary Gibbs, also of New England parentage. At Coles county, Ill., on Oct. 3, 1850. Lucy was born, and as a little girl joined the Church with her parents. Enjoying the common let of others of her faith, she joined the driven band at Nauvoo, and in 1846 went out to Winter Quarters on the westward trail. In 1870 Mrs. Young went to St. George to arrange a winter home for President Young, whose failing health necessitated a warmer climate than Sait Lake during the coldest months. The completion of the Temple there gave her an opportunity to engage in her favorite work, in which she spent the greater efforts of her life. Mrs. Young did not cease her active participation in Temple work until 1877, and pation in Tempie work until 1877, and in 1880 made a special trip to eastern states to compile a genealogical rec-ord of her family. In 1887 she fulfilled a mission to the Sandwich Islands, in

"I have never been in a community where, in my judgment, the standard of morality was higher, where there was less strife, or where the principle of human brotherhood was more signally or more beautifully exemplified. "Domestic life among them as viewed by the stranger who comes within their gates, is exemplary and to the observer appears altogether charming, whether egarded with reference to their family devotions in which parents and children daily participate, their unostentatious hospitality (they would not send a dog from their door, until they had fed him), or the music which elevates and refines the family intercourse, (the humblest dwelling has some kind of instrument, and the Mormon of either sex who cannot and does not sing, is a rare avis).
