Bott, members of the free library board from the west side of the city, against the location selected by the board for the library site, viz., the northwest corner of First East street and Academy avenue. The protest was based on the ground that the site selected was about two blocks and a half east of the center of population. Figures in the nature of school population statistics were given to show this, and the argument presented that, as the library was for the general good of all it should be as centrally located as possible, and as such central location the site offered on Third West street was suggested as the most suitable one. The question of the proper time for the council to consider this matter was brought up, and it was generally considered that the time would be well a deed for a site is presented to the council.
