SUING FAIR EMILY.

James K. Emmet Wants a Divorce From His Wife, Miss Lytton.

EDMUND HAYES CORRESPONDENT.

All Well Known Musical People and Two of the Most Salt Lake Favorites.

James K. Emmet, the well known actor leaving his wife, Miss Emily Lytton, for a divorce, Edmund Joseph Hayes is named as a respondent. The two latter lived only at a West Temple street cottage in this city last winter while they were members of the Lyceum company. Both made many friends here who will be pained but only partially surprised at the development. Mr. Emmet served the papers on his wife less than a week ago through the medium of New York lawyers. The process was summarily done and O'Gorman's daily papers have had much to say concerning it. The Journal says:

For a month J. K. Emmet has been trying to serve divorce papers on his wife, Mrs. James K. Emmet, on August 24, the allegation being the statutory one, and the co-respondent named being Edmund Joseph Hayes. The Emmets have not gotten on well together ever since they came together on September 23, of last year, when Emmet charged his wife deserted him for Hayes. She was Emily Lytton, divorced wife of John A. Lytton, who is now married to another who plays in her husband's companies and nobody knew there was any trouble between them until June of 1895, when San Francisco, where both were popular, was tried to kill his wife. At that was known about it was that there was a row on one of the racetracks, and that the husband had fired his gun. The wife was shot and a night in jail and the master was hauled up, people accepting the story that the trouble was the result of a drunken freak on the part of the husband, and as the wife could not find nobody interested about it.

Hayes, the man named in Emmet's complaint, was then in San Francisco playing at Mason's Opera house, a big 10 seat house, in the most prominent part of the East Side of New York. Probably Mrs. Emmet's acquaintance with Hayes was at the bottom of the shooting, but it was not suspected at that time.

Last September the Emmets were playing in Hayes, Texas. According to the story told at that time and since repeated, Mrs. Emmet had been for some time contemplating a separation. She was getting along very well with Hayes, and he was having knowledge in store to satisfy a vacation. This said she was run down with overwork, and, finally, she left for Dallas, where she joined the party he received her from his home. She left a letter explaining why she would rise with him no longer, and "the husband may" is supposed to have been Since that time she has been playing in Hayes' company all over the United States, but this is the first time she and her husband have been in New York last night. Now J. K. Emmet left New York last night. None of his friends will admit they know his destination. He was seen in the theater while the detectives were waiting for him.

Mr. Emmet went to San Francisco after leaving Dallas and joined the Stockwell-Clegg company which was to open in Portland, Ore. There seems to have been rather a lively time in San Francisco, and subsequently in Hayes, and now, however, missed the summer that should have taken them to Portland and their adventures during the day or two before they proceeded by train got into the San Francisco newspaper. She played with question of begging, therefore he found the company for two weeks, closing at Denver. Then she went to Salt Lake as a member of Edward Joseph Hayes' stock company. Mrs. Margaret Hayes, the daughter of the woman who is master of the hotel set at some $100,000, left by ex-Senator James G. Fair, of San Francisco, came and after that and took care of him some time. Though she was in Hayes' company, her husband did not have the evidence he wanted. Hayes, however, was compelled by the fact that he sat at No. 8 West One hundred and Fifth street had been rubbed over $200 worth of jewelry stolen. The company was the first to come to him. Mr. Hayes, Edmund Joseph Hayes. The police were suspicious about the robbery, and pretty soon the papers published the news that the jeweler had been found guilty of a well-contrived plan to commit the robbery. Hayes' defense was that among the recovered jewels was a jewel identical to "J. K. E."

Emmet had his troubles of his own money, and had turned to his wife, Mrs. McCall, for assistance. Hayes left the Bat on One Hundred and Fifth street and crushing his right leg. He was removed to St. Mark's hospital where under the direction of Dr. Pinckney the mangy limb was amputated just above the knee. It was amputated and 22 years of age. He came here from Helena, Montana, three months ago.

WHISKY HIS EVIDENCE.

A Finance Refers the Court to His Bottles as Sufficient Evidence.

H. W. House is the name of a man who was arrested as a Commercial street this morning for drunkenness and belligerence. The arresting officer and the complaining witness against him was Peterman Riddle, who took the witness stand and testified that House had asked a police officer for 20 cents while in a semi-intoxicated state. The officer also gave testimony to the fact that House had been "driving on the law" for some time past.

"Stop," shouted the defendant as he arose from the prisoner's bench.

"What's the matter?" inquired the court, "Do you want to testify?"

"Yes, you bet I do," was the prisoner's rejoinder. "I'll tell you then, take the stand," said the court.

House, who was yet laboring under difficulties, staggered to the witness stand, and was held by the court to give his testimony.

"What's the matter?" inquired the evidence, "said he, rather laconically.

"Just hell," exclaimed the court, "What do you mean?"

"Why a bottle of whisky, that's all I want."

Justice Wenger agreed with the defendant that whisky was sufficient evidence to raise of drunkenness, for he couldn't see where it was pertinent to the case.

He was sent to the theater while the detectives were waiting for him.
