WISE WORDS.

It is thirty-eight years since Horace Greely delivered an address in New York, at a celebration of the anniversary of the birthday of Benjamin Franklin. The words of wisdom that fell from the old philosopher's lips on that occasion are as appropriate today as they were at the time they were spoken. Among other things he sald?

"I hope no one here gives heed to the mumbling of self-styled political econ-omists about over production and the kindred phrases with which counsel is darkened. Over production—of whai? Where? Can there be over production of food when so many, even in our midst, are suffering the pangs of fam-ine?
