

HENRY DINWOODEY

Pioneer Merchant, Retires From Active Business.

The reorganization of the H. Dinwoodey Furniture company which took place quietly last month, marked the practical retirement, at least from active business, of a pioneer figure who has been prominently before the business public of Utah for 47 years. We refer to Mr. Henry Dinwoodey, whose name as a Utah furniture man might almost be said to be a household word throughout the state.

On April 8, the Dinwoodey Furniture company was re-organized with the following officers: President, Henry Dinwoodey, vice-president and manager, H. M. Dinwoodey, secretary, W. M. B. Shepherd, treasurer, L. G. Dinwoodey, 1858 he and Mr. Bird went to America. Mr. Bird, an old saw mill which they found there, and spent the time of their exile in making lumber and shoe pegs. After peace was restored they returned home and Mr. Dinwoodey then laid the foundations of the great business with which his name has ever since been identified.

The sketch on this page shows the store on Main street, where he first did business as "Henry Dinwoodey, furniture dealer." This was in 1858 and the location was the ground opposite R. K. Thomas' store. His work was devoted to making furniture from native lumber, and it grew so steadily that in the year 1861, he bought from Theo. Bullock a piece of land on First south, a part of the premises which the big store now occupies. He often relates with amusement that he paid for his land by finding in the remaining of Mr. Bullock's lot. He built a work shop on the new site which was steadily added to, the number of his employees being increased to 150. Cash was a scarce article in those days, and his manufactures had to be exchanged for merchandise and other articles.

"I was always on hand for a trade," says Mr. Dinwoodey, "and anything coming—antiques, lumber, adobe, beef, provisions, boots and shoes, and even beet molasses and soft soap being taken in exchange. There was no regular pay-day, but whenever a man required anything I would give him an order on some tradesman, with whom I kept a credit account, and would pay him for his. I thus enabled many of my employees to obtain homes. When one of them stated to me that he wished to purchase a certain lot and build himself a house, I would trade for the land for him, and give him an order on the lumberman, adobe maker, brick maker, etc., and by this means he would get his house built and would repay me in labor, which payment being complete, I would give him a deed for his property."

In 1869 Mr. Dinwoodey went east, taking the cars from Ogden, as Salt Lake was not then connected by rail, and laid in a stock of goods, among which was new machinery, consisting of a planer and mortising and shaping machines, and other tools, all of which greatly aided his manufacture of furniture. In 1871 the city began to grow rapidly, especially on Main street. Mr. Dinwoodey removed his old board store and shop, erecting a two-story building of more approved style. This, however, did not fully take care of his steadily increasing trade, and he moved a part of the stock to the First south street store, doing business for a time at both places. Later he leased his Main street property, and removed entirely to First south street, where he has been located ever since. In 1873 he built a three-story brick structure on the ground, and by 1885 the business, begun 26 years before with a few home-made tables and chairs, had grown in value to over $100,000. In May, 1890, came the disastrous fire which destroyed the store and its immense stock, the loss being about $120,000, only half of which was covered by insurance. Rallying with characteristic energy, Mr. Dinwoodey built the big block in which the business is carried on today.

Mr. Dinwoodey's activity has been by no means limited to the furniture trade. In 1874 he became a life member of the Deseret Agricultural & Manufacturing society, and for years was one of its directors and its treasurer. In 1879 he was a director of the Utah Eastern Railway, and in 1880 treasurer of the Home Coal company. In 1881 he was appointed by the board of trade, chairman of the committee to investigate the subjects of home-made furniture. In 1886 he was a director of the Wire Fence & Wire Mattress Manufacturing company. The same year he became a director of the Home Fire Insurance company, a position which he still retains. For some time he was a director of the Deseret National bank. In 1883 he was elected director of Z. C. M. I. and 1889 one of the board of the Salt Lake City Railway.

In St. Louis Mr. Dinwoodey was an active member of the branch of the Church in that place, and he was ordained an Elder by Theo. Rigley, president of the branch, in 1861. Mr. Dinwoodey and his family began their voyage to Utah in May, 1855, he taking passage for himself and wife on a steamboat to Astoria, Kas., where he bought a wagon and cattle for the long journey across the plains. with the following as the board of directors: Henry Dinwoodey, H. M. Dinwoodey, L. G. Dinwoodey, Jas. H. Moyle, Richard P. Morris, Jos. A. Jennings and Wm. C. Wright, the first two of whom are deceased. Mr. Wright is the well known young business man of Ogden, who will in the near future take up his residence in Salt Lake and enter the furniture establishment. The capital of the company is $300,000, and includes the valuable real estate and store in which it does business, both having been turned over to the corporation by Mr. Dinwoodey.

Although retaining the presidency of the company, Mr. Dinwoodey does not propose to take active part in the conduct of the business hereafter. He has been in the harness since 1858, and now—close upon his 80th birthday—he is taking a well earned rest in southern California. The business will be carried on by the officers of the company.

In New Orleans, Mr. Dinwoodey worked as carpenter at $3 a day, four times as much as he had received in England for the same labor, and then engaged in the manufacture of rain-water cisterns with which New Orleans houses had to be supplied, owing to the muddy water of the Mississippi. In 1850 Mr. Dinwoodey and his family moved to St. Louis, and Mrs. Dinwoodey opened a dry goods and notion store, while her husband obtained a good situation as head pattern maker in a foundry.

St. Louis Mr. Dinwoodey was an active member of the branch of the Church in that place, and he was ordained an Elder by Theo. Rigley, president of the branch, in 1861. Mr. Dinwoodey and his family began their voyage to Utah in May, 1855, he taking passage for himself and wife on a steamboat to Astoria, Kas., where he bought a wagon and cattle for the long journey across the plains. above named, with his son, Mr. Henry M. Dinwoodey as manager. As is generally known this gentleman has been the practical head of the institution for a long time past and knows the business thoroughly. The career of Henry Dinwoodey is a remarkable one, and the story of his life from the time he entered Utah in 1855, might almost be said to be the story of the commercial development of the city. He was born in the village of Latchford, England, about 18 miles from Liverpool, on Sept. 11, 1825. His father, James Dinwoodey, was a blacksmith of small means, who was unable to give him many opportunities for education, though up to his 13th or 14th year the boy attended school.

There was a small stock of merchandise, and the trip in Captain John Hindley's independent company, and arrived in Salt Lake about the middle of September, nearly fifty years ago. Mr. Dinwoodey first worked at the carpenter trade, and then entered into partnership with Jos. Bird, cabinet maker, whose place of business was on West Temple between First and Second South. The partnership continued until 1857 when trade was prostrated by news of the approach of Johnston's army. Mr. Dinwoodey joined the militia and served first in a troop of lancers under Capt. H. B. Clawson, and later in an infantry company in Echo and Weber canyons. During the move of company. Mr. Dinwoodey has also had an active life in a public capacity. He was a member of the Salt Lake City council for the second precinct for several years, and a regent of the University. He was a counselor to Bishop William Thorne of the Seventh ward for several years, and later a member of the High Council of the Salt Lake stake. Mr. Dinwoodey has visited his native land, England, on several occasions, and it is understood that he intends devoting much of his recreation in future to travel. His career has been full of happy events, and his many friends will join in wishing that the evening of his days may be spent in health and continued prosperity.

make her lone dollar do the work of two?

Is it comical—or isn't it a trifle pathetic—when a woman, whose allowance for dress is pitifully small, reaches the store ads, and the stores, in a deadly earnest way, to solve the problem of keeping up appearances before her neighbors and the world?

And is it "mania," or just good sense, in a woman to try to expend wisely and carefully the money which worry and work has acquired?

Even a good natured husband will sometimes twit his wife with her bargain hunting propensities—but he would get scared in a minute if she should resolve to stop hunting bargains. With the same allowance as her less prudent sister, the woman bargain hunter manages to dress better, to keep the children looking better, to keep the house better furnished, the table fuller—and to have many little "extra things" which the other woman is never "able to afford."

The bargain hunting habit makes her prudent and thrifty—teaches her the importance of always having a little money in reserve for the next bargain that appears to her—helps her to manage her dollars instead of merely spending them.

And in reading her newspaper she finds the really important news in the store ads. She reads these first. Then, if she have time, she reads the details of the war in the east or the latest divorce case.

BEESLEY MUSIC CO.

LAUNCHING FORTH.

Piano Sale Now On.

Among the most thrifty of Salt Lake business houses is that of the Beesley Music Co. Commencing but a few years ago with sheet music as a specialty, an excellent trade was built up, which included small instruments, teachers and musicians' supplies. Upon this basis the well known musician and composer, Ebenezer Beesley, and four sons united to form a corporation. Eighteen months of steady increasing business, with pianos and organs added to the stock, has necessitated more room, and so twice as much space on the floor above has recently been acquired. The Beesley & Zeller piano has proved to be an excellent leader, winning laurels continually in competition, with better known instruments, while the Moench, Haas and other makes are daily growing in popularity.

A number of nice studios are being fitted up, most of which are already spoken for by prominent local teachers. During the alterations now going on, slashing prices are being made on pianos and organs, to make room for a complete stock now being purchased in the East. The Chase & Baker piano player, Victor Talking Machines and other specialties will be added, making the Beesley Music Co.'s establishment the best equipped, most conveniently located and most popular music house in the West. The piano show room upstairs will be the largest in the city and admirably adapted for musical lectures and recitals, which no doubt will be appreciated by the public and teachers alike. Success to the enterprise!

So-called "Weakness" in men is merely a symptom of chronic inflammation in the prostate gland, brought on by early dissipation or by the improper treatment of some contracted disease. BARGAINS—AND THE WOMAN

The joke makers have pretty nearly abandoned the woman bargain hunter as a theme.

Time was when about every paragraph, comic artist and joke-maker held her up to the smiling world, pictured as a despoiler of her husband's purse, as a fierce amazon in store crowds, wildly endeavoring to buy anything whatever so long as the price had been reduced by a few pennies.

But the woman bargain hunter has slowly yet surely vindicated herself, and she deserves the rest which the humorists are giving her.

Does it really seem very funny, after all, for a woman to study and strive, always, to buy in the best market? Is it a matter for jest when she tries—not always with entire success—to
