EVENING NEWS.

Tuesday, November 28, 1876. PRICE OF COLD. Corrected by Deseret National Bank...

Local and Other Matters. THERMOMETER 49 degrees F. In the shade at 1 p.m. today. Fine, a few clouds.

Thanksgiving Ball. "Wasatch" Engine Fire company No. 2, will give a ball at Firemen's Hall on Thursday evening.

Lovely. A right lovely morning this morning, with indications favoring a spell of fine weather.

Internal Revenue. The forthcoming report of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue will show the receipts from Utah for the last fiscal year to have been $35,000, being considerably more than that paid by any other Territory of the United States.

Concert. The musical entertainment, under the auspices of the 20th Ward Institute, at the School-house, comes off to-night. It will be under the management of Messrs. John Daynes, and Joseph J. Daynes, and a goodly array of talent will appear.

From Bear Lake. Our friend, Bishop William Budge, of Bear Lake Valley, is in town. He will shortly go to Boise City, having been elected Conductor from Bear Lake County to the Idaho Legislature. Mr. James H. Hart goes to the same legislative body, from the same county, as Representative.

An Improvement. President Brigham Young is having a new street opened running parallel with South Temple Street. Its western end will be a block north of the Eagle Gate and the east end will connect with the street in front of the Caine and Parsons residences. This a good improvement.

Theatre. Jem Mace, the pugilistic champion, and Long Frank, the "coming champion," also Miss Nellie Mace and Miss Carrie Lavarrie, serio-comic vocalists, are announced to appear in the Theatre this evening. The performance will commence with the petite comedy of "Richardson vs. Pritchards," and conclude with "Jem Mace in his celebrated Grecian Statures."

Discharged. Last evening John Thomas, arrested on suspicion of being implicated, with the Lee brothers, in the attempted robbery of Mr. Austin and the beating of the Messrs. Hennefer, was taken before Alderman Spiers, when an alibi was proved, the evidence of disinterested witnesses showing that he was at a dancing party at the time the affair occurred, and he was therefore discharged from custody. We are pleased to note this fact, because, as stated by us yesterday, Mr. Thomas' character for industry and honesty is good.

Stolen Horses. The United States Marshal has succeeded in capturing, near the Promontory, in the north-western part of the Territory, a band of about forty horses, which had been driven out there, from the Jordan range, by horse thieves. Parties whose animals are missing from the last named place should examine this band, which is now at the corral of the California Stables. Fifteen head of the animals were claimed by the owners this morning, leaving about twenty-five still unclaimed.

The Little Colorado. The Arizona Miner of Nov. 17 says: "Governor Sanford has written an extended account of his recent trip to the Little Colorado country, which we find published in the City of the 11th. His interview with the leaders of the Mormon colony is interesting, as that people are becoming an important element in the population of this country. One of the head men informed the Governor that within the next two years they expected their colony would number 2,000. They have built a saw mill and sell lumber in the mill yard at $10 per thousand feet. They have also a grist mill, and are about to erect a woolen mill and wagon factory. The mountains near them abound in hard wood, suitable for wagons."

Not Eastman. The name of the gentleman who was first assaulted on South Temple Street, on Saturday night, was Austin and not Eastman, as heretofore published. It is now generally conceded that his lungs are perfectly sound, and that as a runner he is somewhat of a success, judging from the shortness of the time it took him to put a distance of several blocks between himself and the highwaymen and his brave rescuers.

Conference at St. Louis. On Sunday, November 6th, the Saints of the St. Louis branch of the Church held a conference at 1,910 Broadway, Elder Andrew Burman presiding, and Elder F. Schrepel acting as clerk.

Elders Burman and Moffatt addressed the conference, and the general and local authorities of the Church were presented and unanimously sustained by the votes of the assemblage.

At the date of the holding of the conference the St. Louis Branch numbered thirty-eight persons, as follows: One Seventy, six Elders, one Teacher, one Deacon, and twenty-nine members.

Hunting Burglars.

Last night a young man, who had been indulging too freely his bibulous propensities, was on his way home, his road leading over the hill a short distance up City Creek Cañon. He was not only filled with intoxicants, but also with a strong desire to gain distinction by effecting the capture of a dozen or more burglars, should they cross his path.

An aged Frenchman, a shoemaker, having been out to supper, was returning that way to his place of lodging, and suddenly appeared before the young man, who covered the old gentleman with a five-shooter, and shouted, "Hold up your hands!" But, unhappily or otherwise, he did not understand English, and didn't hold up. As may well be imagined, this old son of St. Crispin thought he had got into a bad scrape, feeling connected that he had been set upon by a veritable brigand, of the Lee stripe, and this impression was strengthened when the young fellow actually fired off his pistol.

A friend of the young man who had been following him with a view of seeing him safely home, was pressed into the service to take the supposed veteran robber to the City Hall, under the comforting threat that, if he didn't assist, his brains would be blown out, so the trio marched to the building named. At the Eagle Gate they met with a couple of gentlemen on their way home, and the elated young desperado-etcher called upon them also to aid him in taking "this robber" to safe quarters, and, seeing the situation, they walked along with them.

On reaching the office of the Police Captain, the poor old shoemaker was speedily released and the young fellow who thus wanted to extemporize himself into a valiant officer of the law and protector of the public weal, was provided with lodgings for the night, and this morning had to pay a light fine.

St. George Temple. We learn, by private letter from St. George, that the lower rooms of the Temple are all finished, and are also the first main room and all the side rooms, and, in fact, that but little work is now required to complete the building to the top, which will probably be done within a few weeks, when the structure will be ready for the purposes for which it has been erected.

The Bishops, Seventies, High Priests and Elders. DEAR BROTHERS!—It is expected, in accordance with a circular issued some time ago, "that the labor up on the Temple here will continue to be pushed forward by those now engaged in it," viz.: the Seventies, Elders' and High Priests' quorums.

The Presidents of Seventies have issued a circular calling upon their quorums to continue in their present labors on the Temple in the quarry. It is desirable that the High Priests' and Elders' quorums should continue their labors, as heretofore, that the work upon the Temple may progress as fast as practicable, during the winter, and that preparations may be made for the accomplishment of a good work the next summer. If any of the quorums can provide for the payment of competent workmen to do the fine cutting for the outside courses, it should be attended to, as there is a large amount of common stone now cut, and being cut, and it requires a stronger force of workmen for the outside finish, than all portions may progress equally and with celerity and dispatch. There are a number of such workmen in the city, and perhaps elsewhere, who stand ready to do this fine work when called upon. The quorums of Seventies will continue to report to their presiding officers, as indicated in their circulars, and Presidents Elias Smith and Edward W. Davis will respectively act as agents in this City for the High Priests' and Elders' quorums, to whom reports can be made, and from whom information may be had.

The Bishops will also assist in the arrangement of these matters, and in any other manner tending to forward the good work.

JNO. W. YOUNG, DANIEL H. WELLS, Of the First Presidency. JOHN TAYLOR, In behalf of the Twelve Apostles. Lord Dufferin at Salt Lake.

Lord Dufferin, in his recent visit to Salt Lake City, needed no honor upon the country and queen he represented by refusing to call upon President Young. His refusal to call upon a party possessing wives in number and variety may have reflected honor upon the country he represented, but his excellency, the governor-general of the Dominion of Canada, did not reflect honor on his queen, who a rebuke he reflected. No one was more cordially received in England by her most gracious majesty than the Shah of Persia, a monarch with a multiplicity of better halves. He was entertained by the Queen of England as royally as if it wasn't notorious that in Teheran he supported a large and miscellaneous assortment of wives. The Seyid Zanzibar was also welcomed to the royal palace, notwithstanding that his domestic circle was gladdened by as large a number of hours as was compatible with the regularity of his revenues. When the Sultan of Turkey—the same who recently saw a pair of bright, sharp scissors in his chamber and took the hint—married the daughter, the Queen of England didn't stoop to inquire which of the fair occupants of the extensive harem was mother to the girl, but straightway telegraphed her to her dearly beloved and highly respected cousin, the Caliph, her congratulations that the fair young bride would have an opportunity to share with some half dozen other delightful creatures the bed of the noble Turk who would receive her from the Sultan's hands. When the Queen's hopeful, the Prince of Wales, was in Egypt, "he reflected honor upon the country and the queen he represented" by calling on the Khedive, a polygamist like "President Young." In the name of that queen he bestowed the "Star of India" upon the son of the Khedive, and generally bore himself as though he and his august mother didn't care two straws how many wives a man had.—Chicago Times.

If Lord Dufferin, while at Salt Lake, did not wish to call upon President Young, Lord Dufferin had a perfect right to pass through without calling. If President Young were to visit Ottawa, it would not be incumbent on him to call upon Lord Dufferin.

Correspondence.

Emigrants and Missionaries - Old Connecticut - The Old and the New Civilization, &c. SALEM, Massachusetts, November 21, 1876. Editor Deseret News:

I left New York in the afternoon of the 16th inst., having remained in that city long enough to see the following elders aboard the steamer Wyoming, bound for Europe—John Rowbery, Geo. Aikin, Thos. Barritt, Jno. S. Christiansen, Richard Steel, Jno. Tracy, C. D. Evans, Benot Jensen, Wm. Stokes, Jens Nielsen, Geo. Barber and Jno. Proctor. Sister Hannah Croton, who is going to England to visit relatives, was one of the party. All, I believe, were in good health, and accommodations aboard the steamer at very low figures, and the officials with whom the party had dealings were exceedingly polite and accommodating, so that no doubt all will enjoy the voyage, and be made comfortable during it.

I felt grateful to the Lord for the opportunity I had of meeting with these elders. It is a great treat for me to see an elder fresh from the midst of Israel, and a proportionately greater pleasure to meet some of the elders of this just as its members are in the act of branching forth into the wide world to spread the knowledge of the Lord and his great latter-day work among the people of the earth.

On my return journey to Boston from New York, I stopped a few hours in the town of New London, on the southern coast of Connecticut, waiting for a train to convey me to Norwich, in the same State, where I had to change cars again and wait some three hours. I did not regret the delay in each of these places, as it afforded an opportunity to walk around and obtain views of and some information concerning these Connecticut towns. Quiver towns they are, in some respects, with their narrow, crooked, zig zag streets, contrasting so strongly with the broad, regular streets of our City. Modern business blocks and residences are interspersed, in both these towns, with ancient buildings, placing side by side the architecture of the day, for over a dozen decades ago, and creating quite an interesting effect.

I was much interested, too, in the glimpses of society which my short visits afforded me, in witnessing the contrast between the dress, manners, air, appearance, and, as I may say, the civilization of the young and that of the old members of the community. Connecticut is the State accredited with the famous code known as the "blue laws," which, among other things, forbids a man's walking in his garden or eating mince pie on Sunday, and, from living specimens of the old times, whom I met in Connecticut, I doubt not but that the people of this State were once most rigorous in the observance of what they esteemed to be their religious charities. But the rising generation are departing far, far away from the traditional ways of those of their fathers who even now survive, and hence the strong contrast alluded to. Once the sight of a small boy chewing or smoking tobacco on the streets of a Connecticut town, would have almost sufficed for the subject of an indignation meeting of the citizens, while the sound of an oath from his lips would have been immeasurably shocking and horrifying. But now, alas! the counterparts of the metropolitan boot black and news-boy may be met with on the streets of a London or Norwich, with tobacco stained lips, and speech interspersed with oaths.

The surprising portion of what may be called the law and certainly the purer generation in most instances strives, by precept and example, to check the youth in their adoption of the habits and skepticism of the present, but their efforts to stay the tide are helpless and the outlook promises just what the servants of the Lord, ancient and modern, may expect, should they come to pass in the day in which the people should refuse obedience to the gospel.

Leaving Norwich late in the afternoon of the 17th I arrived the same evening at the village of Northbridge, in the southern part of Massachusetts, where I was kindly received by those whose acquaintance I made on the occasion of a visit to the place during February, when Elder E. W. Snow, of St. George, and myself were traveling together. At that time, if memory serves me rightly, we applied to a Mr. B., a school trustee, for permission to hold a meeting in the school-house, but he was very pious and hence refused. Shortly before my departure for Northbridge, he was taken violently ill, and after suffering about two hours, so I was informed, died. He was suddenly called to the next world, where he will have to meet the charge of having hedged up the way of the Lord's servants in the discharge of their duty, but I hope God will forgive him in case he repents, for I do not think he realized the greatness of his error.

I visited two villages near Northbridge, and was pleased to find a better prospect for an opening in the vicinity that were presented to Elder Snow and myself. I reached Boston on the evening of the 20th (last evening), and came to Salem by a late train, needing, as usual, with the kind reception from Brother Chas. Ryard, of 20 Oliver Street. I hope soon to commence a long series of meetings in Salem, as the prospects for doing good by that means are very favorable.

Your brother in the Gospel, B. F. CUMMINGS, JR.
