

THE EPIDEMIC AND HOW TO TREAT IT.

The Canadian horse disease first showed itself here to any extent on Friday last. It soon attacked nearly every animal in the city and horse stables, and yesterday we were assured that over five hundred animals were suffering from it. One veterinary surgeon alone is treating seventy cases.

The disease has prevailed in the Dominion for several years, according to the Buffalo papers it was brought across the Niagara River by the horses of a gentleman who drove over to Queenstown to attend a reception given by the Governor General. Soon after his return one of his horses was attacked by the epidemic, which in a day or two affected his whole stud. The disease has spread so generally since, that from one-third to one-half of all the horses in Buffalo have suffered from it. We see from the Lockport Journal that the disease has within a day or two become prevalent there.

We add a communication from a well known and successful veterinary surgeon of this city, upon the nature and symptoms of the disease, together with recommendations in regard to its treatment.

In accordance with a request I give you some of the symptoms which characterize the epidemic, that is, the disease its appearance, and its progress, and its victimizing the horses of this city, with some suggestions in regard to the proper care and treatment of the disease during its course.

I think it cannot be properly regarded as a new disease. It is clearly a form of influenza that has occurred frequently in the United States, as it often has in different portions of Europe. Three forms of influenza are spoken of by veterinary authors: The catarrhal, rheumatic and the gastro-erysipelatous form.

The patient should be excused from all labor and allowed complete rest. The stables should be cleaned and well ventilated. Distinctive may be useful, and in some stables necessary. Any of the following will answer—Carbolic acid, sulphate of iron or bromo-chloral-um. The patient should be properly groomed, and the nose and eyes frequently sponged with water, and the limbs, if cold, bandaged. The drink should have the chill slightly removed, but not enough to make it warm and unpalatable. The diet should be light and of a laxative nature; say spout feed or bran, wetted or scalded, with a little salt added. Hay in limited quantities may be allowed.

In regard to remedies I wish to say that heroic treatment should not be tolerated. The use of cathartic purgatives and arterial sedatives are all of them either injurious or unequalled. Next, whatever medicines are administered should be given in the form of draughts or drenches, as the animal is sure to be thrown into a paroxysm of coughing the moment a drench is attempted, and some of the medicine will, in such cases, be almost sure to find its way into the windpipe and bronchial tubes, thus inducing fatal bronchitis or pneumonia. Balls should not be given as they will be coughed back or out, and the irritability of the throat will be increased in almost every case. Powders over with the hand or fingers. Powders usually refuse both food and water. Electuaries, syrups or pastes are the only forms in which medicines may be safely and successfully administered in cases where the throat is tender and irritable and coughing easily induced.

Saline medicines I regard as the most useful in this disease. Any of the following will answer—chlorate of potash, muric acid, ammonia or hypophosphite of soda. As an anodyne to relieve the cough, fluid extract of belladonna may be added. The proper dose of either of these medicines may be rubbed up with two or three ounces of honey or molasses, and these poured in the mouth from a small bottle or placed on the tongue with a spoon. Given in this way the medicines will be readily swallowed and easily swallowed. But little trouble is required to give it, and no danger of getting any medicine in the trachea will be incurred by this method. About the throat and over the windpipe a sharp, stimulating liniment should be well rubbed in. In cases that prove severe or are complicated with other and more serious diseases a competent veterinarian should be employed. Rochester, Oct. 19, 1872.

A witness, in describing certain events said: "The person I saw at the head of the stairs was a man with one eye named 'Whitkin.'" "What was the name of the other eye?" "spitefully asked the opposing counsel.

Bertold Auerbach beautifully says: "Look around you; there is no wax candle as bright as the sun, no carpet so soft as the meadow, no draught so refreshing as the spring breeze, no flowers so fragrant as the gladden in the field. You stand in the midst of Paradise and the wonderful rod which works the greatest miracles is the handle of the shovel and the spade!"

A Boston merchant having advertised for a porter, was called to a wax candle by a stalwart Yankee, who said, "I'd boss, be you the man what advertised for a porter?" "Yes," sternly replied the merchant, "and expressly stated that all applications must be made in person." "Jes so, boss," responded the Yankee, "an' ef ain't a male I'd be obliged of you to tell me what I am!" He got the situation.

Responses to prayers and sermons may be good if they come in at the right place. Not so, however, came in a response, recently, to a minister in an African church. He had come down from the pulpit to invite a stranger in, but one of the pews to preach for him, but was unsuccessful. "Brethren," said he, "I invited Brother S— to preach, but he declined!" "Thank God!" roared out a man from the middle of the church.

There is a rumor of a well-known blue stocking in Paris, who is hard upon sixty years of age, and is a widow. She selected her father confessor to hold all possible scandal, and the other morning she consulted him on an important matter. "Father," she said, "softly, trying to blush, 'if a man should tell me that he loved me, would I sit in listening to him?'" "An afraid that you would. You must never knowingly lend your ear to falsehood."

An editor relates how a colored barber made a dead head of him. He offered him the usual time for shaving, when the fellow drew himself up with considerable pomposity, and said: "I understand that you are a 'Whitkin,' what of it?" says he. "We never charge editors nuffin," "But, my woolly friend," we continued, "there are a good many editors on your side now-a-days, and such liberality on your part would prove a ruinous business." "Oh! never mind," remarked the barber, "we'll make it up off de gostines."

Gail Hamilton says in the 'Woman's Journal': "The instinct of domesticity is as strong and deep in woman as in man. She is more domestic than the boarding house animal than he is. The occupations, the interests, the pleasures of home are peculiarly hers, and whenever a woman is separated from her home she prefers a boarding house to any other place. She has a home, and she is a home-sick creature, and she will do anything to get home."

Henry K. Phelps, a New York merchant, says: "I have committed a great sin. I sunk that my wife is dead. I have sunk her natural inclinations."
