UTAH AT THE WORLD'S FAIR.

Dr. Robert H. Bradford Speaks in Glowing Terms of Showing Made by This State.

SPLENDID MINERAL EXHIBIT.

State's Educational Showing Attracts Visitors—Director-General Whiteaker Praised.

Dr. Robert H. Bradford arrived in Salt Lake this morning from St. Louis, where he has been in charge of Utah's mineral exhibit at the world's fair since the first of June. He returns now to resume his labors as professor of mining and metallurgy at the University of Utah, and his place at the fair is taken by Clarence G. Dresser of Salt Lake, a graduate of the state school of mines.

Dr. Bradford speaks in the highest terms of the treatment accorded him while at the fair. "Utah is well thought of in every department in which she is represented," says Mr. Bradford. "The mining exhibit, including the ore concentration mill, is the subject of much favorable comment by world's fair visitors, and by the officers of the exposition. As evidence of the good opinion of the executive officers of the fair, our mill is one of the very few plants to receive free power, and free water for operating, and our concentrator was the first to be furnished with power and water gratis. Sixty tons of copper-ore from the Cactus mine in Beaver county were donated by Mr. Newhouse, and sent to the fair with our mineral exhibit for illustrating the operation of our mill. The ore is so well adapted to the milling process, and yields such a high percentage of copper concentrate that it would be safe to say that it would be next to impossible to find an ore better suited to display the process of concentration to advantage."

"The Allis-Chalmers company, which built the mill, appreciates the attractive show it makes, and by the assistance they have been so ready to render in any slight adjustments or alterations of the plant, and in voluntarily furnishing a folder descriptive of the process, and of Utah's standing as a producer of the valuable metals. This folder is illustrated on the front page with a photograph of Gov. Wells and a cut of the concentrating mill in position in the palace of mines and metallurgy. Thousands of these attractive folders have been distributed and along with them as many bottles of yellow nuggets prepared from the concentrates produced in the mill. Each bottle is neatly labelled so as to serve as a souvenir to the visitor to our exhibit. The plant is in operation every day and is the means of bringing into our both throngs of visitors, most of whom take a lively interest in the simple process by which such quantities of yellow nuggets are obtained from the crude ore."

ATTRACTS VISITORS.

"The educational exhibit, while not occupying much space in the Palace of Education and Social Economy, is visited and revisited by the leading educators at the fair. The course of study developed at the Utah State Normal school is the subject of very flattering praise by educational people. At a recent meeting of the Exhibitors' club, made up of those in charge of exhibits in the Palace of Education, Mr. George Cummings, superintendent of the Utah educational exhibit, was given the entire time of the meeting to explain our educational exhibit. Utah is thus one of the very few of the states whose exhibit in that building has been the subject for an entire meeting of the club. In introducing Mr. Cummings, the president of the Exhibitors' club, after some very complimentary words applied to the professor, spoke in glowing terms of our exhibit and said our course of study was undoubtedly the best exhibit in the building of its kind."

SCHOOL FOR THE DEAF.

"The school for the deaf is making a decided hit. The bright faces and cheerful dispositions of the pupils are a revelation to those who are inclined to think of the deaf as very unfortunate and hence very despondent. The very thorough and up to date methods of instruction, the high standard of the class and the ready response to her teaching given by members of the class have placed Utah's School for the Deaf among the very best in the country in the minds of those who have visited the live exhibit from Utah in the Palace of Education."

AGRICULTURAL EXHIBIT.

"The exhibit in the Agricultural building, while not so elaborate as that of many states yet is unique and attractive. The panorama of a Utah irrigated valley is visited by thousands who are outstoken in their remarks on the wonders of irrigation as pioneered in Utah."

"While it is to be regretted that Utah does not have exhibits in more buildings at the fair, yet, considering the appropriation made by the state, our standing at the exposition is enviable."

"The high position that Utah maintains is due in no small degree to the able and untiring efforts of Director General Whiteaker. His standing with the presiding officers, the chiefs of departments, as well as with the directors from other states, is second to none. His services have been repeatedly sought for on executive boards, for justice of appeal, etc., but he has not allowed any other duty to interfere with those imposed on him as director general of Utah exhibits."
