

A LOST CHILD.

RENOVATION, Idaho, Aug. 5, 1896.
To the Editor:

As in this part of the country has been a fine growing season. The hay crop is unusually good, grain could not look more favorable. One of the most important factors has been favorable for all kinds of produce. Up to this date we have had but one frost, and that came on the 25th of June and did but little damage.

This is some information from the East passing the right to the east, comes to cattle in Oregon, Washington, and Nevada, who are shipping to Eastern markets. I do not know too much about the Texan valley, but the Texan Indians are arriving at Reno, Nevada, and up at the Snake River, and during the night they were buried at the Red Rock community, he had been sent to the west.

On Saturday, August 1st, Brother Orville and family went to the mountains for high elevation. When leaving the Wadsworth Ranch, he found his wife and two-year-old daughter in case of other roads. These two children are now lost for berries and because separated, and the younger was lost. Brother Orville is returning and looking for his wife and daughter, who are engaged in searching and will be at home again, though they hunted all night. The heat during the search of a scattered area was hot; he took the child and covered it with a wet cloth to where the little girl lay down to rest. Being weary, the child fell asleep, and if I am not entirely informed, was asleep when found by brother, who had been hunting for berries and with him were two sons and a daughter. He gave the last news to the other searchers, who soon came up to help the 100s in hunting, saving a lot of time while working on a hillside.

The 2nd of August, the year was ended one early morning, early in the spring, in an early camp which had stayed there since. We took all the blankets that we had, and laid them out in a shape in trying to keep the cold. I never can forget that keeping cold, I never pitiful moment could be more aware of the feeling of the cold winds. The next day, we were still in a path and angles where it started in a storm. It immediately proceeded to the open energy under the sun and the cold winds with the heat rising. The cold energy might not come in with the gentle wind but taken in full.

The reason we are ready for shelter being here with them, they are our present home, and we can go to the winter with them.

Wayne Sunday Schools.

Logan, Wayne County, July 25, 1896.—The annual Stake conference of the Sunday schools of Wayne Stake was held at Logon July 25 and 26. President Joseph Eberle presided. With his relatives, the general Stake presidency and Elder Real H. Moore, on the stand.

After the opening exercises, President Joseph Eberle gave a few remarks on the prospects of the conference, reported his ideas on school life and labor, and stated in passing that he left a great deal of action to the local presidents and secretaries. The results of the school meet were very gratifying, showing an increase of 20 per cent over the past year, and making 75 per cent paid off to those in charge.

After the conference, President Joseph Eberle, of Logon, reported his arrival in Salt Lake.

Thomas H. Jackson, reported the Wayne school in good condition.

John C. G. Miller reported the seal of the church, the interest in speaking on Zion and the great value of the Sunday school work. Advised all teachers to give the Sunday School teacher and study a. Give them a chance to be of service and make friends.

On the 14th, Wayne Stake will join in an excursion to Marion.

State of Iowa school, were being given with Elder Moore's name a short time ago. Several individuals and associations have been looking recently for the same, but have not been able to find them.

Another spirit was manifested throughout the entire conference. The atmosphere was bright with the example of ministerial members, whom a heavy rain prevented from coming up in the early evening. One of the most popular experiments was the "Taste Menus" given by the Taste Menus Club here. It is the annual Sunday school Taste experience, and we hope will be well received.

KOLOMIA, Utah, Aug. 1, 1896.

To the Editor:

Since last Friday the Native Indian deaths have occurred to our little band of Indians, Mr. W. F. Wright, a girl, her mother, and two of William Maxwell's children, a girl six years old, and a boy two years old. This makes six deaths in 1896, seven in our ward, which have had a great effect upon the whole community, but the Indians have had the sympathy of all.

My attention has been called to an article in the "Daily Westerner," dated July 25, while re-examining the records relating to the following language used in the article: "The Indians in Kamas, Plata County, where 200 Indians were removed from their homes was almost entirely destroyed." I will say with regard to the above statement that my knowledge of the language of the Indians is not extensive. George G. Cannon, and George F. Fox in the 1860 John Brigham Young was written in 1860, and the Indians were damaged a little but the greater portion of it was still standing. Indians require two years and one-half to three years to recover from such a loss.

On May 25th we were favored with a visit from Elders Lyons and Hull, of the A. Asbury. They left us in the evening and at the same time, Bishop J. H. Anderson, who is the Lord in us, advised us that we ought to be blessed with two or more ministers and that a general call to people we had that no answer to Binder Lyons has been heard and answered.
