

themselves in his behalf, with a view of obtaining a pardon for him; but this scheme did not carry.

Spiegel began to complain of sickness very shortly after receiving his sentence, and had been an inmate of the penitentiary hospital during nearly the entire interval between then and his death.

For the last two months he had kept his bed almost entirely. Latterly signs of dropsy manifested themselves and there had also been a thickening of the walls of the stomach. The convict has remained under the care of Dr. J. S. Witcher, the penitentiary physician, to whom he wrote a note a few days ago thanking him for his kindness.

It is now certain that the bonds issue proposition is defeated, although not all of the outside precincts have been heard from yet. While the city precincts gave a majority in favor of bonding, the outside precincts went strongly against it. Following is the vote of the precincts as far as received:

A letter has been received by his parents on the circumstances attending the death of John Schramm, announced last week by telegram through the News.

On the first day of March, between 12 and 1 o'clock, he was with three companions crossing the Grand river near Richardson, driving some best steers. When about half across the river they got into deep water and losing their footing in the swift current each was compelled to fight for his own life. The horse which John Schramm was riding would not swim very well and in the excitement he left it, placing himself at a still greater disadvantage. The other men reached the shore, exhausted and hardly able to stand on their feet. An attempt was made to get a rope to John, but it was too late. He sank suddenly as if cramped by the very cold water and never came up again. Johnny, as he was familiarly called, was much liked by all his comrades and every effort was made to rescue his body. The river was dragged with hooks and ropes till night and similar efforts were repeated the next and on the third and fourth days, but without success. Twenty sticks of giant powder were fired to raise the body if possible—fifteen men assisting in the work, but all seems fruitless.

John Schramm, of Payson, was about 19 years of age, of a frank and kind disposition, and made many friends wherever he engaged himself. Much sympathy is felt by all for the bereaved parents and relatives in their great sorrow.

PROVO, Utah, March 14.—The Provo Co-operative Institution is in the hands of the U. S. marshal under an execution issued from the First district court this morning.

When rumors were heard that the institution had been attached much surprise was expressed, as it is the largest mercantile house in town, and the oldest co-operative institution in the Territory. It has been known for some time that the corporation was heavily involved; but the directors and stockholders have hoped that it would be able to pull through. Yesterday, however, T. G. Webber, superintendent of Z. C. M. I., which institution held claims against the Co-op. for $25,098.35, came down and obtained a note for the amount, secured by mortgage on all the real and personal property of the corporation and immediately took steps to foreclose. The result was that this morning a decree of foreclosure was obtained in the First district court and all the property of the Co-op. was levied upon.

The First National bank of Provo attached the institution early this morning in a suit for $1,700 on a promissory note, but as the mortgage was given yesterday, of course the bank's will be secondary. The Co-op. owes, besides the amounts mentioned, about $12,000; $5,500 of this amount is due to the estate of A. O. Smoot and the balance to Salt Lake and eastern mercantile houses. The assets, including notes and accounts, when an inventory was taken last month, figured up to $68,000. So it would seem that there is a prospect of the creditors being paid in full.

There are some people here sorely afflicted with cancer, which successfully baffles the efforts of the best physicians to effect a cure. Y Drych, a Welsh paper, of March 7, contains a simple recipe, concerning which it is said there are scores of remarkable cases that prove its value as a cure. Mr. William Davies, of this city, has made a translation, which he has brought to the News with a request for publication for the benefit of sufferers. It reads as follows:

"Boil Turkey figs, of the best brand obtainable, in fresh milk until the milk is thickened and the figs tender; cut the latter and place on the cancer as hot as can be borne, whether the tumor is broken or not; wash the sore every time the poultice is changed with some of the milk; the washing process should be gone through night and morning, or, at least, once a day; drink about a quarter of a pint of the milk the figs have been boiled in once a day for three or four months, if the stomach can stand it."

A number of cases of almost marvelous cures are cited, some of them being given here: One is that of a man who died at the age of 105 years, who was cured six years before his death, by the use of six pounds of figs. In his case the cancer had eaten one side of his jaws and down to his throat. The cure was pronounced so perfect that no sign of a return of the dread tumor was ever shown. Another instance is cited of a girl who had a cancer in her breast, which bled freely, and ten pounds of the Turkey fruit healed her. The remedy is perfectly harmless in any respect, and if its virtue should be proved by experience here, the knowledge of that fact ought to become public.

The following opinions were handed down by the Territorial Supreme court Saturday morning.

The People of the Territory vs Charles Thiede, appellant.

Thiede was found guilty on October 21st, 1894, of the murder of his wife at Murray, and on November 5th sentenced to be hanged, the motion for a new trial and in arrest of judgment having been overruled by Judge Barton, before whom the trial took place. From this judgment overruling the motion an appeal was taken, a large number of errors—previously stated in these columns—being assigned.

Their honors reviewed the matter at great length. They found no error in the record and accordingly affirmed the judgment of the court below, remanding the case with directions to the lower court to fix the day for carrying the sentence into effect.

The opinion was delivered by Judge King, Judges Merritt and Smith concurring.

The court allowed a stay of twenty days.

The People of the Territory, respondent, vs. Richard A. Hashbrouck, appellant.

Opinion by Chief Justice Merritt, Judges Barlow and King concurring.

The defendant, Dr. Hashbrouck, was convicted before Commissioner Harmel Pratt of practicing medicine without a license, in violation of the provisions of the act of the Territorial legislature, approved March 10th, 1892, and was fined $50. An appeal was taken to the Third district court; a jury was waived, and the case tried on an agreed statement of facts.

The judgment of the lower court was affirmed.

Work upon the new electric power plant at Leadville, Colo., will begin as soon as the frost is out of the ground. Mining methods will be much changed and presumably cheapened by the introduction of the new power.
