

How Sal Disgraced the Family.

A traveler in the State of Illinois, some years ago, came to a lone hut on the prairies, near Cairo, and there halted. He went into the house of logs. It was a wretched affair, with an empty packing box for a table, while two or three old chairs and disabled stools graced the reception rooms, the dark walls of which were further ornamented by a display of dirty tin-ware and a broken delf article or two.

The woman was crying in one corner, and the man with tears in his eyes and a pipe in his mouth, sat on a stool, with his dirty arms resting on his knees, and his sorrowful looking head supported by the palms of his hands. Not a word greeted the interloper.

"Well," he said, "you seem to be in awful trouble here; what's up?"

"Oh, we are most crazed, neighbor," said the woman, "and we ain't got no patience to see folks now."

"That's all right," said the visitor, not much taken aback by this polite rebuff; but can I be of any service to you in all this trouble?"

"Well, we've lost our gal; our Sal's gone off and left us," said the man in sad tones of despair.

"Ah, do you know what induced her to leave you?" remarked the new arrival.

"Well, we can't say, stranger, as how she's gone and disgraced us," remarked the afflicted father.

"Yes, neighbor, and not as I should say it as is her mother, but there warn't a pootier gal in the west than our Sal; she's gone and brought ruin on us and on her own head now," followed the afflicted mother.

"Who has she gone with?" asked the visitor.

"Well, there's the trouble. The gal could have done well, and might have married Martin Kehoe, a capital shoemaker, who, although he's got but one eye, plays the flute in a lively manner, and earns a good living. Then look what a home, and what a life she has deserted. She was here surrounded by all the luxury in the country," said the father.

"Yes, who knows what poor Sal will have to eat, drink or wear, now," groaned the old woman.

"And who is the fellow that has taken her from you to lead her into such misery?" quoth the stranger.

"Why she's gone off and got married to a critter called an editor, as lives in the village, and the devil only knows how they are to earn a living!"

A Romance Writer Describing Facts.

Alexander Dumas gives the following rather graphic picture of the new King of Italy:

"Victor Emanuel," he says, "looks like a man about forty years of age, and is frank, sincere, vigorous, temperate, an early riser and a keen sportsman with gun and dog. He bears the fatigues of a long day's shooting better than many of the most active mountaineers, generally starting on such excursions before sunrise. He makes a very light breakfast—merely a piece of bread and a slice of cold meat or cheese, which he eats like a peasant, without sitting at table; but he always makes a hearty dinner, laying aside all etiquette, without court or chamberlains. On Sunday, the day of general receptions at the palace, the doors are thrown open at eleven o'clock, and anybody who feels disposed may enter till three. If any person desires a private audience he must apply by letter, and on the morrow or following day will surely obtain it, for Victor Emanuel opens all his letters himself.

"One day, when out shooting, he met a peasant, who, on seeing the King bring down two partridges, right and left, with his double-barrelled gun, went up to him and said:

"You shoot well, you do."

"It was not amiss, was it?" responded the King.

"Perhaps you could rid me of a fox which steals my hens?"

"Most willingly."

"If you do, I will give you seventy francs."

"Agreed," said the King. "I will come to-morrow morning with my dog, and shoot your fox."

"Give me your hand on it," said the man.

"The King immediately shook hands with him, and, true to his word, went the next morning, found the fox and shot it.

"Thank God for that!" exclaimed the peasant; "you have fairly earned your francs, and there they are."

"The King took them and said:

"This is the first money I ever earned."

Then, tossing up the pieces in his hand, he added: "It is a pleasure to receive money one has fairly gained."

"The next day, in exchange for the money, His Majesty sent a dress, necklace, and earrings for the peasant's wife.

"It is impossible to be more easy of access than is Victor Emanuel. He goes out alone on foot, and enters the theater at the public door. One day the portress of the Angonnes theater caught a gentleman in the act of puffing the smoke of his cigar at her cat, which he had found in a corner and kept there.—Rushing forward to rescue her favorite, she seized the tormentor by the arm, and, on his turning round, recognized the King."

THE COOLEY TRADE.—Official statistics show that during the last twelve months 5569 Chinese Coolies have been landed in Cuba, making an aggregate of 48,970 since 1847.

Extraordinary Story.

About the year 1837, Sir John Fenwick, of Fenwick Hall, England, married Clara Seymour. She was the daughter of a poor Cumberland clergyman, and, of course, brought to the union neither money nor influence. But she was beautiful and most amiable, and for 18 years her husband loved her with a most passionate love. But, at the end of that time two sisters of Sir John, despairing of what they had long hoped for, the death of his only son and heir, the true hero of this story, persuaded Sir John that his wife had confessed to them that her son was the offspring, not of her husband, but of a foreigner, with whom even during her honeymoon, she had intrigued at Paris. Overlooking in his rage the obvious interest his sisters had in deceiving him, Sir John banished both mother and son from his house. The former after many painful vicissitudes died, having previously sent her son to one of her relatives settled on an extensive rancho or farm on the borders of Texas. While residing there he was carried into captivity by the Indians from whom he escaped, penniless and half naked, and we next find him in a lawyer's office, and subsequently in that of the "Clinton Herald newspaper." Here he made his mother's wrongs and his own claims known, was taken in hand by the British Consul at Chicago, and by that gentleman introduced to the Prince of Wales, who, being convinced of the truth of his story, took him with him to England.

Arrived there, John Fenwick, the younger, proceeded at once to Fenwick Hall, and there found that one of his evilaunts was dead, and that the other was fast dying, and in her agony of penitence or terror had confessed the whole truth to Sir John, who soon after died, and the hero of this story, now Sir John Fenwick, Bart., writes most affectionately to his American friends, sends presents to most of them, and in his letter to the most favored of them, says: "The packages I send to you will, I hope, entirely clear you of debt, and make you independent for life."

—A desperate conflict between a large panther and two negroes, occurred on Bayou Co., Codra, Miss., recently. The brute sprang at one, and pulled him to the ground by the neck; the other, armed with an axe beat her off her off his comrade; after a long fight assistance came and the panther was killed; it was supposed to be the mate of a male, killed the night before.

FOR THE GENERAL INFORMATION OF THE SEVENTIES.

At a meeting of the General Council of Seventies, held in Seventies' Council Hall, Great Salt Lake City, on the 2d inst., it was moved, seconded and unanimously carried that the quorums are at liberty, when presidents or members absent themselves from their quorum meetings (without reasonable excuse), to take an expression in their quorums that they disavow the act of negligence.

Published by order of the First Council of Seventies, R. H. ATTWOOD, Clerk.

Save your Paper Rags.

The inhabitants of Utah are requested to gather up and save their worn out wagon covers, and every description of cotton and linen rags for paper making, and deliver them, from time to time, to the Bishops of the several Wards, or the 'News' and 'Mountaineer' Offices or their agents, for which, when clean, they will be allowed five cents a pound. The rags can be sufficiently cleansed in pure water, without soap.

It is expected that, in a few months, all who wish can receive paper in exchange for rags.

9th EDWARD HUNTER, Presiding Bishop.
