

SALT LAKERS IN GOTHAM.

Special Correspondence.
NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—"The Girl and the Bandit," Viola Pratt Gillette, is the girl, and Joe Marston, basso, is the bandit. So far good. The cast is a strong one, Walter Jones, Mabel Hite, Alice Osborne, Fletcher Norton, Henry Bergmann, lover of the "girl,"—neither tenor nor baritone, simply a dramatic lover—one of the best of the Chicago, soprano, and little Miss Dorey, the Chicago, soprano, with other lights of the operatic and dramatic field, and there you have an array of talent, both good to hear and look upon.

Mrs. Gillette will make her bow in the longest and staidest of seventeenth century court trunks, slightly modernized, but do not imagine that stiff brocade will wander through the different acts, no, indeed, the second act finds the "girl" disguised as an officer of the imperial guard, where white broadcloth and gold braid long boots, and shining epaulettes, transform the maid into a miniature "Prince Charming." Elegant costumes throughout, for the entire company, that is the order. An up-to-date production in scenic and mechanical effects is the promise, and another great show is launched, that is, its falls will be unfurled at Newburgh 7th, the Hudson, Monday night, the 25th. With the name of Frank L. Perley at the head of this enterprise, there is no need to fear either disappointment or failure.

The piece is booked through northern New York's principal cities, thence to Canada, arriving in Chicago the 7th of January, where it will have a long run at Savoy's Theater; its New York debut is scheduled for the spring on Broadway, and competition with other spring shows will begin.

Mrs. King, of 122 west One Hundred and Thirty-fifth street, entertained

Thursday evening at her home, the presidency, Elders and friends of the mission, a very enjoyable time was spent by all. Mrs. King's hospitality and good feeling towards Utah people is well known, and an invitation to her home is always appreciated and accepted with pleasure.

Saturday evening at the home of Mrs. Thomas Blair, an entertainment was given to Elder James A. Holt, who has been released after serving two years in the mission field in the Brooklyn conference. Elder Holt's friends are legion, and his absence from our circle, will be greatly regretted, only the best of wishes from the entire conference, go with him to his home in Utah. Elder H. C. Wallace of the New York conference, with headquarters in Albany, has also been released. Elder Wallace has labored in northern New York state, and filled a worthy mission. President William Hadfield of the New York mission has received his release, and will soon leave for his home in Lehi. President Hadfield has been succeeded by Elder Duran who has already taken up his residence in Albany.

At Sunday services a great many Utah people were seen, among others former Prest Asahel Woodruff of the Chicago and Western States conference, and Robert Patrick, Jr., both representing Z. C. M. L. Mr. Woodruff addressed the people in a most entertaining talk of an hour; he was followed by Mr. W. T. Ward, of Bellevue, who though here as a medical student, is ranked among the best of our speakers.

Mr. Miley Pratt, with his sister Leona, and her fiancé Mr. George D. Bergener, were among our chapel visitors. Miss Pratt has wisely given up all dreams of future stardom, and will shine beside the family hearth. Mr. Bergener, is a sterling young man, whose chosen profession is the law, and New York will claim them as residents after the marriage. Miss Pratt goes home to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Milando Pratt, in a few weeks to remain until after the holidays. Mr. Bergener will also go west for the ceremony. Best wishes from their many friends here, will certainly accompany them.

Quite a party of Salt Lakers have taken in the horse show. Mr. and Mrs. Wilford Young, Miss Mary Young, J. Wesley Young, and Miss Lucy Van Cott coupled a stall Thursday evening at this most popular amusement at the Garden. The horse show, like the opera, is much affected by the fashionable world; it's the thing to go to, if you have the cash, and crowds are to be seen nightly whenever the doors are thrown open.

Mr. Joseph Scowcroft, of Ogden, and his sister and daughter, are visiting in New York, sight-seeing, theater-going, and shopping. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Campbell and daughter are also here, all are staying at the Holland.

Mrs. Homer J. Rich, who has been here attending classes at Columbia, leaves for the west Tuesday, to meet her husband. Mr. and Mrs. Rich will take up their residence in California, for a time. Mrs. Rich's two nieces, the Misses Taylor, will remain for the winter.

Sunday, Nov. 12, the western New York conference held its annual meetings at Albany at 78 Pearl street. Much old prejudice is to be found in western New York, but within the last ten years the Elders have met with greater success than formerly, and feel encouraged in their labors. The press is more favorable to them, and the Elders have been ably assisted in this quarter of the state by Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Seymour. Mr. Seymour will be well remembered by many Utahns, who knew him in the insurance business. Mrs. Seymour is a daughter of Joseph J. Jolly of Moroni, Sanpete county, and sustains the reputation of that numerous family, by her faith and hospitality. The home of Mr. and Mrs. Seymour has no key to its door, where Utah's are concerned.

is to be found a lake with a decided Indian name—Ronkonkomo. In its vicinity and along its shores are to be seen many well kept farms and beautiful country homes. To the east and south is situated the extensive farm of Maude Adams, covering 700 acres of forest and woodland. The place is well stocked, and her horses, cows, Cottswold sheep, Angora goats and dogs are all of the best breed, and would excite the admiration of every lover of animals.

An invitation from Mrs. Adams, who will remain at Ronkonkomo until after Thanksgiving, to her friends, Mr. and Mrs. Easton, and their niece, Miss Clawson, for a Sunday at the farm, was heartily accepted, and the early morning boat joined them at Thirty-fourth street ferry, awaiting the Long Island train. At Ronkonkomo station the party was met by the genial "Walter"—Miss Adams' right hand man, who oversees and manages this vast estate.

A ride of three miles through country lanes and fields over a portion of forest ground the misty mists laid out herself, with great oak, sycamore, hickory and maple boughs meeting over your head, you come in view of the house, and standing in the open door, with arms extended, is Aseneth, the same "Gentle" you knew 25 years ago. Her welcome is a royal one, and close behind you see the face of another old friend, Mrs. Belle Pitts. You are almost carried inside, and then begins one's bewilderment. This great room measures 150 feet by 100 feet, and is covered with four immense fire places of cobble stone and cement, where great logs on ancient andirons blaze out fiery welcome; it is reception room, living room, library and dining room, the abutting fire places shielding one part from another. The upright and baby grand pianos, the book cases in every out of the way nook, the couches and pillows scattered everywhere, old fashioned settees around fire places, inviting—almost begging one to make use of them—windows on every side, overlooking ancient and historic trees, wide lawns, and a lake, which would be called a pond in Michigan, or any of the lake states. (But no one dares call it anything but a lake on Long Island.) This quaint, artistic home, whose architecture defies criticism—one seeks in vain to find a name to describe it, and concludes after long research through the memory, that it must be "Adamsesque," and gives a sigh of satisfaction that the problem is solved.

Three words seem written over a portion of this lower floor—"Home, Comfort, Rest." Is anything more to be desired? Breakfast is awaiting the travelers. One tastes dainty fruits and other dishes that make up an early day meal, and cannot refrain from wonder at the exclamations, "everything raised on the farm," and so it is repeated at the 5 o'clock dinner of game and delicious vegetables—"everything raised on the farm." Surely the ground is enchanted. Looking from the odd little windows to the southeast, one sees a portion of ground with a small house on it, which is the property of Mrs. Aseneth Adams, and at present she is renting it, but next spring will see many changes on the spot, a new house and beautiful grounds will be started, where Mrs. Adams will be mistress in her own lovely home, a close neighbor to her daughter.

But the house has not been explored, and the stables, kennels and overseers' quarters, which occupy no small portion of the place, have yet to be seen. The bedrooms and bathrooms, which make up the upper floor, are models of warmth and comfort, and the basement, which is furnace room, cellar, storeroom and coal house combined, makes as complete a country home as could be desired by the greatest of literary or artistic mortals. This great rambling house contains not one ounce of mortar or brick above the basement—old oak beams, oak wainscoting, which reaches to the low ceiling, everything in perfect harmony, exquisite taste and absolute thoughtfulness, for its many guests, who are so lavishly entertained, is the order in that quaint home. Staying with Mrs. Adams and Mrs. Pitts at Ronkonkomo is Miss Maud Hosford, the clever actress and brilliant playwright, whose play, at the Imperial theater, London, "His Majesty's Servant," has met with such pronounced success and will be produced next season by Charles Frohman throughout the United States, having a long run on Broadway before visiting Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago. Miss Hosford has done many bright things for the magazine, and her work on the stage is well known in New York. Mr. Waller, the English actor, will in all probability come over under Frohman's management in "His Majesty's Servant."

With three such congenial souls in this ideal spot, is it any wonder that a day spent at Ronkonkomo is one to be remembered for ever and aye.

Republicans and Democrats alike praise Foley's Honey and Tar for coughs, colds and all throat and lung diseases, as no other remedy can compare with it. It is safe and sure. Dr. T. Slater, merchant, 171 Main St., Gloucester, Mass., writes: "Foley's Honey and Tar cured me of a very bad cough which I had for three months though other remedies failed to benefit me. I can highly recommend it for coughs and colds." E. J. Hill Drug Co.

MANTELS! MANTELS!

THERE is nothing that adds to the attractiveness of the "best room" like a beautiful mantel. It gives tone and caste to the whole house. All white walls look alike, but there is a vast difference in mantles. A good mantel costs money, and you feel like you just can't afford it while the expense of building is so great. Next week you can buy a mantel that will be a pleasure to you all your life at—

Half Price.

OUR LAST WEEK'S ad. brought a most liberal response. All week long we were busy. Many came to take advantage of the Half Price offering we made and $12,400.00 in merchandise walked out of the Store.

The buying was not confined to any particular line, for the selections were general. Next week the bargains will be just as great as during the past week and the near approach of the Holidays augurs well for a Record Breaking Bargain Week.

And Everything Usually Found in a FIRST CLASS HARDWARE STORE Is Here and for

ONE HALF PRICE.

KITCHEN UTENSILS!

SO MANY little conveniences are made for the kitchen that cost so little and save so much time, but the economical housewife says, "I can do without it," and she slaves along with a broken egg beater, a tinkered up flour sifter and looses time and patience. The cost is always small enough, goodness knows, but next week these conveniences can be had for—

Half Price.

Mechanics' Tools!

IN THIS department we have always striven to please the workingman who likes to use good tools. A carpenter's kit is his fortune. He prides himself on using the best, and it is no little task for the average man to secure just the tools he wants. Price stands in the way, and he feels that he cannot afford them just now. Well, he cannot afford now not to have them for they will be sold next week at Half Price.

EVER SEEN our line of Stoves and Ranges? We carry the most complete line in the City. We bought them new this season for the winter's trade, and they all go with the rest of the stock.
