COHN BROS.

A ROYAL PORK BUTCHER.

A King Whose Sole Ambition Was to Make Delectable Sausages.

Charles VI, king of Spain and the Indies, had a brother named Don Antonio, who excelled as an amateur sausage maker, and after awhile nothing would please the King but that he, too, should be initiated into the secrets of the wonderful art. He lost ultimately, he said, to produce sausages which should rival, nay, even excel, his brother's. Accordingly a pavilion was built in a secluded park at Aranjuez, whither, liberally supplied with chopped pork and the necessary spices, the monarch retired from public view and dressed in a butcher's white blouse and apron, went through a seven course of training.

At last he was ready for a test, and a piece of sausage solemnly tasted by Don Antonio was declared worthy of his own making. The dish became fashionable at court, but Charles, insisting that he had not yet acquired his brother's delicacy and finish, continued his labors toward the perfection of his culinary skill. Another king at table, began — and family with his sausages.

Naturally the courtiers all demurred at this and declared that he was mistaken, but a young duke who had just come up from the country, and did not know how matters stood, thought he saw an open road to favor, and remarked, "I venture to agree with your majesty." "What would you do with the cook?" asked Charles. "Expel him," was the reply. On this Charles rose from his seat, left the hall and quickly returned, dressed in his professional costume.

Approaching the bewildered young man, he said, "Sir duke, will you lay my pardon at the king?" "Mercy, sire!" cried the duke, throwing himself on his knees. Charles good humoredly passed over the offense, and made the culprit one of his personal attendants.

This whim degenerated into sheer monomania; matters of the gravest importance were neglected, the king could not be got away from his self inflicted labors; sausages making became the sole interest of his existence. In the end, however, he was undeceived by a fortunate occurrence. An English lady of rank, who was very curious to see the royal pork butcher at work, was secretly introduced by the British ambassador into the grounds surrounding the pavilion. By some means Charles discovered her, and thinking it the best thing to do, went up to her and embraced her, forgetting that his hands and clothes were all smeared and dirty.

Of course the lady's dress was spoiled, but Charles had recognized her utterly absurd he must seem to other people, and his eyes being thus opened he at once desisted from his favorite occupation. Nevertheless, during his absence from business, for his person as he was, incalculable damage had been done to the empire—damage from which it never recovered under his other rule.—Massachusetts Times.

The Lady of the House.

In these latter days we are rightfully weary of the influx of ladies among us—the lady in the kitchen, the wash lady, the clothing lady, the saleslady, ad infinitum. But we must never put aside nor allow any other to supplant the grand title of the lady of the house. That Anglo Saxon word which holds in it the vision of the head of the true lady, the noble woman ruling well her household, the woman of wisdom to learn and teach the laws which order household keeping, the mistress of domestic economy—the science of establishing in every home the house law of thrift and comfort.

Words are indeed "monumental thoughts," and there are few in our tongue which stand out more clear cut and strong, showing us what true and noble reality as well as nobility lies within compass of her who is the lady of the house.—Harper's Bazar.

It is one of the "curious sounds" that a borrowed book should be carefully used and returned without being defiled by dirty hands, or disfigured by scores and turned down leaves.

The new bridge over the Tay at Dundee, Scotland, is seventy-seven feet above the water, has eighty-three piers and is over two miles long.

DONT FORGET

that the quality of wine depends on the peculiar spot in which it is grown. Havana tobacco make the choicest Cigars. Virginia leaf makes the finest tobaccos for the pipe. Moral—smoke Mastiff Plug Cut.

"German Syrup"

Here is an incident from the South—Mississippi, written in April, 1892, just after the Grippe had visited that country. "I am a farmer, one of those who have to rise early and work late. At the beginning of last Winter I was on a trip to the City of Vicksburg, Miss., where I got well drenched in a shower of rain. I went home and was soon after seized with a dry, hacking cough. This grew worse every day, until I had to seek relief. I consulted Dr. Dixon who has since died, and he told me to get a bottle of Boschee's German Syrup. Meantime my cough grew worse and worse and then the Grippe came along and I caught that also very severely. My condition then compelled me to do something. I got two bottles of German Syrup. I began using them, and before taking much of the second bottle, I was entirely clear of the Cough that had hung to me so long, the Grippe, and all its bad effects. I felt tip-top and have felt that way ever since." Peter I. Bates, Jr., Cayuga, Hines Co., Miss.
