

BAMBERGER WON'T SELL HIS ROAD.

Says Neither Burlington Nor Any Other Company Can Get
It From Him.

IS RUSHING ON TO OGDEN.

Now Negotiating for 42,000 Poles From Idaho to be Used in Equipping Line Electrically.

Senator Simon Bamberger is usually a mild-mannered man; that is, he does not always speak with the same emphasis that he did today when referring to the report that probably the Burlington or some other railroad was going to buy the Salt Lake & Ogden. This is what he said to the "News" over the telephone from Ogden this morning:

"Please tell the public that there is not a single word of truth in the story. I have not had and am not now having any communication whatsoever with the Burlington or any other railroad for the purchase of the Salt Lake & Ogden. The only people who have approached me are a bunch from Chicago who are not in good faith and who are endeavoring to do what they can to injure me, but they can't succeed in the slightest degree."

"And then add: 'My road is not for sale. It is not going to be for sale. It is going to be double-tracked and electrically equipped into Ogden from Salt Lake. I am going to build it myself and I am going to pay all the bills. I am just now getting 42,000 poles from Idaho and work is going to be pushed with all possible speed. I have got every team to work in Davis county that I can get and the dirt is flying towards the Junction city.'"

"I am now on the ground in Weber county looking after rights of way with my engineer and with Mr. Angus Wright of Ogden. I am making it a matter of business to see that the work is pushed with all speed, and that the promise I made last year to the people of Salt Lake and Ogden regarding the building of the road shall be kept. No, sir; Mr. Bamberger's road is not for sale and it will not be. It belongs to him, and he is not going to sell it. It is good property, and being so it is worth as much to me as to anyone else. I talk this way because I want to put at rest for the present and hereafter any rumor or suggestion that I am getting ready to unload, for I am not. I think with the public mind should carry my meaning and understand me fully."

Officials Conclude to Run Tunnels
Through Hole Avalanches.

Durango, Colo., March 26.—The Denver and Rio Grande railroad officials have decided they are unable to remove the huge avalanches which obstruct the track between here and Silverton. They have set a force of men to work digging tunnels through all the larger slides. They expect these tunnels will be completed by the summer. During the last month more snow has fallen in the hills around this piece of track than has ever been known in the history of the country.

SPIKE AND RAIL.

General Agent Harding of the Colorado Midland returned from Boise this morning.

The Rio Grande trains are reported to be in better shape today with No. 5 three hours and No. 1 one hour late.

Supr. F. S. Elliott of the Rio Grande Western is out on the east end of the line watching high water developments.

J. L. Moore, district passenger and freight agent of the Salt Lake Route, and F. H. Plafied, assistant general agent of the Oregon Short Line, have gone to Boise.

ARREST OF A VERY SWELL YOUNG MAN.

H. H. O'Haver Cut a Big Dash
And Falls Into Clutches
Of Law.

HOW HE FOOLED ALL OF THEM.

Fitted up Handsomest Flat in Town
And Then Mortgaged Goods
That Were Not His.

From the swellest bachelor apartments in the county fall was the quick change made by H. H. O'Haver, a young man of 27, yesterday afternoon. Just where he is today deponent sayeth not, because he is out on bail, and the Freed Furniture and Carpet company and E. L. Henderson, a chattel mortgage man, lay claim to his effects.

The story of Mr. O'Haver is a thrilling one and the circumstances surrounding his arrest are interesting. Some weeks ago this young man burst upon Salt Lake in all the glory of fashionable attire and neatly gloved hands. It is an old story with a new setting. He told all he met that he was of wealthy stock, and to prove it, proceeded to acquire appointments second to none in the city. He rented six rooms, 401-406 Security Trust building, East Temple street. Then he had some artistic cards printed, which bore the legend "H. H. O'Haver, manager western office American Skillard Co." Armed with these cards he started out to furnish his little flat. In the meantime he prevailed upon the owners of the building to put in a handsome bath room, fitted with the very latest ideas in plumbing.

NOTHING SMALL ABOUT HIM.

There was nothing small about O'Haver. He fitted up a Turkish room with costly hangings and bric a brac. Then he had a reception room that was a gem. Leather chairs and lounges were among the appointments. But his bedroom was the fairy house. By way of a center piece he installed a solid brass and onyx affair that fairly made the officers blink when they arrived on the scene yesterday afternoon. Silk hangings, expensive curtains and other effects were also added—it was the envy of all his friends.

HOW HE WORKED IT.

He secured his goods from various houses in this city by means of alleged bad checks and credit. A few days ago he strolled into the Greenwald Furniture company and bought up the store. Next day he called and "settled" by writing out a check and asking that it be not presented for a few days, as his account was slightly overdrawn and he was waiting for a remittance from his folks, which was also overdue. This house, too, he checked and the goods, some of the latter have since been sold to other parties, but the check they are keeping as a souvenir while they laugh at their competitors who deceived.

GOT $500 WORTH OF GOODS.

The same dodge was tried on the Freed Furniture and Carpet company. About $500 worth of goods were delivered, but as the checks given in return were simply pieces of paper bearing a very pretty sample of handwriting, the firm prevailed upon the young sport to give the customary first mortgage and note.

BORROWED $500.

In the meantime O'Haver was getting busy. He needed some spending money and during his wanderings he made the acquaintance of Mr. Henderson, who in turn introduced him to Little. The loan man. To cut a long story short Little advanced $500 on a chattel mortgage on the splendid appointments of the flat upon the evidence being produced that the furniture had been bought and paid for. This evidence consisted of a number of receipts signed by the Dinwiddie Furniture company of Idaho Falls. The items correspond to those included in the appointments of the flat. These slips of paper are in the hands of Mr. Henderson, and will be used in pressing the charge of securing money under false pretenses.

BOMB EXPLODED.

Yesterday Claude Freed and Mr. Henderson met. Mr. Henderson remarked that O'Haver was negotiating to purchase a swell automobile, and then Freed said something about his paying for the furniture he had bought on credit first. Henderson took a couple of long breaths and then there was something doing. Mutual experiences with the gay young fellow were exchanged and Little was bawled on the subject.

The outcome was a hot-foot over to Judge Diehl's office, and the swearing out of a complaint by Little, charging O'Haver with obtaining money under false pretenses.

THE ARREST.

The warrant was placed in the hands of Deputy Sheriff Sharp, and all adjourned to the Constitution building. On arriving at the fourth floor, no admittance could be gained to the handsome quarters. Apparently there was not a soul around. The reason was they went away and made for a telephone and called up the rooms. A sweet, girlish voice answered, and said that Mr. O'Haver had gone to Buena Vista. "This is the telephone office," replied the truthful man at the other end of the wire, "and we want to get his address, because we believe that the message is important."

There was a moment's pause, and the girl was heard speaking to someone. Then she said: "Deliver it here, and I will attend to it."

The telegram was delivered five minutes later, with a man standing at each of the exits to the well flat.

O'Haver, of course, was at home. He was placed under arrest, and the girl allowed to go. Later some of his friends furnished bail in the sum of $500 for his appearance.

SALT LAKE DIES WAY FROM HOME.

Vivian McCune Falls Victim of Pneumonia While on New York Trip.

END IN HOSPITAL LAST NIGHT.

Wife Bringing Body Home and Will Reach Here on Monday Next—
Went East a Week Ago.

A telegram received by Joseph E. Wells, from New York today announced the death there in a hospital last night at 9 o'clock of Vivian McCune, a well known young Salt Lake mining man. The cause of death was pneumonia, and his illness had been of several weeks' duration.

Mr. McCune went to New York early in January to dispose of some Colorado oil land interests. He expected to be gone only about a month but continued to remain. His wife, who was Miss Louise Groesbeck, heard disagreeable rumors concerning the state of his health but he wrote her no particulars. Then she wired him that she was coming and he telegraphed acquiescence, adding that he was ill. Accordingly she left Salt Lake for his bedside and arrived there two or three days ago and found him in the last stages of pneumonia.

Mr. McCune left New York today with the body and will arrive home on Monday in the train service. The deceased is about 20 years of age and leaves a wife and one child, a babe about a year old. Another child died three or four years ago. The young man is a son of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. McCune, both of whom are in Peru, Mr. Wells today cabled them the sad intelligence of the death of their son.

WALKS THROUGH WASHOUT COUNTRY.

General Manager R. E. Wells is walking from the west end of the washout trouble and expects to arrive in Caliente tonight, when in all probability there will be something official forthcoming regarding the complete tie-up of the road which has been in vogue for nearly a week.

Locally it is announced that already the record of seven new bridges has been reached this week, that being the number built during the last few days by the small army of carpenters at work repairing the wreck.

At present, that communication will be opened with Caliente by Tuesday night. This will be in time to handle the Conference business, for which local men have been announced from this point.

On the west end of the long string of washouts this morning the morning opened with a fine day, as far east as Carp. It is between Carp and Caliente where the worst damage has been done by the waters. For the 40 miles between the points named the road is a continuous washout, some of them being several hundred feet long and from 20 to 30 feet deep.

Every bridge along this section has gone.

Providing the gangs can get into Caliente by Tuesday then there will be facilities at hand for expediting the work. There is considerable material stacked at this point and the yards there will admit of a free handling of rock, timbers, rails and other material and the concentration of forces generally.

At present the men are working near Minto.

Optimists at the Salt Lake Route office predict that the range working east and west will meet in about two weeks' time, when through communication will be re-established.

A man who came from Caliente this morning, having walked from that point to Crestline before taking the train, states that the water came down the town with a noise like an earthquake, and sweeping all before it. Such a rush was not remembered by the oldest inhabitant. The fact that at this point the valley spreads out was the only thing that saved the place. As it was, a number of houses received a portion of the stream through the back door and discharged it out of the front to the detriment of carpets and furniture. Below Caliente the famous Meadow Valley wash commences. Here the water, reinforced by additional torrents from the mountains, which are at right angles and run back anywhere from three to 20 miles, went ramping down the gorge, doing immense damage to the new Delamar pump house at Bamberg came out is not forthcoming.

BEFORE JUDGE DIEHL.

Al Miller Bound Over to the District Court.

Albert Moore, alias A. Miller, ex-floorman manager of the Utahna park dancing pavilion, was today held to the district court, in bonds of $500, to answer to a charge of criminality with a female. The case was referred to the criminal division of the city court. The crime is alleged to have been committed with Irene Wray, a girl 16 years of age, who on the witness stand gave damaging testimony against the accused. Other witnesses for the state were Charles Baughman, Emma Sahlberg and M. M. Woods. The latter is probation officer of the juvenile court, and was permitted to detail evidence given by the defendant Miller in the last named court, while testifying as a witness.

Atty. Newton, attorney for the defense, strenuously objected to Capt. Woods' testimony going in, and in the course of an argument in support of his objection he took occasion to severely arraign the juvenile court and its officers.

J. L. Bates, the man charged with beating his wife and threatening her life, was permitted to leave town, after having made a promise that he would go a good four days from here and never interfere with his wife.

WARDE AND THE MODERN DRAMA.

Compared Latter With Shakespeare and Asked For New Standard.

THE GRAND TRUTHS TAUGHT.

Lectured on "The Women of Shakespeare" in the Afternoon and "Hamlet" in the Evening.

Before a fair sized audience, composed mostly of the gentler sex, Frederick Warde, the noted actor delivered his interesting and highly instructive lecture, "The Women of Shakespeare," at the Salt Lake Theater yesterday afternoon. The stage was tastefully decorated with ferns and potted plants, and at the back was a pretty woodland scene, a scene most appropriate to some of the subjects so eloquently and exhaustively handled by the ever popular lecturer. At the center of the scene was a beautiful Elks' head with spreading antlers, as a mark of the esteem in which Mr. Warde is held by the local B. P. O. E.

President J. H. Paul of the L. D. S. U. was called upon by the management to introduce the lecturer, which he did in a neat and appropriate speech. Prof. Paul stated that, as many present regarded the works of Shakespeare almost as a second Bible, the lecture could not fail to be of intense interest and benefit to those fortunate enough to hear it.

From the moment Mr. Warde stepped before the audience and gave the greeting, "Fellow students," until he concluded with an earnest appeal to study Shakespeare for the grand and noble truths contained in the works, and not to measure them with commas and semicolons, he had his hearers keyed up to the highest tension of interest. Even in his flights of rhetoric and satire, he did not permit the audience to lose the threads of the stories so beautifully presented.

Referring to those commentators who declared that the great bard's domestic life was marred by a shrewish wife, Mr. Warde said they were called critics. "God save the mark!" He said he did not believe there was any parallel in the lives of the great men of letters. Mr. and Mrs. Shakespeare, but admitted that perhaps at times there were friendly differences of opinion, as are bound to crop up in the best regulated families.

Into the characters of Portia, Rosalind, Desdemona, Juliet, Cordelia, of King Lear, Portia, of Julius Caesar, and Lady Macbeth, Mr. Warde showed deep insight in his analysis of the characters was prefaced by a beautiful and grand tribute to noble womanhood.

SOME GRAND CHARACTERS.

He pointed vivid word-pictures of the great love and self-sacrifice of the women of Shakespeare; brought out the better and more comprehensive motives for actions which have been criticized by alleged "critics," and set forth details that are entirely overlooked by the average student of the bard. He pointed out all womanly grace, beauty, virtue and fidelity, he found in the character of Portia in the "Merchant of Venice." Mr. Warde differed with those new line writers who indicate in asking her lover to take her to church and make her his wife. The lecturer explained that Portia had a great purpose in her mind, and she was not to be trifled with. She was a woman of many things, but she was not a woman who would perform as a wife, hence her request to be first taken to church and married.

The ennobling qualities of each character were brought out so thoroughly that the hearers went away with a better, better and more comprehensive conception of Shakespeare's women. In Lady Macbeth Mr. Warde again differed from some commentators. Describing the character of the great crime, he saw the good manifested in the absence of selfishness. "Only in two places," said Mr. Warde, "does the husband, when she knew and understood quite well, as indeed do most wives today."

The audience was much better at last evening's lecture when "Hamlet" was the theme. In this, in the opinion of many, Mr. Warde is at his very best. At the outset he stated that he would not discuss the old stage of the Salt Lake Theater, on the boards trod by so many noted actors of the Shakespearean drama.

"And those walls which have listened to the voices of those great actors who have passed away will no doubt hear something of the new drama, the drama which I shall make tonight."

Before going into the subject, Mr. Warde told a capital story of an Englishman who went to see one of Shakespeare's plays. A friend asked, "Did you like the play?"

"Aw, yes," replied the other. "I rather liked it, don't know, but it was so exceedingly full of quotations, don't know."

THE MODERN PLAYS.
Mr. Warde made a striking contrast between the beautiful lines, and thoughts of Shakespeare, and the modern problem plays with ideas "conveyed in language which often makes our wives, mothers and daughters blush for shame."

Mr. Warde went after the modern questionable drama roughshod, and declared that the modern drama is in it. He said if Shakespeare was so antiquated, then let some other standard be established. "If you can find a higher standard than Shakespeare," he said, "then for goodness sake give it to us, and we will reach it."

In his analysis of the different characters in the great play, Mr. Warde clearly showed that the writer always had a great purpose in view and great lessons to teach, and indicated his belief in the existence of God and the immortality of the soul.

The rendition of the lines of the king, the murdered king, and Hamlet, was done with all the grace and eloquence which Mr. Warde is capable of. He explained the motives behind the seemingly insane actions of Hamlet, and explained how the melancholy Dane put on the semblance of insanity to carry out his purpose, and how all this was brought about because of the successive shocks to a gentle and sensitive nature.

A feature that took well with the audience and caused peal after peal of laughter, was the reading of the lines of the old grave digger, and the vein of satire that ran through the speaker's comparison of Shakespeare and the modern drama.

The audience went away more than pleased with the masterful lecture, and keenly regretted that every seat in

STUDENTS NON THE DEBATE.

The Team of the L. D. S. U. Carried the Honors on Chinese Exclusion Law.

WILL BE HEARD AGAIN.

Both Sides Make Good Showing and Entertain Large Audience With Facts and Argument.

The debate on Wednesday night in Barratt hall was an entertaining and brilliant affair. The question, "Resolved that the Chinese exclusion act should be rigidly enforced by the United States," was ably handled by two teams.

The affirmative was represented by three students of the Latter-day Saints' university—David Cummings, Raphael Olsen and Richard W. Young, Jr. These boys made a decided hit, and their argument seemed to please the audience, which was largely composed of students of the institution. The negative was represented by Nephth Jensen and James Carlson, selected from the school teachers of Salt Lake county. Supt. Ashton and a number of others of the county teachers were present. The applause was pretty evenly divided between the young student debaters and the more mature men representing the county teachers. It must be said, however, that the students carried the honors and they deserved the decision which they received from the judges. The judges were Hons. William H. King, B. H. Roberts and Frank Pitzer.

In rendering their decision the chairman, Judge King, voiced the sentiments of the judges by paying a high compliment to each team, and one of the judges on the question of delivery was in favor of the negative. The other two judges on this question and all three in respect to the matter of argument, decided in favor of the affirmative. The Thessalonian students certainly gave a good account of themselves. Mr. David Cummings opened the affirmative argument somewhat as follows: He defined the question and outlined the proof, showing that milder policies have failed, and giving the history of the Chinese in America.

He was followed by Nephth Jensen on the negative, with a careful and eloquent speech, which was forcibly and accurately pointed out and exact speech. A number of witnesses were called by the defense yesterday afternoon and testified that Wilson was a bad character and that he would carry a gun and use it if necessary. Two of them stated that Wilson had assaulted them on a previous occasion and had threatened to kill them.

Court convened this morning at 9 o'clock so as to complete the trial of the case today if possible. It is very doubtful, however, if the case will reach the jury before noon tomorrow.

DEFENDANT IS ON THE STAND.

Jess Thomas, the Man Accused Of Murder, Tells His Story.

GUN SHOT WAS ACCIDENTAL.

Claims He Tried to Strike Wilson With A Gun When The Killing Happened.

Jess Thomas, who is being tried in the criminal division of the district court for murder in the first degree for the killing of Harry Wilson last fall, was on the witness stand during the trial of the case today. He related to the jury his version of the trouble leading up to the shooting and of the fight during which Wilson was shot and mortally wounded.

In describing the affair Thomas said that Wilson after they had quarreled over the game of cards put his hand to his hip pocket as though reaching for a gun and the defendant thought that he would be shot. He accordingly pulled his own revolver and attempted to strike Wilson over the head with it when the latter caught his wrist and in the scuffle the gun was accidentally discharged and Wilson was shot. Thomas was under cross-examination when the court adjourned for the noon recess.

Mrs. Thomas, the wife of defendant was the first witness called today by the defense. She testified that her husband was in very poor health at the time of the fight with Wilson. James Green was the next witness. He told of the quarrel between Wilson and Thomas. The defendant was then placed on the stand in his own behalf.

A number of witnesses were called by the defense yesterday afternoon and testified that Wilson was a bad character and that he would carry a gun and use it if necessary. Two of them stated that Wilson had assaulted them on a previous occasion and had threatened to kill them.

Court convened this morning at 9 o'clock so as to complete the trial of the case today if possible. It is very doubtful, however, if the case will reach the jury before noon tomorrow.

WARDE GOES TO OGDEN.

Frederick Warde left for Ogden early this afternoon, to lecture. He remarked to a "News" representative that he was leaving that the change from the Thessalonian to the
