

A TRAGEDY IN ARIZONA.

AN OLD RESIDENT OF UTAH MURDERED.—HIS SUPPOSED ASSASSIN WOUNDED BY THE OFFICERS OF THE LAW.

SPRINGVILLE, APACHE CO., Arizona, Dec. 31st, 1886.

Editor Deseret News:

In this valley is located at present a ward of Latter-day Saints and its name is Union. There were formerly two wards but last July a new organization was effected and the Omer and Amity wards were combined and the name of Union given the new ward. We are located 35 miles up the Little Colorado River from St. Johns.

The inhabitants are mixed as to religion; there are about 50 families of "Mormons" and as many or more non-"Mormons" and Mexicans, and this is a gathering place on holiday occasions for a good many men who follow the cattle business, and some of these men are very reckless in the use of firearms. On December 25 Mr. Hales, formerly a member of our Church, was killed, but by whom it is not known. He was with others at a saloon and drinking. A coroner's inquest was held but no evidence could be found as to who did the killing. A complaint was sworn out against a man (a transient) and a posse went to arrest him on the 27th. He was on a good horse and attempted to run. He was ordered to stop but paid no attention to the command. The officers fired wounding him and shooting his horse in three places, but he still kept running till his horse fell dead and he was captured. His wound is not considered dangerous. A meeting was called of all good citizens on the evening of December 27th, and the best citizens of this valley, "Mormon," non-"Mormon" and Mexican, agreed to stand by the officers of the law in putting a stop to the reckless shooting in the streets of our town, as Mr. Hales is the third man killed in this vicinity inside of six months. He leaves a family of four sons, unmarried, the youngest about 11 years old. He was about 59 years of age, and was a Latter-day Saint in Navajo, and was formerly a resident of Davis County, Utah, and has resided in other places in Utah, where he has some children.

The "Mormon" people who reside here follow farming mostly, as also do the Mexicans, and a number of non-"Mormon" families also till the earth. Some are engaged in mercantile business, etc., and some are in the cattle business, and we all love peace and feel that as good, law-abiding citizens, we cannot submit to such actions as have been enacted here of late: we do not propose to do any unlawful act, but to stand by the proper officers in keeping the peace.

We were lately favored with a visit from Pres. Jesse N. Smith and Stake Recorder Fish, who held two meetings with us, giving us much good counsel and words of encouragement.

OCCASIONAL.

HAND-SHAKING IN WASHINGTON.

For the DESERET NEWS.]

Every city puts upon its people a trade-mark. Boston stamps the head, Chicago marks the feet, Washington energizes the hand. We can understand why expansion pushes upward in a Bostonian, and pulls downward in a Chicagoan; but why in our political metropolis, in a city of strangers, this immoderate and familiar hand-shaking? It is a stern fact that in Washington, wealth, pedigree and brains, all pay court to official position, and from this arises the popular belief, that members of Congress coming from their constituents, where handshaking is automatic, spread the contagion, making the hand-shaking of Washington a barren conventionalism, an idea that ought to be resented, as hand-shaking certainly is a very great factor in manipulating tools, the greatest government the world ever saw.

You will readily admit that geography plus inheritance makes the man; that all men are full of prejudices; that some men have rigid opinions; that a man in perfect agreement with a fellow being would be a rare finding. Then at Washington, the heart of this Titian Democracy, where comes pouring in the multitude from every point of the compass, each covered with the markings from his own locality, holding his own peculiar opinions, until it becomes dangerous to open your mouth, (except upon the broadest generalities, such as the weather, the health of families, etc.) how shall this divergent mass communicate when heads are dissimilar? Fortunately underneath all this confusion, the heart of humanity beats identically and finds expression in the hand. You, who fancy that hand-shaking is mere conventionalism, make a round of calls upon a reception day and note the marks of expression. Begin with Mr. Cleveland. So early! In this instance you will find that punctuality is the thief of time, you will have none to waste in waiting. Get a good seat. Watch the anxious crowd as it gathers in the East Room, each frantic to shake the hand of the President for one of two reasons, either of respect for a government whose President is one of the "common people," or that they may talk about it, "bequeathing it as a rich legacy unto their issue," etc. As the door opens to admit the President and his wife, see how awe-struck is the buzzing, whispering multitude, it rises and seems for all the world like a funeral procession keeping time to "The Dead March in Saul." Mr. Cleveland looks bored, and were it not for an expression that seems to say, "I scorn to serve the President; why so much to the office and so little to me?" We might fancy as we look at the pump-handle action that there was nothing in it except mechanical energy. If the motion wears him, why not let a lucky put his arms through the Executive sleeves and shake for him? Mrs. Cleveland looks bright and pretty and gives each hand a dainty squeeze which seems to say, "It is nice to be the first lady in the land and I love to have you come and see me." Pass now to another, select an ultra-fashionable one. If your card announces plain Mr. —, the shaking of your hand will remind you of being alone in the prairie and meeting a western blizzard; if you keep from making an apology for ever being born and get a warm place, you will enjoy it over so much.

The handshaking of government officials will naturally fall into tribes and genera. There is the Allisonian shake, all on one side; he always shakes with you, you never with him; his grip is suavely materialized; he hides any annoyance in smiles and affability. Mr. Allison would shake hands more warily with the humblest man of the masses than with the Czar of all the Russias, and send that shake, like a small force through a long distance, well interspersed with pulses. There is among the masses a snaking fondness for notice from men in position. The reporter who says something nice about a senator, receives what pleases more than money, a hand-clasp that "makes him feel good."

The amount of power in the energized hand is incalculable, and it is without doubt one of the levers that rests the government into position.

—The railroad officials say the 24-hour system on the Utah & Northern, between Butte and Ogden, works well. It is probable it will be adopted on the Northern Pacific and Montana Union.

—Anton Ludwig, in whose vest pocket some giant powder caps exploded not long since at Anaconda, Montana, and was thought to be fatally injured at the time, had one of his ribs removed last evening by a Butte physician at the Butte City Hotel. The sufferer is doing fairly well.

—A young man, named Parker Gray, of Inavary, Sevier County, Utah, was riding a horse race recently, when the horse stumbled and fell, rolling over on the young man and crushing him, and inflicting severe internal injuries. He lived 48 hours, during which time he suffered a great deal of pain.

—The Butte (Montana) Miner of the 5th says: The prisoners in our county jail turned over by ex-Sheriff Jameson to Sheriff Stirling are eight in number. Their names and offenses are as follows: Thomas Carson and Peter Kuey for attempt to commit burglary. The sentence of these two prisoners expires on the 24th of this month. M. E. James, attempt to commit murder; case continued to next term of court. This is the man who shot Blair, the one-armed man, in Douglas. Thomas Burke is charged with robbery, and is awaiting the action of the grand jury. Barney Kennedy, the Rawlins and Laramie crook, is also looking forward to the next grand jury. The charge is grand larceny. While A. L. Haines, W. W. Russell, and A. W. Brauner, will appear before the supreme court this month.

If the food is not properly digested it becomes corrupt, and poisons the system it is intended to nourish. This is indigestion.

"My wife has suffered for many years with indigestion. After trying everything else recommended, she tried Simmons Liver Regulator. In three days after taking it according to directions she was in perfect health; she does not suffer at all and can eat anything she wants without any of her previous symptoms."

OBITUARY.

HINDLEY.—John Hindley, for thirty-three years a prominent citizen of American Fork, Utah County, departed this life Dec. 26, 1886.

Deceased served an apprenticeship in Manchester, England, to painting in all its branches, becoming both an adept and an artist. Having heard the Gospel and being convinced of its truth, he was baptized Sept. 12, 1848, and emigrated in the following year, remaining in St. Louis until 1853, when he arrived in Utah with his wife, Sister Mary Hindley.

Returning on business to the States the following spring, he remained until 1855 and was on the frontier appointed captain of a company comprising over sixty wagons, with which he successfully reached Salt Lake City.

In Utah, Brother Hindley has been a worker; freighting, agriculture, merchandising were each witness to his general capacity; his honesty and integrity were favoring elements of character in these directions, and when civil and ecclesiastical preferment came, many prominent positions were held by him in which his natural force, aided by the spirit of each calling, made his labors a success.

For over a year sickness laid a heavy hand upon him, and some mental anxiety in regard to "the marriage relation" told upon his vigor; born in Tyldesley, Lancashire, England, October 1st, 1820, he was over 66 years old at his death, an event which though looked for was yet a shock to the local community.

Funeral services were held in the meeting house of American Fork, on the 29th inst. The large congregation was addressed by Elders T. V. Williams, David James, Henry Dinwoodey, H. W. Naisant and S. W. Richards, all old friends, from Salt Lake City. The arrangements were in charge of Bishops Thomas Baruff and Greenwood of American Fork, and Brothers Frank and Joseph Jennings of Salt Lake City.

Brother William Grant, with a good choir, rendered the musical services, after which over forty well filled vehicles accompanied the remains to the silent grave, to await the promise of the morning of the first resurrection.

Three wives and a nearly grown family, with many devoted friends, look forward to a reunion and association beyond the stars. —[COM.]

They made their home in Mantel Sappete Co., where she patiently bore the trials and hardships of those early days. While there she gathered around her a host of friends and assisted in making a comfortable home, which she enjoyed until 1880, when her husband was called to this place, she arriving here in 1881. She was ever ready to impart to the poor, visit the sick and comfort those who mourned. At the time of her death she held the office of Presiding Teacher in the Relief Society, which duty she performed with great credit. We have lost a true helper, her aged husband a faithful wife and her children a loving mother.

She leaves a husband, 7 children, 25 grand children and one great grand child to mourn her loss. Two children and 18 grand children have passed behind the veil ahead of her.
