Quarterly conference of the Fremont Stake of Zion convened in Flamm's hall, Rexburg, Ida., Saturday and Sun-day, Jan. 20 and 21, 1906.

day, Jan. 20 and 21, 1906. There were present from Salt Lake City Elder Rudger Clawson of the quorum of Twelve Aposties, and Elder Joseph W. McMurrin of the First Courcil of Seventies. President Thomas E. Bassett presided. President Mark Aus-tin was in California and President Aiert Heath was detained at his home of

The account of sickness. The academy choir furnished the singing for the meetings Saturday morning and Sunday afternoon, and the Rexburg Second ward choir for Satur-day afternoon and Sunday morning and the overflow meeting in the academy building Sunday afternoon. President Bassett welcomed all at conference and reported the excellent condition of the stake. There was an increased desire on the part of the people to serve the Lord. President Henry Flamm of the High Priests' quorum gave a brief report of his recent visit to Germany and Eng-land, where he went to gather genealogy. He stated that among those whom he met, he found none who were more comfortably situated or more devoted to their religion than are the Latter-day Saints. He spent some time among the Elders of the Swiss and German mission. There under the direc-tion of Elder Serg L. Ballif, 117 Elders non of Eddin sets L. Bank to truth. Notwithstanding the opposition of the priests and the prejudice of religious devotees, there is such a demand for the Gospel of Christ that President Ballif says he could use 200 more Elders. Elder Wallace Jacobs of Salem reported his labors as a missionary to Colorado, related some experience in-cident to missionary life; bore a strong cident to missionary life; hore a strong testimony to the truthfulness of the Gospel and urged the Latter-day Saints to be true to the Lord and exemplary in their conduct. At 2 o'clock p. m. Saturday confer-ence continued with President Bassett in charge in charge. Bishop T. J. Winter reported Rexin charge. Bishop T. J. Winter reported Rea-burg Second ward, with all organiza-tions complete and doing good work. The Religion class has a membership of about 100.

The Religion class has a memoership of about 100. Elder Ezra Christiansen, in reporting the academy, said that it is better this year than ever before, there being all the special departments that any of the Church, schools have. The Sunday schools are doing good work and the stake board has ar-ranged to hold conference with every Sunday school in the stake and con-duct the exercises of the school on the day that the conference is held. The stake superintendent will preside, the stake chorister will lead the singing and members of the board will conduct the classes. Sunday School Union is succeeding better than had been hoped for.

for. Sister Matilda Flamm reported that the Relief society is working as usual and a considerable amount of grain is being accumulated by the sisters. Bishop B. R. Harris of Salem said Bishop B. R. Harris of Salem said he was united with his counselors and all the people of his ward. All of the ward organizations, he said, are doing an excellent work. The ward meeting!

the people in Marysville ward wer never so united as at present. Super-intendent George Cole reported that Re-ligion Classes are established in most of the wards, and with few exceptions every ward had been visited since last stake conference. President Joseph W. McMurrin dwelt upon the special calling of a Seventy in the Church. Said the quorums should consist of young, vigorous men, who can go upon mission at any time. He ex-plained that no one would be forced to go upon a mission; all a Seventy needed to do if he can not go, is to say so, or say that his circumstances will not permit, and he will be excused. BAPTISMS IN IOWA

Council Bluffs, Iowa, Jan. 22 .- We take pleasure in reporting the baptism of 11 persons. On Jan, 3, 1906. Mrs. Emma Cora Fox of Valley Junction was baptized by Elder J. O. Duke, and on Jan. 21st at Council Bluffs Elder Thos. O. Stokes had the pleasure of leading the following honest souls into the waters of baptism; Mr. George Bell and daughters Hazet and Ruth, Mrs. Ann D. Bird, Mrs Lucy A. Newton and daughters Lena A, and Mary E. and son James H., also Misses Carrie Jus-tesen and Belle Sutherland. The date having been set a week pre-vious a good unumber of Saints and

To see the fruits of our labors gives us much encouragement and we feel that the Lord is assisting us greatly. We have an excellent Mutual Im-provement association in this city; also one at Des Moines, Iowa, both of which are well attended. Two Sunday schools are doing successful work in this conference, at Council Bluffs and Boone, respectively. A special effort is being put forth by the Elders, to hold cottage meetings during the winter months. At these meetings we gen-erally have the privilege of speaking to new investigators.

Prof. N. L. Nelson Reviews Prof. J. H. Evans' Book.

T is matter of congratulation that the day of the scholar-the day of the day of the scholar-the day of the attent here searching studentthe patient, long-searching studentknown.

is beginning to come in among the Latter-day Saints. It means greater accuracy in the facts behind our future literature, and freedom from verblage in the expression of them. The remark is especially apt in view of a recently published home-production which it is my pleasure to review. 1 refer to "One Hundred Years of Mormonism." by Prof. John Henry Evans of the L. D. S. university.

In his preface the author assures us that he has been five years at work on this history, during which time he has read every accessible book, pamphlet or article relating to the subject, whether "Mormon," non-"Mormon," or anti-"Mormon;" which fact encourages the reader to hope that the book is a thoroughly reliable narrative of a much maligned people, and condensed to such moderate compass that the busiest of men may find time to read it. The book, which is from the Deseret News press, is a volume of 528 pages, in very readable type, and handsomely bound in cloth decorated with a conventionalized design of the century aloe in bloom. As I shall have so many good things to say about this work later on, I may as well be done with my fault finding right here on the start.

start. "Up to almost the end of my task," says Mr. Evans, "it was my intention to publish a complete bibliography of the subject." It seems to me regret-table that the question of space ruled out this design. One may never, as a matter of fact, look up the references in foot notes; nevertheless one feels more comfortably secure of the facts set forth, when the authorities are cited. Two circumstances may, however, be Two circumstances may, however, be urged in justification for their omission, The book is in story form, and aims at the continuous interest of a novel; and it is written primarily for the young men and women of the Church, young men and women of the Church, the sons and daughters, in the main, of those heroic souls whose deeds are here recorded. The book is, however, so thoroughly readable that it should also have a wide circulation in high-schools and colleges, where sources of fact are closely sourced and amount fact are closely scanned, and among outsiders, who naturally read with suspicion.

The most serious fault, however, is The most serious fault, however, is the entire absence of an index. I have had to dog-ear the pages to keep in mind just what I want in this review. Nor is the table of contents of the least service as a guide, the chapter-titles being for the most part figura-tive; as for instance. "Rising from the Ashes," "Malevolent Echoes," "A Ram in the Thicket," and so on, fragments of which seem apt enough when you get through with a chapter, but utterly get through with a chapter, but utterly get through with a chapter, but utterly enigmatical as you approach it. I am informed that the author is now at work remedying this defect, and that the next lot bound will contain an in-dex. He should also publish a few pages of bibliography next the index. The predominating observations in pages of bibliography next the index. The predominating characteristic in Prof. Evans' style is simplicity and di-rectness. I was about to say, a charm-ing simplicity and directness. When the advance sheets first reached me, previous to the coming forth of the book. I greatly feared this would not be so. I was afraid that as in so much of our home literature, the feelings of the writer had unduly colored his in-tellectuality. I am pleased now to be able to assure the readers that the poetic finery of the table of contents is no foretaste of a corresponding no foretaste of a corresponding body-good or sickish-sweet style; the book is admirably free from nauseating sentimentality. Perhaps I cannot do better that quote Prof. Evans' account

This prospectiveness and retrospectiveness marks also the transition of paragraphs. Here is an instance. The career of the notorious "Doctor" Ben-nett has been traced down to the time nett has been traced down to the time when the Prophet Joseph refused to sustain him further as a result of being exposed, Bennett is represented as being very penitent. "Should the time ever come," said he, "that I may have the opportunity to test my faith, it will then be known whether I am a trator or a true man." So closes one of Prof. Evans paragraphs. The next opens like the jaws of a steel trap: "That time came, and proved him traitor to the bone." It is by rhetorical devices of this type, hidden to the ordinary read-er, but pleasantly obvious to the situ-dent of style, that interest is aroused and keet undragging in the story... Perhaps it is too much to expect of and kest undagging in the story. Perhaps it is too much to expect of any arient Latter-day Saint the dis-interested candor which, in the Bible, paints David, the national hero of Is-rael, as both murderer and adulterer. Yet if we are ever to stand as a light unto the nations, we must write history with just that severe fidelity to truth. There are episodes in our annals which should not be glossed over nor apolo-gized, but should be left naked for us to feel bad about, and for our children's to feel bad about, and for our children's children to feel bad about. No discl-pline could be more wholesome than this for the sanity of a peo-ple. I am sorry I cannot say that Prof. Evans belongs to this class of historians. He approaches the standard, however, to the extent of giving honestly whatever show of reason our enemies may have had for their conduct. Another admirable feature is his attempt to find reasons, in the play and interplay of purely human motives, for much that other writers among us attribute en bloc to the devil. One commendable feature of this book lies in the fact that it is no echo of any other book. It reaches inde-pendent conclusions. Some of these with of any other book. It reaches inter-pendent conclusions. Some of these the reader will perhaps disagree with; as when the writer asserts that the plates were under Joseph's eye as he translated the Book of Mormon. Other interpretations he will be grateful for. Who has not wondered, for instance, at that enigmatical episode in the life of the Prophet, his candidacy for presi-dent of the United States? Prof. Evans analyzes the political situation and makes you see that the only same thing for the Saints to do way to throw away their vote to escape party complica-tions. "That any 'Mormon' entertained tions. That any Mormon enterman the vaguest hope concerning the Proph-et-candidate and his preacher-associate, is not to be thought of as within the range of probability. Everything connected with the affair goes to show this as an opportunity to prove their politas an opportunity to prove their point-ical consistency, to escape the political snare that was already forming around their feet, and to get before the people of the nation some original and power-ful ideas respecting government."

Need I urge in conclusion that "One Hundred Years of Mormonism" "One Hundred Years of Mormonism" should be in the hand of every young Latter-day Saint? In the first place, this history will, I am confident, be read with interest by the average boy or girl, from preface to conclusion. In the next place, it will, if I mistake not, arouse in them the herole spirit of their fathers, and help commit them irrevoc-ably to the cause of Zion. It ought, moreover, to banish forever that fend-ency to feel apologetic for "Mormon-ism" and its past, which some of our young people foolishly harbor, and make them hold up their heads with a just pride in their ancestry and achieve-ment. In short, I know of no book ment. In short, I know of no book more likely, just now, to stiffen the ranks of our people for their mighty destiny than this simple tale of Mormonism. One other remark in this connection an excellent work. The ward meetingl house is progressing nicely, and it is being generally supported by the people. Sister Agness Winter and her co-laborers in the Primary were united. She said that the work of the asso-clation was reasonably satisfactory, but it might be helped if the Bishops would give it better recognition. of a familiar episode in the Prophet's life, as illustration of this fact. "The significance that attaches to the apostasy of Booth and Ryder at this time, is that they led a strong oppo-sition against the Prophet, which result-ed in the customary mob violence. This disturbance occurred in the latter part disturbance occurred in the latter part of March, 1832. On the night of the 24th, when Joseph, exhausted by long watching at the bedside of two sick children—the Murdock twins, which Emn.s had adopted in place of her own, which had died-had thrown himself upon the bed and fallen asleep, Emma, who had retired, was awakened by a tapping at the window, which however, she took no particular notice of at the time. But it was only a few moments till a dozen men broke into the room, roughly took up the sleeping form of Joseph, and dragged him out, amid the screams of his wife, and his own strug-gles to free himself from their grasp. About 30 rods from the house they About 30 rods from the house they came upon another band of men with Sidney Rigdon, who had been dragged by the feet, his head beating against the rough, frozen ground. Leaving Rigdon unconscious, the united mob, increasing in number every minute, went about 30 rods further, where they held a consultation to detarmine what held a consultation to determine what should be done with the Prophet. "While the majority were thus en-gaged, a number of others held Joseph, being careful to keep him from touching the ground, lest he should spring away from them. The result of the deliberation was, that he should be stripped of his clothes and then covered with tar and feathers. With threats horrible imprecations, and blasphemy, they perpetrated this outrage upon the Prophet's person, forcing the tar paddle into his mouth, and breaking a vial of liquid against his teeth. They then liquid against his teeth. They then left. After several attempts to rise, he finally succeeded, wiped away the tar from his lips so that he might breathe more freely, and made his way towards a light, which he found issued from his own window. Calling for a blanket, he entered the house, where a number of sisters, hearing of the reache hed selected the route her set number of sisters, hearing of the trouble had collected. He spent the rest trouble had collected. He spent the rest of the night in removing the tar and cleansing his body. The next day being Sunday, he preached at the usual meet-ing of the Saints, several of the mob-bers being in attendance, but he made no allusions to the preceding night. For several days after this barbarous treat-ment, Sidney Rigdon was dellrious." The committee of brethren whose en-The committee of brethren whose en-dorsement follows the title page, after mentioning that the writing is plain, simple and direct, add that there is ap-parently no effort at ifterary embellish-ment. I suspect that it would be nearer the mark to say that so carefully ha the work been chiseled and polished that almost every trace of literary arti-fice is hidden. To write a plain, un-varnished tale is the acme of literary embellishment, this is art which actu-ally succeeds in hiding art. It may be taken for granted that whenever the reader's mental energy is economized, the writer's mental energy has been very severely taxed. "I like your book SO much." said a lady to Sheridan. "It is so easy to read." "Yes, madam," reis so easy to read." "Yes, madam," re-plied the dramatist somewhat gruffly, "but perhaps you don't realize that books easy to read are d-d hard to write". write.

It is in its perspectives and 'retrospects especially that one appreciates the literary work which has made this an easy book to read. History is not here related chronologically, or by that most obvious law of sequence, contigunity in time and space. That method throws all the burden of unity and co-herency upon the reader. It is an easy way to write history, but a hard way to read it. On the contrary, facts in Prof. Eyans' book are massed by higher laws of association: by cause and effect, by contrast, by resemblance, and by the correlation of genus and species. Chapters have a way of pointing forward, es may not seem out of plac occur to the Latter-day Saint that one aspect of the glory of Zion must inevitably be that which finds its pression in her literature? And expression in her literature? And that the struggling author-who, if he could be supported while he writes, would do more than a thousand preachers to up-build the kingdom-must nevertheless live like the rest of his brethren, if not by the use of his nen, then by the by the use of his pen, then by the abandoning of his pen? A farmer or business man dropping out of his pro-fesion would make no difference to the advancement of our sector. fesion would make no difference to the advancement of our cause.
