

SALT LAKERS IN GOTHAM.

Familiar Names in Gay New York—Jennie Hawley, Ada Dwyer Russell, Maude Adams, All at Work in their Professions.

Special Correspondence.

New York, Sept. 29, 1901.—Agnes Rose Lane—the name may sound unfamiliar to many of our readers, but it is a well known one here, both professionally and socially. A talented actress with a most charming personality, in her stage career she has been associated with Mansfield, Clay Clement, Wilton Lackaye and Clara Morris. She has herself starred in "Miss Francis of Yale" and "Melbourne." It is her ambition to go out to Utah with a first class stock company, procure a theatre and give all "round good performances. She is thoroughly conversant with theatrical business and is capable of carrying out such an enterprise if financially backed by a responsible party. It is the wish of her friends that she may succeed in this undertaking. Utah will find Miss Lane an able exponent of the drama and we bespeak for her a social triumph.

Harold and Guy Eldredge are back with us for the winter, the former to re-enter the studio of his teacher, Prof. Sauvage, and Mr. Guy to prepare at the Woodbridge school for Columbia.

From our home papers we read very eulogistic notices of Mr. Harold Eldredge and his great improvement under Sauvage.

On Park avenue near 75th street can be found Mr. B. F. Cummings and family, who are now well established New Yorkers. It is the intention of Mr. Cummings to remain another year, his boys being in school and his rapidly increasing business as representative of the Deseret News requiring it in this part of the country some time longer.

At the "Utah Tavern" as it is familiarly called 202 West 23rd street, many of our home visitors are to be found. A week ago two young ladies were taking in the sights of New York for the first time—Miss Florence McKeevor and Miss Hattie McKeevor. Chicago and the Pan-American had been visited and Washington was to be seen after their visit here was ended. They were present at the Sunday evening services of the Latter-day Saints, and Miss McKeevor spoke to the assembly for a few moments very interestingly. She is taking a short vacation from her duties in the Bank of Commerce.

Wednesday, Sept. 25th, from pier 14, the St. Louis steamed out, carrying some friends to old England. Among its many passengers we recognized John Philip Sousa and his band of musicians on their way for a brief tour of the British Isles.

Col. Thomas, of London, who has been in Salt Lake for the last five months, was seen here a few days ago at the residence of his old friend, Hon. Jno. W. Young. He sailed from Boston on the "Commonwealth." "Auf Wiedersehen."

Ada Dwyer Russell has nearly finished her engagement with the "Up York State" company. She will go with them to Boston for six days, then return to begin rehearsals with Kyrie Bellows in a "Gentleman of France." Mr. Russell is rehearsal with Mrs. Le Moine. It is expected Bellows will play in a long season in New York.

Jennie Hawley, who is often mentioned in your musical columns, is studying very hard at present, with Oscar Sanger. Her voice has undergone a wonderful change. It is higher, purer and clearer. She has under consideration several good offers for this winter, but thinks it wiser for a while to continue her studies. In her company we spent a delightful hour, listening to her singing, and congratulating her on the improvement. On her invitation we went to see Ethel Barrymore, at the Garrick; she is still playing to crowded houses in "Captain Jinks."

Maude Adams is rehearsing every afternoon for her play "Qualifications." Her mother, Mrs. Annie Adams, is still with the "Captain Jinks" company. Mrs. Werner and Mrs. Easton lunched with them a few days ago in Maude's quaint and pretty home. "Lady Babble" is working hard but looks well after her summer vacation. They both have a welcome for their friends from home, and show in many ways, they have not forgotten Utah and her people.

An afternoon song recital was given in the elegant studio of Dr. Frank Dosseri, Carnegie Hall, this week. The visitors, Mrs. Annie Adams, Miss Ada Patterson, Mrs. Werner and Miss Reid of Washington, D. C., with a party of friends, came together to hear R. C. Easton and Francis Archambault, (baritone) two of Dr. Dosseri's pupils in some of their best pieces; selections from "Faust" and "Aida" were given, then a duet from "Hamlet," by Mrs. Dosseri and Archambault. Before separating Tagli's "Good Bye" and "Loch Lomond," one of "Bob's" Scotch favorites, were demanded; both gentlemen surpassed themselves in the interpretation of these popular songs.

Every theater is open and there is plenty of material to write about. The concert season will not be in full swing for a month yet. Mrs. Pike at the Manhattan, is the most talked of actresses just now, and her play most generally discussed of any in New York. I shall hope to have something to say about "Miranda of the Balcony" in my next letter.

THRICE REWARDED.

United States, France and Spain Recognize Deed of Horton.

It is not often that an American officer wins in recognition of a single achievement, not only the hearty approval of his own government, but coveted decorations from two foreign nations as well. This triple reward fell to the lot of Captain W. E. Horton, a volunteer officer in Manila.

At that time Manila was under the spell of the tragic fate of Baron Adhemar du Marais, a gallant Frenchman who had perished in the cause of humanity. In April, 1896, Spanish officers and soldiers, and a considerable body of friars, all of whom had fallen into Aguinaldo's hands as prisoners of the year before, were still retained in captivity by the Filipino insurgents. All efforts on the part of the United States government to effect the release of these captives had failed. A mass meeting was held in which the various foreign consuls were the leading spirits. Resolutions were drafted voicing an appeal in the name of humanity to the Aguinaldo government. When this was done it became necessary to find a man who would dare to venture into the heart of the insurgent country.

At this crisis Baron du Marais came forward. He offered to take the letter and go alone with it to Aguinaldo. In vain his friends sought to dissuade him. The baron knew, better than anyone else, the dangers ahead of him, for he had been for years in close business relations with the natives. Provided with a pass that took him beyond the American lines, Du Marais entered the insurgent camp under a flag of truce.

He saw Aguinaldo, but his humane mission failed utterly. On his return journey Du Marais was foully murdered by the insurgents who had been detailed to act as his escort. The news reached Manila, but, after the insurgents had been driven away from the scene of the death of the splendid Frenchman no information could be had as to his burial place.

The French consul made unsuccessful efforts to find the grave. The story of the tragedy and the failure to find the hero's resting place made a strong impression on Captain Horton. He resolved to find all that was left of Du Marais and thus fulfill an obligation due not only to France, but also to all humanity. All that was known was that Du Marais had been killed near Calumpit, thirty miles from Manila. Weeks of almost sleepless search ensued, and clue after clue was run down without success. Finally Captain Horton found natives who, he was certain, knew the secret. He forced them to divulge their knowledge, uncovered the grave near Santo Tomas and started back to Manila with the remains. Enough was left of the late baron's clothing and papers to make identification possible. Captain Horton's endeavors were made the subject of glowing commendation in General MacArthur's report to Washington. The French government made him a chevalier of the Legion of Honor. Spain conferred upon him knighthood in the Isabella la Católica and President McKinley changed his captivity of volunteers to one in the regular army. The consent of Congress is necessary before this young soldier can accept the foreign honors, but it is already understood that permission will be granted readily. Thus has one of the youngest officers of his rank en-

Ask Him

Ask your doctor what he thinks of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. He knows the formula, so ask him if there is anything better for purifying the blood, strengthening the digestion, and building up the nerves. Follow his advice, whatever it may be.

"I have taken Ayer's Sarsaparilla every spring since 1848. As a blood-purifying and nerve-strengthening medicine it cannot be equalled."
