BREVITIES.

Sorrow's best antidote is employment.

A "dog tournament" was Chicago's latest sport.

If the world despises a hypocrite, what must they think of him in heaven?

Charity loses its benign influence when heralded by ostentation.

Be not hasty in believing flying reports to the injury of another.

For most men, life picks its way through chances, as a pedestrian through the thoroughfare.

An Englishman proposes to excavate Mount Ararat for the remains of the Ark.

Virtue is content with little, but nothing can satisfy vice.

"One Night in Ten Bar Rooms," is a forthcoming drama by Mark Twain.

A New York editor won $6,000 on the Harvard and Oxford match.

An American gave Patti a silver bucket, hoping it would be long before she kicked it.

The Emperor of China refuses to see the Duke of Edinburgh on a footing of equality.

Marriage of first cousins will be illegal in New Hampshire on Christmas and thereafter.

A reunion of all the army correspondents of the different newspapers is mooted.

Paper table-napkins are coming into use in Germany. The Japanese have used them for centuries.

Retrace your steps when you have done wrong; it is nobler to retract than to sustain a wrong cause.

No bull of Irish extraction can excel that of Corbett's. In one of his "Rural Rides," he says: "I saw no corn standing in ricks; a thing I never saw before, and would not have believed had I not seen it."

A story is told of a belle at White Sulphur Springs who according to a vow, accepted the one hundredth man who proposed to her.

Several mechanics in Colt's armory, at Hartford, have contracted to go to Russia to make guns for that government. They will get more pay, and expect to live cheaper than here.

A wonderful man styled by the local papers "a quiet, inoffensive person," was attacked by sixteen masked men at Decatur, Ala., on the night of the 13th, and succeeded in killing thirteen of them. "We shouldn't like to meet what would be called in Decatur a 'desperate character.'"

A correspondent of the Boston Traveller, to illustrate the universal fondness for rowing which prevails in England, says: "I saw a four-oared boat on the river a few days ago, manned as follows: Bald-headed old gentleman pulling stroke, two daughters amidstide, small boy bow, and a very small boy coxswain. They were pulling well—a good stroke—clean through the water, and in a narrow boat, too; I think it was a shell."

The London Scotsman, commenting upon the recent scandal about the Duke of Edinburgh's Australian presents, says: "We fear that the foible—if that is the right name for it—is constitutional in His Royal Highness. We have been told that when a middie he was wont to hawk among his brother midshipmen portraits of his royal mother."

The Gettysburg Battlefield Monument Association are preparing a reply to the assault by the Northern and Southern press upon the indication proceeding on the battlefield, explaining the misconceptions regarding it, and claiming that the affair was a brilliant success. The association has taken steps to have descriptive stones erected on the battlefield as indicated by the Generals who were present.

A paper at Puget Sound says that in Squaw Lake, at a point some 400 yards from the shore, is a forest of large trees, standing upright, the tops of which are mostly under water; but a few of them reach out a few feet. It is believed that a section of the country has at a comparatively late date, sunk at that point, and so perfectly was the sinking accomplished that the trees retained their standing position.

A complete revolution in weaving is prophesied from the introduction of a method by which the wool is carried through the chain in a curve instead of at right angles. A variety of the pattern, both in shade and markings, can be attained in this way of which the old process was wholly incapable. This new process is adapted to fabrics of any kind, and can be used both for weaving by hand, and with power looms.

There is no other spoken language so cheap and expressive by telegraph as the English. So electric wires are becoming teachers of our mother tongue in foreign countries. The same amount of information can be transmitted in fewer English words than in French, German, Italian or any other European language. In Germany and Holland especially, it is coming to be a common thing to send telegrams in English, to save expense and insure precision.

The influence of temper upon the tone deserves much consideration. Habits of querulousness or ill-nature will communicate a cat-like quality to the singing, as inflexibly as they give quality to the speaking voice. That there really exists amiable tones is not an unfounded opinion. In the voice there is no deception; it is to many the index of the mind, denoting moral qualities; and it is remarked that the low, soft tones of gentle and amiable beings, whatever their musical endowments may be, seldom fail to please, besides which, the singing of ladies indicates the cultivation of their taste generally, and the embellishment of their minds.
