CHANGE OF NAME.—From and after to-day the military post situated near Beaver City, Utah Territory, and now called Post of Beaver will, by order of the War Department, be known as Fort Cameron, in honor of Col. 102 DEG. IN THE SHADE.—The New York Tribune says that on the 10th of June last the thermometer rose to 102 deg. in the shade in the streets at 4 p.m., an unprecedented height for years. A change in the atmosphere was hardly felt for three or four hours afterward. At 3 a.m. the mercury was at 74 deg., at 6 a.m. 79 deg., at 9 a.m. 83 deg., at mid-day 98 deg., at 2 p.m. 99 deg., at 6 p.m. 93 deg.

GERMAN POSTAL ABRASION.—For the facilitation of business the German government is about to cause letters to be delivered from the mail railroad car to such persons as desire to obtain their correspondence in that way. The object is to afford merchants, bankers, and business men generally the opportunity to receive their correspondence immediately on the arrival of the train without waiting for the tedious distribution at the post office. All letters desired to be taken thereby must be marked "despatch," and a charge of $1 per cent will be made to all who desire to take advantage of this new arrangement.

THE COMET.

The thunderstorm of the last two or three days have almost put the comet out of mind, but there is sufficient interest attached to it to render it an object of much inquiry and speculation for some time yet.

In a letter to the New York Tribune Professor Henry M. Parkhurst, congratulates Professor Swift upon the discovery of what promises to be the most wonderful and instructive comet in the history of the world.

Prof. Parkhurst computed the actual length of the tail to be certainly over 3,000,000 of miles on July 25, and an increase in length of one-tenth daily, he computed that the tail would strike the earth on July 30. Later observations of greater accuracy confirm him in the opinion that the earth will be "either so near the tail of the comet, as it sweeps across the ecliptic, that it will fill a large portion of the sky, or, if its curvature is not too great, shall be completely enveloped within it; and the phenomenon may be visible in the northern hemisphere, although it is too early yet to determine whether it may not be during the hours of daylight in this country."

The Professor gives the following further observations:

"On Tuesday evening, June 30, and on the following evening the comet will be before the twilight fairly ends; but on Thursday, July 2, at 9:30 o'clock, the comet will be easily seen by the naked eye in the northernmost sky (no other stars of Venus magnitude) with a tail about five degrees in length. On succeeding evenings the nucleus will be seen in the same direction, but the tail will increase in length, so as to bring its extremity gradually northward. On the 14th of July the head of the comet will have reached the horizon in the north, and at the close of twilight, so that it will not easily be visible after that date; but the tail will extend nearly to the pole star.

"Donati's comet had a retrograde motion, and when the earth met it, and the tail was most brilliant, it was placed nearly at right angles with the line of vision. On the other hand, this comet, whose perihelion distance is very little greater, coming just within the orbit of Venus, moves in the same direction with the earth, and nearly with the same velocity (reduced to the plane of the ecliptic) in consequence of which the tail, which is now nearly at right angles with the line of vision, will gradually turn towards us, still apparently pointing nearly in the same direction. It will be remembered that Donati's comet was curved like a soldier's plume, but Coggia's is now and will remain nearly straight, because the curvature will be directly from us and therefore imperceptible. Another striking difference from the tails of comets generally is that it will be so forceful, as to be remarkably wide at the end.

"On July 16th the tail will extend far beyond the horizon, and develop a new characteristic, tapering off rapidly toward the end. Within three or four days after the 16th, the tail will have become so expanded in the neighborhood of the pole as to fill a large part of the northern hemisphere. Yet it will not be a conspicuous object, because it will be so faint as to look rather like an immense cloud or a new Milky Way, than what it really is. By this time we shall have solved the question whether the tail is hollow, or has a radiated structure, or what its constitution is.

"Of the way in which this will end it is not safe yet to speak with definiteness, for the pole star will be straight, we should be almost certainly near the middle of it on July 20, yet its curvature will probably delay it two or three days, and even until the end has passed beyond its path. Taking the best value I can from the records of previous comets, the tail will reach the earth on July 22nd, to be wholly within the eastern edge of the comet's tail; and I will assume this to be the case. The comet will then be at the distance of about 100,000,000 miles from the earth, but then the inhabitants of the southern hemisphere, who may be ignorant of the cause of the unusual display of the evening sky, will be gradually and pass away, and will be amazed by the sudden appearance of a comet of extraordinary size and unusual character, which will burst upon their vision as unforeseen as the great comet of 1861. The gradual diminution and disappearance of the comet will be so nearly the converse of what we shall have witnessed here that it needs no description."

Professor Parkhurst does not anticipate, from the visit of the comet, any appreciable physical effect further than possible electrical phenomena like the aurora. The comet will leave us a portion of its atmosphere, yet probably not enough to affect the barometer or come within scientific cognizance. The moon, which has not a little atmosphere, may also gain a portion of the atmosphere of the comet and henceforth, by the moon's having an atmosphere of greater or less density, the phenomena of occultations and solar eclipses may be materially modified.

FREE OR DESPOTIC? Appleton's New American Cyclopaedia, under the heading of "Taxes," says:

"In a free government, taxes are levied by the representatives of the people, and course with the consent of those who are to pay them; in despotic governments they are levied at the will of the ruling power."

This being the case, are the people of this Territory living under a free or a despotic government? They pay taxes to the federal government, but how is it done by their consent? What voice have they in the imposition of those taxes? Recent legislation taxes them specially for the support of certain school officers. Did the people who are to pay this tax ever give their consent to its being imposed upon them? Would they give their consent if they were asked?

As they did not give their consent to the imposition of that tax, laid on so other people in the Union, as the consent to the people of this Territory was never asked in the matter, must they be held to be living under a free or a despotic government? If under a despotic government, the Cyclopaedia must be wrong. If not under a despotic government, then whether are we drifting?

HOME-MADE MARRIAGE CEREMONY.

The Louisville Courier Journal of a recent date gives an account of a unique "marriage" in New Albany. The parties were Spiritualists, and when the guests were assembled the following written agreement was read, and subscribed to by the bride party—

"Friends and Fellow-citizens, Ladies and Gentlemen:—We, the undersigned, do hereby solemnly swear, believing that our hearts and souls are already matrimonially united, appear before you now, thus publicly to celebrate the consummation of our union. We hold the opinion that neither church nor state has any moral or equitable right to interfere with, or any just claim to be consulted in reference to, the arrangements that our spontaneous sentiments and sympathies have prompted us to make. Therefore, in non-conformity to, and disregarding the rules and regulations of any church or state, we have adopted such forms and ceremonies as, in our judgment, seem to be the most just and proper. And now, in the presence of the witnesses and of our invisible spirit friends, here assembled, we solemnly swear, as husband and wife, and may God and the angel world add their benediction."

New want some active lobbyist post off to Washington next winter and endeavor to have a special law made to break up that "marriage" and punish the high contracting parties? If there is any money in it the lobbyist will doubtless be there.

BY TELEGRAPH.

A Hurricane. PHILADELPHIA, 6.—On Saturday evening a hurricane visited Salem, N. J., smashing buildings and damaging property. The storm, which was called a "hurricane," was the most just and proper. And now, in the presence of the witnesses and of our invisible spirit friends, here assembled, we solemnly swear, as husband and wife, and may God and the angel world add their benediction."

New want some active lobbyist post off to Washington next winter and endeavor to have a special law made to break up that "marriage" and punish the high contracting parties? If there is any money in it the lobbyist will doubtless be there.
