

WASHING THEIR LINEN IN PUBLIC

Princess de Sagan's Attorney
Tells What Kind of a Man Count
Boni de Castellane Was.

FRENCH SOCIETY WAS THERE.

Charged Sole Motive for Entering Suit Was Ex-Husband's Hatred
Of the Prince.

Paris, Dec. 9.—French society crowded the courtroom in the palace of justice today to hear M. Julemier, speaking in the name of the Princess de Sagan, oppose the suit entered by Count Boni de Castellane, in which he petitions that the custody of his three children be given to his mother, the Marquise de Castellane. When Princess de Sagan, formerly Miss Anna Gould, secured a divorce from the Count de Castellane, custody of her children was awarded to her.

If M. Bonnet, speaking for the count, did not spare Princess de Sagan a fortnight ago, M. Julemier was no less denunciatory and bitter in his characterization, on this occasion, of the count.

Castellane's sole motive in entering this suit, he charged, was hatred of the Prince, the very thought of the prince occupying a place in the affections of his former wife and living in the superb mansion on the Avenue Malakoff, he charged, was the sole motive for his action. He charged that while in Buenos Ayres he did not lead the adventurous life accredited to him. These are other accusations, counsel declared, were base calumnies, concocted by the man who had squandered the fortune of Miss Gould and left her with debts amounting to $2,200,000 to settle.

"M. de Castellane has reproached M. de Sagan for living in a hired room," continued the lawyer. "Why did he not offer him asylum in one of the seven homes he continually frequents?"

M. Julemier then accused the count of furnishing mendacious information to the Gould family in the hope of thwarting his rival.

"The jealousy of M. de Castellane," he said, "results from the thought that each day makes more and more, that M. de Sagan is enjoying the great happiness which to him is lost forever."

M. Julemier was followed by Mr. Roussset, who appeared on behalf of George J. Gould, brother of Princess de Sagan, a party in the defense in his capacity as trustee of the Gould estate. M. Roussset characterized as abominable and scandalous Count de Castellane's attempt to besmirch the reputation of the mother of his children merely for the purpose of venting his hatred. The only way in which the princess could have avoided this suit would have been to submit to extortion and threats, but this she would not do because she had nothing to reproach herself with and nothing to fear. "The methods employed by M. de Castellane assuredly will be branded as they deserve by French justice," he said. "The former countess has been kind to her husband, so kind that the Gould family had deemed it advisable to establish a trusteeship of the property to put an end to the impossible extravagances of the count."

M. Roussset then said that the count recognized himself as incapable of bringing up his children and that he, therefore, desired that they be placed in the custody of his mother. "The count, however," he said, "would take into his own hands the yearly income of $50,000 belonging to the children. This money would melt like wax before a fire; the children never would receive a cent of it."

The Princess de Sagan enjoyed the esteem and affection of her family, who were convinced that the children should remain with the mother. It is true, M. Roussset continued, that George Gould was somewhat apprehensive when he learned his sister wished to marry Prince Helie de Sagan, because he realized that De Sagan was related to the De Castellane family, which his sister had just succeeded in leaving. He gave his consent, however, when he saw that his sister's heart was set upon the marriage. The lawyer said he was convinced that the De Sagan household would be happy, but if a scandal broke out George Gould would be the first to ask that the children be removed. He concluded by begging the court not to separate the children from their mother.

Weak Little Boys

may become fine strong men.
Some of the strong men of to-day were sickly boys years ago.
Many of them received

Scott's Emulsion

at their mother's knee. This had a power in it that changed them from weak, delicate boys into strong, robust boys.

It has the same power to-day. Boys and girls who are pale and weak get food and energy out of Scott's Emulsion. It makes children grow.

CONSCIENCE STRICKEN MAN SURRENDERS HIMSELF

New York, Dec. 10.—Conscience-stricken because the police were seeking an innocent man, Robert Ackerman surrendered himself to the Brooklyn police last night, saying that it was he who had shot a man in this city on Nov. 14 last. Ackerman fled to San Francisco after the shooting, and learned that a former policeman was suspected of the crime, returned to face the charge. He was greatly relieved when told that the victim of the shooting, Frank Weber, will probably recover. Ackerman was locked up pending an investigation. He was restored to citizenship in 1906 after deserting from the United States army.

The opinion declared that the city was not liable.

SCHURMANN SUGGESTS EDUCATIONAL REFORMS

St. Louis, Dec. 10.—President Jacob Gould Schurmann, president of Cornell university, was the principal speaker at the banquet of the Cornell alumni here last night, and in his address suggested several educational reforms.

He said the educational institutions of the present day lack thoroughness in drill work. In comparison with the instruction presented 50 years ago, and that the course of study might be improved upon by providing for two years in preparatory drill work and two in special studies. He advised a more thorough course in the arts and sciences, English history and political economy for professional men in order that they may have broader views and be less fettered by technicalities.

CLUB WOMEN WORKING FOR SAFE AND SANE FOURTH

Chicago, Dec. 10.—Club women in general were urged to follow up the work of the council in passing an ordinance looking to a "safe and sane" Fourth of July by establishing boys' classes and flag associations, by Mrs. La Verne Noyes in an address before the North Chicago Hebrew Congregation Women's auxiliary yesterday.

"You can't make a boy give up fireworks and firecrackers unless you have something to offer him in their place," said Mrs. Noyes.

"He needs something to give rein to his spirits," continued the speaker, "and to this end we are going to ask the National Outdoor Games association."

tion, which holds a convention and field day every summer, to have their great celebration in Chicago next year on the Fourth of July.

"What is needed is any sort of celebration or games which will keep children happy and occupied so they will not blow out their eyes and mangle their hands and arms. We would get them together in little groups, teach them songs and games and amusements which might occupy them on the Fourth of July."

BROKEN ENGAGEMENT.

Is a Girl Justified in Keeping Presents In Such Circumstances?

New York, Dec. 10.—A case in which the betrothed will be interested is set for hearing today in the first municipal court here. The principle to be decided is whether a girl is justified in keeping presents after her fiancé has broken off the engagement. Louis Biderak, a Broadway salesman, is the plaintiff, and Miss Ray Aronoff, 19 years old, the defendant. Two diamond rings are the cause of contention. The young pair quarreled after their engagement was announced last Easter and since then Biderak has sought to recover the rings. Several young women who were to have been bridesmaids at the wedding will testify as to the girl's father, who maintains that he underwent heavy expense for a dinner at which the engagement was announced.

VALUATION OF AMERICAN BREWING BARLEYS

Chicago, Dec. 10.—Dr. Robert Wahle lectured on the subject "The Valuation of American Brewing Barleys," last night before a new organization known as the Society of Brewing Technology, which met last night in the Schiller building. Dr. Wahle is an authority on this subject and only recently returned from the international commission on barley valuation at Berlin, to which he was a delegate.

He said the art of brewing beer from barley-malt was one of the oldest recognized pursuits of man, and that the history of the brewing trade was probably chronicled more accurately and elaborately than any other branch of man's industrial activities.

"Still," said he, "the barley grain, the basic material from which this product is evolved, and without which all results achieved were simply impossible, forms a subject for discussion as to the rational basis of its valuation up to the present day."

Dr. Wahle pointed to the great influence of variety and climate on properties and qualities and to the great differences, chemically, physically, botanically, and physiologically, of the many types of barley employed in Europe and America, and the impossibility of creating a single standard of valuation for these many types.

Therefore, there could be no international system for the valuation of brewing barley, which was the main point made by Dr. Wahle at the Berlin congress.

AN EXPENSIVE APPLE.

Private Thompson, Co. C, 10th Infantry, Gets Three Months for Eating It.

Chicago, Dec. 10.—Three months' imprisonment and the loss of pay during that period, is the price which James R. Thompson, private in company C, Tenth infantry, will pay for eating an apple. The findings of the court-martial which tried the case, were approved yesterday at army headquarters.

Private Thompson's offense was committed near Dublin, Ind., while his company was on a post march to Fort Benjamin Harrison, Indiana. Members of the command had been cautioned against foraging en route, but like Adam, Thompson fell to the blandishments of a ripe red apple in a farmer's orchard.

"Throw that fruit down," Lieut. Robert G. Caldwell commanded.

Thompson grinned, took another big bite and replied: "I'm not taking orders from you."

That settled it. First came the guard-house, then the court-martial and now the three months' service at hard labor.

KILLED BY A CAR.

Mother Stood by and Saw Child Removed, Not Knowing Was Hers.

New York, Dec. 10.—Although she stood for some time in a crowd watching the police remove a body from under a car, Mrs. Lawrence Schiller, of Brooklyn, was not aware that the victim was her son until a child thrust a school book into her hands.

The book had been picked up near the car and it bore the name of Lawrence Schiller. Realizing her loss the mother fainted and had to be assisted to her home. The child killed was 8 years old, and was returning from school.

SECRET SERVICE.

Congressmen Wrought Up Over President's Remarks in Message on It.

Washington, Dec. 9.—No subject discussed by President Roosevelt in his annual message to Congress has been the subject of so general comment in both the senate and house as the recommendation concerning the secret service.

That portion in which the president refers to the amendment incorporated in the law last year, "that there should be no detail from the secret service and no transfer therefrom" contained the assertion that this amendment has been of benefit only to the criminal classes. Again the president said that the chief argument in favor of the provision was that congressmen did not themselves wish to be investigated by the secret service and he proposed a restoration of the old law with a special exception prohibiting the use of the secret service force in investigating members of Congress.

This comment by the president was characterized in strong language by a number of senators during an informal discussion of the message in executive session today.

Democratic senators declared a resolution of protest should be offered by Republican members and one Democrat intimated he would bring up the subject in case the Republicans did not. The question did not become a part of the official proceedings.
