

Dramatic and Lyric.

A Breezy Letter from New York—Sport McAllister—Death of Mrs. Barrymore—Mr. Merrill's Compositions—Latest News in Professional Circles.

New York, July 1, 1882.

From the Editor—News.

One by one the theaters have willed away their fire-baiting curtain rods, until houses now have closed their doors. Tonight the Gazette, where Hobart Hunt is running, the Opera, where Olney has been, and the Lyric, where Reed's Two has been doing good business, join the procession. The Musical, where the Tragedy of Chinatown which the wayward John Drew has been writing, has given up the ghost, and the Metropolitan, where performances have passed its fifth performance, and the National Opera House, where the Raisins has enjoyed a brief but successful run, have been cast out their warnings, and to a few nights more will the Lyric stand alone, where three tragedians are on three hours' notice, the American, where the Practical Doctor, the great racing play, is the sensation of the hour, the Cast, Cast, the Brave, where it is grand. In Wine, Hoppe is giving his audience joyous by the double attraction of Pagliacci and his other marriage, Mrs. Hooper No. 2 to Miss Emily Williams of Frankenstein fame. Perhaps you know her. Mrs. Hooper No. 2 was born in Europe only last week.

I suppose you have heard of Cavie's great success in Madame Butterfly. His voice will be filled by Mr. Sykes, a bass who was with the Feeding Master last year. This is a rumor that Bartlett Evans will receive, and it seems to me that he will decline the connection of the sprightly Camille D'Arville with the Brussels. It is understood that she is negotiating with Manager J. M. Hill who will take Aspects, being anxious to remain in New York all the year round.

The Metropolitan Lyric is continuing its tour, and McAllister for a part in their proposed production of Richard III.

Without doubt, the disappointing aftermaths of out-of-town visits have had as much to do with the widespread movement as the weather. The Orpheus Europeans who were expected to return home to visit the World's Fair, have, so far, failed in materialistic, and Montague, who has prepared for summer time, is meeting very little in consequence. But it is expected that the Metropolitan Lyric will have a fortnight's visiting the Fair; it is thought the majority of them will not return home without visiting New York, and to return this transient testimony of the theaters will respect unanimity early. A list of the openings will follow as follows:
