How-ever, the convention of today opened in the city hall at 2 p. m., revealed some lit-tile progress, (?). As soon as order was called Dr. J. M. Woodburn obtained the floor and offered a resolution proposing that they join hands with the "dis-grantied" Republicans and put an in-dependent ticket in the field, as it ap-peared that they could not find candi-dates sufficient to put up a straight Dem-ocratic ticket. By a vote of 28 to 11, the delegates to the Democratic convention passed the Woodburn resolution. They ap-pointed a county committee, consisting of a member from each precinct, whee duty it should be to name the ticket, in con-ference, with the "disgrantied" Republi-cans. After the appointment of the com-mittee the convention took a recess until Oct. 9. It was mutually understood that whatever the ticket should be, it must bear the big stamp of the "main Issue-anti-Mormonism." The discussions throughout were very heated and some personal attacks were induged in. There were some real lively species in opposition to the fusion ticket as finall determined on. W. B. Immediately after this autounde-ment inspectors were sent out to the farms of the valley, made an estimate of the beets dug and those in the ground, and reported to the company. The close down was made necessary for the reason that the Sugar com-pany had not been able to complete and perfect the factory, which commenced grinding beets before it was ready. The company found finally that it could not hardle the beets and reduce them to marketable sugar, so closed down to marketable sugar, so closed down determined to wait another year before determined to wait another year beform attempting to make sugar. This decision was not reached be-cause the farmers failed in raising the beets, for while, as is the case in every country the first year, a great many things had to be learned, yet the crops of the valley, when ready to be dug, averaged about 12 tons to the acre, and the first shipments of beets, while hidden the true condition of the beets when they should have been rebeets when they should have been reduced, averaged from the Mesa country 18 per cent succharine matter. Instead of commencing the harvesting in June (and up until the 10th of June there was (and up util the 10th of June there was hardly a rotten beet in the valley), the factory did not order the digging to commence until the 25th of July, and then was not ready to handle the beets, but allowed them to be piled up at the factory to rot, so that the first 10 days' haul rotted and no endeavor was made to run them through the factory. The reason marketable sugar could not be made after the factory did start, was that the company was compelled to use the muddy river water. Having use the muddy river water. Having failed to develop pumped water suffi-cient to run the factory, the company had to fall back on the muddy water.
