Michael Granville, known on the San Bernardino when arrived in Denver Sunday morning at 7 o'clock, was seriously and probably fatally injured by jumping from the rear of a car, running at a speed of about 25 miles an hour. He struck on his head and it is not thought that he can recover. The incident by which Granville received his injuries was of a tragic nature. It seemed to him that a collision was inevitable, and rather than be crushed to death he made a dash from the car, and his falling body was caught along the track when the train was backed for fully a mile. He was taken across the tracks in the rear of a car, and the company's station was at once notified. The accident happened on Monday night at 7 o'clock. As the passenger was about getting into the car, the front of a freight train was observed just a short distance away. The passenger's car was in the line of the freight train and was struck by the freight train. The passenger was killed.
