

LAST EDITION

Only being saved from death by the noble action of a soldier, Prince Genji of Greece. Should he finally conclude to go, the emperor would not assume active command of the troops, but would have an imperial headquarters, taking with him all the members of his military cabinet. Being on the spot, the emperor could more easily advise Genji, Kuroki and the other members of his military cabinet in the event of any question of great military moment which the emperor might desire to submit to his majesty. But, of course, the chief advantage would be the stimulus which the personal presence of the emperor would have on the officers and men.

AID FOR BELIEGERS JAPS.

Seoul, Korea, May 11, 5 p. m. (Delayed in transmission.)—Infantry reinforcements reached the beleaguered Japanese troops at Anju at 6:30 o'clock on the evening of May 10. The Japanese had fought heroically for 12 hours, the men receiving their fire until the enemy was at close range upon each attempt to storm the gate. The Japanese then retired over the mountain hills toward Yang Pyong, the provincial capital, leaving to be killed and wounded on the field and one non-commissioned officer captured. The Japanese lost 1,000 men, and six wounded, besides one telegraph operator. The Japanese troops are now in pursuit of the enemy and an engagement is momentarily expected. It is supposed that the Japanese are part of the body which crossed the headwaters of the Yalu near Chang-sheng and occupied Chingchi, not knowing of the disaster which had attended their march on the Yalu, continuing to carry out their order to harass the enemy and cut off his communications, which would now be impossible with even a much larger force.

New York, May 12.—An explanation of the explosion heard at Port Arthur which led to reports that the Russians were destroying their warships in that harbor is furnished in a World dispatch from St. Petersburg. It is to the effect that the garrison at Port Arthur is endeavoring to clear the harbor entrance of the stone laden ships sent in by the Japanese. In order to remove the obstructions divers are said to have been sent down to clear the harbor entrance of the stone laden ships sent in by the Japanese. In order to remove the obstructions divers are said to have been sent down to clear the harbor entrance of the stone laden ships sent in by the Japanese.

ST. LOUIS FAIR.

Officials Inspect the Exhibit Palaces.

St. Louis, May 12.—The officials of the world's fair today made a tour of inspection of the exhibit palaces. The party included Judge J. Francis, vice president and the members of the executive committee, the national commission and the board of lady managers, the foreign commissioners and the officers of the United States government board and the executive commissioners of states and territories. The tour was not completed until 11 o'clock in the day, when a luncheon was served at which speeches were made and the advanced state of completion of the exposition was generally remarked upon. A pile of rubbish was seen in the transportation building, today and caused considerable excitement for some time, but was extinguished with a fire hose. It is believed that the rubbish was from a cigar stub, although no smoking is permitted on the exposition grounds.

A force of laborers is at work upon the stadium. Having inclement weather, everything will be in perfect condition for the opening of the Olympic games next Saturday afternoon. Inspections have been made by the officials of the exposition, foreign representatives and other prominent officials.

COPLEY TRAIN ROBBERY.

Evidence Against George Gates as Leader Accumulates.

Redding, Cal., May 12.—According to Detective William A. Herr, who has been at work on the Copley train robbery case since an hour after the commission of the crime, the trunk found in the room of Bruce Van Dine (Geo. Gates) at Dunsmuir, which was stolen from the Copley train, contained evidence that not only clearly established George Gates' connection with the Copley case, but also evidence that just as clearly showed that George Gates was the leader of the gang which held up several street cars in Portland and Seattle last summer. The evidence found in the trunk showing Gates' connection with the Northern street car hold-ups is a pair of his shoes. They are patent leather shoes with peculiar scuffing on the uppers and heels of the shoes meet. At the time of the Portland-Seattle street car hold-ups it was remarked that this leader of the gang stood back and directed operations, that he was tall, erect and square-shouldered, a description which now recalls to the mind of the detective the man who was killed at the Copley train robbery. The evidence found in the trunk showing Gates' connection with the Northern street car hold-ups is a pair of his shoes. They are patent leather shoes with peculiar scuffing on the uppers and heels of the shoes meet. At the time of the Portland-Seattle street car hold-ups it was remarked that this leader of the gang stood back and directed operations, that he was tall, erect and square-shouldered, a description which now recalls to the mind of the detective the man who was killed at the Copley train robbery.

HAYWOOD DISCHARGED.

Was Charged With Desecrating the Flag.

Denver, May 12.—Justice William F. Hayes today discharged William D. Haywood, secretary of the Western Federation of Miners, who was charged with desecration of the flag. The charges were based on the issuance of a circular bearing a picture of the flag and headed "Is Colorado in America?"

Mrs. Powell Gets Life Sentence.

Dover, Del., May 12.—Circuit for Mrs. Mary A. Powell, who was convicted of murder in the first degree, killing Estelle Albion, today withdrew her motion for a new trial and Mrs. Powell was sentenced to imprisonment for life.

Odell Vetoes Gas Bill.

Albany, N. Y., May 12.—Gov. Odell has vetoed the bill to amend the Gas Act, a measure designed to confirm old privileges granted to the Consolidated Gas company of New York, legalizing defects in its charter and permitting the company to lay pipes under East River to Astoria, where it had purchased an immense tract of land upon which to erect all its various plants.

RUSSIANS FIRED FIRST.

London, May 12, 6:30 p. m.—The Japanese began firing on the Russian soldiers on the Korean peninsula, the Japanese fired first and the Russian immediately stopped firing and proceeded to examine it whereupon the train went on at full steam and escaped.

The Japanese foreign office's telegram also said that while there is no reason to apprehend that China intends breaking the neutrality of the Japanese coast, it has found it advisable to warn the Chinese government to observe strict neutrality.

BIG DEAL MADE IN THIS YEAR'S WOOL

Boston Firm's Trade in Over Fifty Carloads from Idaho and Wyoming.

COSCRUFF AND WOOD CLIPS.

Two Consignments Change Hands—The Price Paid is Said to be 13 1/2 Cents.

Two of the biggest clips of wool in the west have changed hands during the past few days. Both consignments have been purchased by J. Koschland & Co. of Boston, and will be shipped east this week. The bigger consignment is the famous Coscruff clip of over 1,000,000 pounds, some 35 carloads. This big deal was consummated on a basis of 13 1/2 cents. It will be moved from Ft. Steele, Wyo., east over the Union Pacific and Burlington. The second sale was consummated over the telephone from Rawlins. It consists of the J. D. Wood company clip of some 600,000 pounds, which will be shipped from Spencer, Idaho.

BABCOCK TO DENVER.

Former Salt Lake Traffic Official May Go to the Midland.

The very latest rumor on Railroad Row is one to the effect that S. H. Babcock, formerly traffic manager for the Rio Grande Western, is to succeed the late G. W. Kramer as vice president of the Colorado Midland, and, possibly, the Utah Fuel company. An effort to locate Mr. Babcock and secure a verification or denial of the story was today unsuccessful. The story is based on the fact that Mr. Babcock arrived from Denver a couple of days ago and at once gave orders for his furniture to be packed and shipped to Denver, where he intends to make his future residence.

SPIKE AND RAIL.

The block system on the Southern Pacific across the cut-off is being rapidly installed.

General Traffic Manager T. M. Schumacher of the Oregon Short Line has returned from Omaha, where he went with the Midland party.

N. B. Worthington of the Southern Pacific passed through Ogden yesterday on his private car Otego on his way to join Julius Kruttschnitt.

Conductor Wallace on the Salt Lake and Ogden run is confined to his home suffering from sickness, which suddenly attacked him on the train on Tuesday night.

PERSONALS.

Joseph Geoghegan is in Los Angeles on a business trip.

J. E. Cosgriff left last evening, for Rawlins on a business trip.

Ernest Fowler leaves today on a trip to St. Louis and the World's Fair.

S. J. Lynn and family have returned from California after a six months' absence.

John F. Forbes, a Boston investor, is registered at the Knutsford while in this state on a business trip.

Edw. J. Cragin, a prominent New Yorker, arrived yesterday, with Senator Lewis, and registered at the Knutsford.

S. H. Babcock arrived from California yesterday and is at the Knutsford. He will remove his place of residence to Denver.

Capt. E. E. Wirt of the marine corps, and wife, are guests at the Knutsford, en route to the Presidio where the captain will take station.

Bills are being opened today for the wrecking of the old fair building on the east side. The wreckage will be used for building purposes elsewhere.

Sales Agent W. S. Myers of the Utah Fuel company has returned from Denver, where he went to attend the funeral of the late Vice President Kramer of the company.

Engineer T. P. Rigney leaves this week for New Mexico, where he will do some work for the Santa Fe Copper company, returning about the first of the month.

HOOD'S PILLS

Removes the torrid liver, and cures biliousness, sick headache, indigestion, nausea, indigestion, etc. They are invaluable to prevent a cold or break up a fever. Mild, gentle, certain, they are worthy your confidence. Purely vegetable, they can be taken by children or delicate women. Price 25c at all medicine dealers or by mail of C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

HE OBJECTS TO THE HAM SHOW.

Caustic Criticism of the Principals in the Production By Salt Lakers.

AN APPEAL TO THE PUBLIC.

Takes Umbrage at Desecration of the Masterpieces of William Shakespeare by Amateurs.

Extra help has been hired by the management of the Salt Lake theater for the purpose of handling the crowds which are anticipated at the opening of the box office for the sale of tickets for the Ham Show at 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. The announcement is made that none of the members of the Press club can engage seats for friends ahead of the opening of the sale, consequently it will be a case of first come first served and the early bird will get the best seat.

No one is to be accused of bias the following letter from an alleged newspaperman who evidently is angry because his name does not appear in the cast is cheerfully reproduced:

Editor News Herald:—One who has ever entertained the most profound respect for the writing of William Shakespeare, deceased, to enter a most solemn protest against the desecration of his best works by an aggregation of incompetent and sentiment lacking amateurs, styling themselves the Press club of Salt Lake, which said desecration is being carried on Monday and Tuesday at the Salt Lake Theater. I am credibly informed, my informant being no less a person than one of the actors, that the intention of this bunch is to satirize that beautiful bit of love story and anecdote of man's bravery, Romeo and Juliet; that some male actor is to assume the part of Romeo, and all the beautiful passages attributed to the young woman created by the bard of Avon. As a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse! I'll to my wedding bed; and the remainder of the play, where the young woman created by the bard of Avon, as a matter of fact my informant states that John S. Critchlow is to assume that part. I regard this as nothing less than blasphemy. Imagine this coarse man, with a voice that repeats these lines where the love torn and disappointed Juliet says to the nurse: "Come cords, come nurse