THAW REMANDED WITHOUT BAIL

Slayer of Stanford White Passed A Sleepless Night in His Cell.

MRS. THAW NOT YET LOCATED

Prisoner Handcuffed to a Detective and Taken to Police Headquarters.

Photographed and Measured—Proceedings Were Brief—Defense, It is Said, Will be Insanity.

New York, June 26.—Harry Thaw passed a sleepless night in his cell in the tenderloin police station and was kept under constant watch lest he should attempt to harm himself. He had just settled himself on the couch in the grimy cell when a drunken prisoner was brought in. The man was half insane with drink and began yelling at the top of his voice as soon as he was locked in a cell. The door-man on watch was accustomed to such scenes and was unmoved, but Thaw was bothered. He called the door-man and asked him, "Say, carry you that roomer next me moved away? He annoys me awfully." The drunken man was removed to another section of the cell house.

SEARCH FOR MRS. THAW.

The search for Mrs. Thaw, who disappeared immediately after the shooting at the garden, was continued throughout the night. "Say, carry you that roomer next me moved away? He annoys me awfully." The drunken man was removed to another section of the cell house.

COMMITTED WITHOUT BAIL.

Upon the strength of this affidavit, Coroner Dooley directed that the prisoner be committed to the Tombs without bail.

INQUEST ON WHITE.

In remanding the prisoner to the Tombs, Coroner Dooley announced that the inquest on the homicide will be held on Thursday. It is added that this early day had been decided upon because of the expressed desire of the family for the prisoner and the prosecution to have the case taken before this month's grand jury instead of letting it go over until next month.

ASSIGNED TO CELL.

At the conclusion of the proceedings Thaw was taken through a side door to avoid the great crowd which had gathered in the corridors of the citadel. He was taken to a cell in the bridge of signs to the Tombs. There, after his pedigree had been taken, he was assigned to a cell on the second tier of the prison where all prisoners charged with homicide are confined.

TREATED AS A MURDERER.

"Yes, it is necessary, we always treat murderers," the inspector replied. Thaw was then led out of the tenderloin station handcuffed to a detective. In the party were Police Inspector Schmittberger, Capt. Higgins, Patrolman Debes, who arrested Thaw and several other policemen.

IN THE ROGUES' GALLERY.

When the party arrived at headquarters Thaw was taken to the detective where he is held in a cell on the top floor, and other criminals who had been picked up during the night. First Deputy Commissioner Rhinelandier, who knows Thaw personally, was present at the time.

PHOTOGRAPHED AND MEASURED.

When the complaint against Thaw had been recorded, the inspector directed the detective to take him up stairs. There his picture was taken and the Bertillon measurements were made. The prisoner then was taken down in a patrol wagon and hurried to Jefferson market court.

FASTENED TO A DETECTIVE.

As Thaw left headquarters he was fastened to a detective sergeant by a chain and handcuff. An immense crowd had gathered around and held the police were forced to fight their way to the waiting wagon.

THE PROCEEDINGS.

The proceedings before Magistrate Barlow, when Thaw was arraigned, were brief. Capt. Higgins, appearing as the complainant, asked that Thaw be committed to the custody of the coroner.

HE WAS HUNGRY.

Before leaving the police court building Thaw said he was hungry, that he had eaten nothing since last evening. Capt. Higgins sent a messenger to a restaurant across the street, and in a few minutes a waitress appeared bearing a tray on which were two peaches, two slices of bread, a bowl of milk and a cup of coffee. Thaw hurriedly ate one of the peaches, a slice of bread and drank the coffee, and announced himself as ready to start for the criminal court building.

AN IMMENSE CROWD.

The greatest crowd of the day was encountered when the patrol wagon with Thaw and the officers approached the criminal court building. All the sidewalks and the street were filled with curious spectators, street traffic was entirely suspended, and it was only by the combined efforts of nearly a score of policemen that a passageway was cleared for the patrol wagon. Thaw, tired and worn looking, stepped from the patrol wagon. He was confronted by a small army of photographers. Quickly covered his face with his hands and by Patrolman Debes, who brushed into the building. He was taken at once to Coroner Dooley's private office and was welcomed by the coroner with the greeting, "Sit down here, Mr. Thaw," indicating a chair near the desk.

Burr McIntosh, who had preceded the prisoner from the police court, was in waiting in the coroner's office. He conferred in secret with the prisoner for a few minutes. Lawyer Lewis Debedfeld, for whom Thaw had called immediately after his arrest, had entered the coroner's office in the meantime. He was seated at the desk with Thaw's case. Asst. Dist. Atty. Turnbull appeared as the representative of the prosecution.

PROCEEDINGS BRIEF.

The formal proceedings before the coroner were even more brief than those in the police court. Thaw was arraigned on a short affidavit sworn out by Patrolman Debes, in which the officer says he got his information from Warren Faxton, chief engineer of the Madison Square garden; Lionel Lawrence, manager of the company that was performing the play that night; Edward Convey, Harry Rubenstein, and Dr. Peebo, who examined White's body after the shooting.

PIONEER DAUGHTERS HAVE GALA DAY

Old Time Dresses, Songs and Reminiscences Features Yesterday.

NOTABLE EVENT AT CALDER'S.

Mrs. Asenath Adams Tells of Early Theatrical Days in Salt Lake.

In honor of the Utah pioneers, who did their work in a spirit unpatched in all the founding of western empires, the Daughters of the Pioneers yesterday afternoon held a celebration that was unique among Utah festivals, and which typified the distinctive spirit in which Utah was born and had its early bringing up. The formal program, carried through from 4:30 to 6:30 o'clock in the pavilion at Calder's park, was both impressive and amusing, and the entire outing was one which left a deep impression on the sons and daughters of pioneer Utah, who were there with their mothers and fathers in great numbers.

OLD FASHIONED THINGS WERE THE ORDER OF THE DAY.

Old fashioned things were the order of the day. They included old fashioned songs, old fashioned customs, tales of old time travel, stories of suffering on the plains, and the singing of the old time hymns that cheered the hardy band of pioneers as they trudged on their way to the then unknown west.

PERHAPS THE MOST IMPRESSIVE MOMENT OF THE AFTERNOON WAS DURING THE BRIEF TALK ON EARLY UTAH THEATRICALS BY MRS. ASENATH ADAMS.

Perhaps the most impressive moment of the afternoon was during the brief talk on early Utah theatricals by Mrs. Asenath Adams, who related some of the most of her address and the mother of Maude Adams. She had come from a sick bed to mingle with the people among whom she was born, and from whom she had been separated for the most of her natural life, except during fleeting visits to her old home.

OLD FOLKS ARE GUESTS OF OGDEN

Special Rio Grande Train Carries Eleven Hundred From Salt Lake.

FIRST PRESIDENCY THERE.

MUSIC, COMFORT, BEER AND REFRESHMENTS EN ROUTE AND ROYAL RECEPTION ON ARRIVAL.

Escorted to Glenwood Park Where a Feast of Fat Things Awaited Them—Weber's Old Folks.

(Special to the "News.")

Ogden, June 25.—At 7:15 this morning the vanguard of the Old Folks reached the Rio Grande depot in Salt Lake, and from that time until 8:15 when the train started they came pouring down to the depot in every kind of vehicle from a streetcar to a pony-chaise. Rupt. Elliott, of the R. G. W., with admirable foresight had the 20 cars standing on the freight track east of the depot. In this manner there was no danger of any of the 1,100 aged getting in the way of the four incoming trains which were due about that hour.

COMFORT AND CHEER.

Long before the hour of starting, C. R. Savage and the other members of the Old Folks committee had been at work making things comfortable for the guests of honor, while a dozen ladies were working overtime in the baggage car ahead cutting cakes and preparing lemonade. George Margolis, Ed. Anderson, New Haven, Conn., and member of the local "chinese" colony, John Davis, were doing their utmost to make the Old Folks fracture their ribs with hilarity.

FIRST PRESIDENCY THERE.

Supt. Elliott placed at the disposal of the first presidency his private car "Washoe," shortly after the arrival of Pres. Joseph F. Smith, and promptly on time the gaily decorated train pulled out for Ogden.

OLD FOLKS' CHOIR.

And the old folks' choir, under the leadership of Veteran Foster started on its tour of the cars singing "Should Old Acquaintance Be Forgotten," and similar songs day to the heart of the pioneer. The personnel of the choir was as follows:

W. H. Foster, leader; Edna Edwards, accompanist; Prof. Geo. Careless, violin; Tenors—H. Gardner, Theo.
