A Disgusting Affair.-The trial of Audrew Lancaster, charged with having committed a rape on the person of Eliza A. Bray, on the night of August in 5th, 1884, was held before Judge Zane this morning with closed doors. The victim of the outrage appears to be a slimple woman of about twenty-five years of age, decidedly wanting in strength of intellect. She was the only witness placed upon the stand, and it was with the greatest difficulty that she was prevailed upon to make a statement of the affair. From her testimony it appears that the defendant met her about eleven o'clock on the night named and walked ducements to allow him to gratify his fiendish desires. At last, through threats and persuasions, and with but little, if any force, he succeeded in accomplishing his object.

The evidence did not show sufficient violence to sustain the charge of rape, and Mr. Dickson moved that the case rendered a verdict of not without retiring, and defendant was discharged. Judge Zane, however, took occasion to give Lancaster a most severe repripost and severely punished. He further said that he should think the defendant would shrink from ever showing his face in decent society again. Lancaster protested, however, that he was not guilty of the charge; but his former connection with several unsayory cases in the police court entitles his assertion to little credence.
