second ward meeting house yesterday morning at 10:30 o'clock. A large con-course of friends of the deceased were in attendance to pay a tribute of res-pect to her memory. The ward choir furnished some very sweet music. El-der Charles Weich, in accordance with the prevent of States Correlation with the request of Sister Carr, fust before death claimed her, delivered the funeral sermon. He ulogized the useful, God fearing, faithful life of the deceased, and spoke very impressively on the resurrection of the just.

A few closing remarks were made by an Elder who had known the de-cased in her native land. He re-lated her kindness to the Elders and her area her kindless to the blacks and her unceasing efforts to do right. Some beautiful floral pieces were laid on the casket by sympathizing friends. A large funeral cortege followed the remains to their last resting place in the city cemetery.

Prof. W. M. Wolfe of the Brigham Young academy, returned Saturd ter eighteen months' absence with the academy South American expedition. In this trial Attorney Allison has proven himself a past-master in the art of cross-examining witnesses, as has Professor Wolfe's health has not been good all the time he has been away and he has had some rough experiences in his travels through Mexico and Central America, but he is now enjoying good health, and is well pleased with his trip, and expresses the belief that much will result from the researches by the expedition. made Professor Wolfe left the main party in Guatemala on April 15th, and since that time has explored many interesting ruins, visited several tribes of Instans, and become acquainted with their customs, language and traditions, spending most of the time on the borders of Yucatan. He has collected many valuable archaeological specimens, which are on the way to the academy and will be added to the museum, which has been greai-ly augmented by specimens sent from the expedition from time to time since their arrival in Mexico. Prof. Wolfe resumed work in his classes today.

LOGAN. INTEREST IN MAJORS CASE.

nesses-B. Y. College Notes. Special Correspondence.

Logan, Sept. 29 .- The Majors case has been a source of wide interest in Logan during the past week. The little court room in the county court house has been crowded at each session. After school each day the teachers and students have thronged about until it was impossible to come within hearing sistance. Even the rear entrance, which is supposed to be for the use of officers, witnesses and attorneys only, has been crowded, until Sheriff Rigby was compelled to make a rule against ladies pushing in and filling up the of-incer's seats. Dainty maidens have stood wedged in the crowded aisle o the court room with coal heavers and hod carriers hour after hour listening greedily to every item of evidence and every tilt between counsel. Some maudlin sentiment has been displayed in Majors' behalf by the many young women who attend the court. When the opening statement was made by Attorney McGurrin, coplous showers of tears were in evidence. A feature of the trial has been the calmiess of the prisoner. He comes in clean shaved, and his face is bleached white by long confinement. Officer Crockett, a towering giant, sits beside him to prevent any attempt at escape. Majors sits gazing at the witnesses as calmly and impassively as a statue. His eyes have not once rested on the audience. have not once rested on the audience As soon as he reaches the head of the stairway upon adjournment, handcuifed by the two officers. The jury are housed across the street

The jury are housed across the street, and take two or three walks about town for exercise, daily. The case has so far brought out many remarkable contradictions. The prosecution has presented two eye-witnesses to the killing of W. A. Brown. Both swore that just after the elder Majors fell dead, Abe Majors, the de-Majors fell dead, Abe majors, the de-fendant, turned and fired two shots at Brown, the second one killing him in-stantly; and that the defendant then jumper behind the rock near which his brother was lying. They declared that defendant had in his hand a black revolver, and that it was picked up close him after his arrest; and that two chambers in it were found empty. The defendant declared on the stand that he did not shoot at Brown; that he had the white pistol in his scabbard, and that it fell out near him while he lay behind the rock; that his brother lay behind the rock; that his block had, and had the black pistol in his hand, and that the two bullets were probably fired the night before. Mrs. Majors' identified the white pistol as the one her son Abe always owned and used. It had not been fired at the time of the tragedy. Half a dozen witnesses disagreed as to the location of Majors' dead body.

Then comes the most remarkable con-tradiction of all. Drs. Penrose and tradiction of all. Drs. Penrose and Condon, lifetime army men and sur-geans, both declared on each that it would be impossible for a builet fired from a 45-caliber army revolver, such as the Majors' boys had, to go up the hill to Brown, and do the damage that was done. Experts had testified that the builet went through a thick note book a cost or ad year, white shift two. book, a coat and vest, white shirt, suits of underclothing, clear through his body, (without touching a bone, however), and out through the five thicknesses of clothing at his back, and was never found. One witness who measured the ground, testified that the distance between Majors' body and Brown's body was 185 feet, or about 45 yards, up a steep hill, Yet, as Majors was killed by a 41-caliber bullet, which went through his clothing, entered his back and lodged in his breast, near the back and lodged in his oreast, hear the skin, the surgeons' testimony arouses a peculiar question. If it was impossi-ble for the Majors brothers to shoot to Brown and kill him, who killed Majors? Brown was the nearest officer to the fugitives.

est being eleven years. Elders B. T. Blanchard and Jas. E. Hall offered consoling remarks. A very large cortege followed the remains to the cemetery. PREVALENCE OF TYPHOID FEVER

Typhoid fever is quite prevalent at present. As each year goes by the dis-ease gains ground. It is often attri-buted to the unsanitary conditions of out water, and we all hope our city fathers will take the question of city water supply up for consideration as well as other means for strict santtary regulations, so that our growing city may be freed from this malignant diseases.

CROWDED SCHOOLS.

The public schools are running a full blast. Two extra teachers have had to be employed this year, and gwing to an overflow the trustees are forced to rent a building for school purposes. Principal L. E. Eggertsen is very much pleased over the attend-ance, and says he hopes by next year to see at least one new school building erected.

STRICKEN WITH PARALYSIS.

The many friends of Hon. Joseph Stanford, chairman of the board of county commissioners, will be pained to learn that he was stricken with par-alysis Saturday at his home on Quincy avenue. Mr. Stanford was shaving when he was stricken, he called for his wife who quickly responded, just in time to save him from falling to the floor. He was hastily laid in bed, and Dr. Baker was summoned. The par-alysis took effect on Mr. Stanford's left side when he first felt the stroke but gradually passed from the left to the right side, causing the entire right side to become useless. Dr. Baker quickly responded to the call and has been doing all that medical skill can do fo Mr. Stanford's recovery. Late yester day afternoon the paralysis seemed to leave the right side slowly and this morning he could move his feet a little, but it will take some time for him to entirely recover from the severe sho Mr. Stanford was to have delivered th opening address at the State Fair eek, but will be unable to do so. It is thought by his family and friends that

Good Market for Fruit - Horses Poisoned-Schools Well Attended .

Special Correspondence.

Kanosh, Willard County, Sept, 27 .--Kanosh joined in the universal sympathy by holding memorial services for the death of President McKinley.

Our lady citizens are getting through with the work of fruit bottling and drying, and the mines have afforded a market which has brought many dollars to the town. HORSES POISONED.

Mr. William O. Lee, one of our respected citizens, met with bad luch on his last trip out as a fruit peddler, between Milford and Frisco he camped for the night, about midnight his horses took sick and suddenly died. Mr. Lee can form no other theory than that the horses were poisoned, but how they obtained it eating hay out of the back mountains already here, and in various ning order, having a full attendance.
