EDWARD E. JONES, 19th Ward.

SALT LAKE CITY, June 13th, 1872. lator Deseret News:

Sir.—I arrived from Sanpete yesterday and was both surprised and mortified to two a friend ask me if I had signed a cername, or a similar one, appeared in nection with the said document.

Now, Mr. Editor, if that name was put down for mine, I wish to say that I never put it there and never gave any one else authority to do it for me. Had I been a profane man, I should have been tempted to do some tall swearing since learning that I had been so vilely misrepresented. I am a peaceful man, but it might be a little warm for the parties who thus used my name, should I discover them.

rangement, and I never like to be classed any way whatever with traitors of any scription, especially that kind who say as day they know a thing to be true and the part they know the same to be false. I look upon other signers, members of certain cliques and rings, in much the same light, but my contempt for traitors of "the list war" is something approaching the unlimited. As for the whole "hotch poten" who got up that petition and smuggies and larged to it the names of children, lead man and of living people who knew sorting of the existence of the petition, I selver wast to be found in such disreputation of the company in any of their unworthy demes, and never will of my own accord.

IN THEM. - Now that the trees are in the foliage bears down the manufactured that the street shade trees until in places it is difficult to walk on the side-walks in the dark without running against those low hanging branches. A facetrap of this kind, particularly from a thorny tree, is not very pleasant, but may prove primarly dangerous. It is easier to have an eye scratched out by such contact than is have the eye put in again unburt. If residents will be good enough to trim up the lower part of their street shade trees, some painful and probably distressing socidents may be prevented, and the pedistrian public will be correspondingly crateful, as most people have respect for their own faces.
