

DELANEY'S BUNCH OF PUGILISTS

Champion Maker of Champions
Undoubtedly Leads Them All.

HIS THREE FIRST FIGHTERS.

Consideration of Their Work Would Lead Ordinary Individuals to Believe Billy Is It.

Champions may come and go along the sports highway, but there is one who still stays, and that is one who still stays. The man who has been in the ring since 1882, the year in which Billy Delaney must put his bonnet to any of them when it comes to grinding out champion pugs. The announcement flashed that he will again lead Jim Jeffries into the purple limelight recalls the fact that he has been the champion of them all since 1882, the year in which Jim Corbett sent John L. into the shadows, writes Grantland Rea.

Through twelve out of the fourteen years that have elapsed since that date Delaney's camp has been the holder of the championship spoils. From 1896 to 1898 found Billy Brady, top of the heap, but Delaney came into his own again and no one has displaced him since. And with Jeffries still on deck backed up by Al Kaufmann coming along, it's better than short odds that no one will annex the Californian's crown for several campaigns of pugilic glory to come.

FOUND CORBETT FIRST.

Delaney was the man who tumbled Sullivan from the top-nod Corbett. When a old Roman was getting from spot to spot in the early '90s, mauling his way out of all comers, there didn't seem to be a chance for anyone else to draw a look-in.

Delaney then discovered Corbett. He was wise enough to foresee that the era of brute strength had about reached its finish and that in the dawn of higher progress the epoch of skill and science was about due.

He saw Corbett work and knew at once that he had found the man of the future. Without any undue waste of time he started in to develop his find, and at the proper moment went after Sullivan's scalp.

The old gladiator was willing, but he refused to show without a side bet. Delaney didn't happen to have the goods, and so was forced to give way to another backer after delivering the charge.

What Corbett did to Sullivan is now fringed history.

BIG JEFF NEXT.

Corbett plugged along at the top until Mr. Fitzsimmons arrived and put a dent in his career at Carson City. Delaney then started hustling again. He looked around and picked up Jim Jeffries. His choice was regarded as a joke, for in those days Jeff tipped the beam at 240, and what he didn't know about out-fighting would fill more volumes than Jafiz ever wrote.

Corbett had trimmed Sullivan. Fitz had crumpled Corbett, and yet here was a man who looked to be a dub compared to John L. and who had been plugging his bag for Corbett in his training for Fitz.

But Delaney only smiled and held his peace. He took Jeffries east and was greeted with the hoarse hoot all down the line. Nothing doing but a bout with Bob Armstrong that failed to bring Jeff any great glory.

And then the famous "breaking loose" occurred. Sharkey first, then Corbett and then Fitzsimmons were paddled across the pugilic Styx by Corbett and Fitz tried to spring a return, only to be paddled back again.

Delaney had delivered for the second time.

KAUFMANN LAST ONE.

Now he is bringing Jeff from his retirement, but in the meanwhile he figures that in Al Kaufmann he has the big fellow's successor. Kaufmann has been the world on fire yet, but remember that he is only 21. Here is the wizard's dope on his latest sharp recruit.

"Of course, Jeffries will go down in history as the great of them all, for after beating everybody in sight he had to retire because the great sporting public realized that there wasn't another man in the world who had any chance to go up against him. Jeff is the only undefeated champion in the world, and he is likely to hold his title longer than any of us will live to keep track of the game."

"But in Al Kaufmann I honestly believe I have the best of them all. He is only a kid, but he's got a power and a man's frame and a property until he's past 30. I believe Kaufmann is the coming champion of the world, and I believe that once he gets his full development he will be invincible. I believe that Kaufmann can beat today any of them who claim the championship, although I don't believe that he yet beats to class with Jeffries. But in a year or two he will be all that Jeffries has been, or I miss my guess by a long way."
