HOW THE MONEY WENT.

HOW THE MONEY WENT. It will be remembered that just before the contest, the fight managers announc-ed that they had made a side bet of $200 and had agreed to change the articles of agreement to read, "winner take all." The writer was given positive assurance by both McClintic and Murphy that the agreement had been made, so confident were they of victory, and there is no could as to the truth of their statements. After the contest, however, Welch came in for a small share of the money. The total receipts were a little less than $1,-90. The victor, Battling, Nelson, got 19835 and Weich was given $295. In addi-tion to this, Manager Kelley paid for a sector's services and for a carriage. He also furnished return tickets and sleepers for the principals and their managers. All the expenses incident to pulling off the accessive contest were shouldered by he expenses incident to pulling off t accessful contest were shouldered Mr. Kelley; that is, with the exception the by board bills and personal expenses of the fighters. The club got 40 per cent of the receipts, and out of that paid for railroad fare to and from 'Frisco and Chicago, for eliminatics, referee, house rent, license, use, carpenter work and lumber, ad-ruing and huadreds of incidental ems. It is believed if the men were rertising Rems. It is believed in the were matched again, they would draw a much larger house. Manager Kelley has not de-cled yet just what he will do. Committee Waits on Officials and Demands Abatement of Nuisance.

A dozen women of all sizes, ages and descriptions, swooped down upon the city officials at the joint building yesterday afternoon and lodged a vigorous complaint against the unsanitary and impassable condition of Post street, where they reside. The women first went to the health office and made a complaint against the stench arising from the water which has stood on the street for so long that it has become a menace to the health of the community. They then went to the street supervisor and asked that some immediate such a condition that the people can get to and from their homes wihout the use of boats.

The delegation then went to see the superintendent of waterworks, but his deputy informed them that the department had nothing to do with the case. They then took the elevator and called upon the mayor, who, after hearing their story, promised that immediate action should be taken in the matter. Fearing that they should neglect to fully impress the importance of the matter upon the proper officials, they made a final call on the city engineer and explained the matter to him. He drew up a petition in relation to the condi-tion of the street to be presented to the city council and all the women signed
